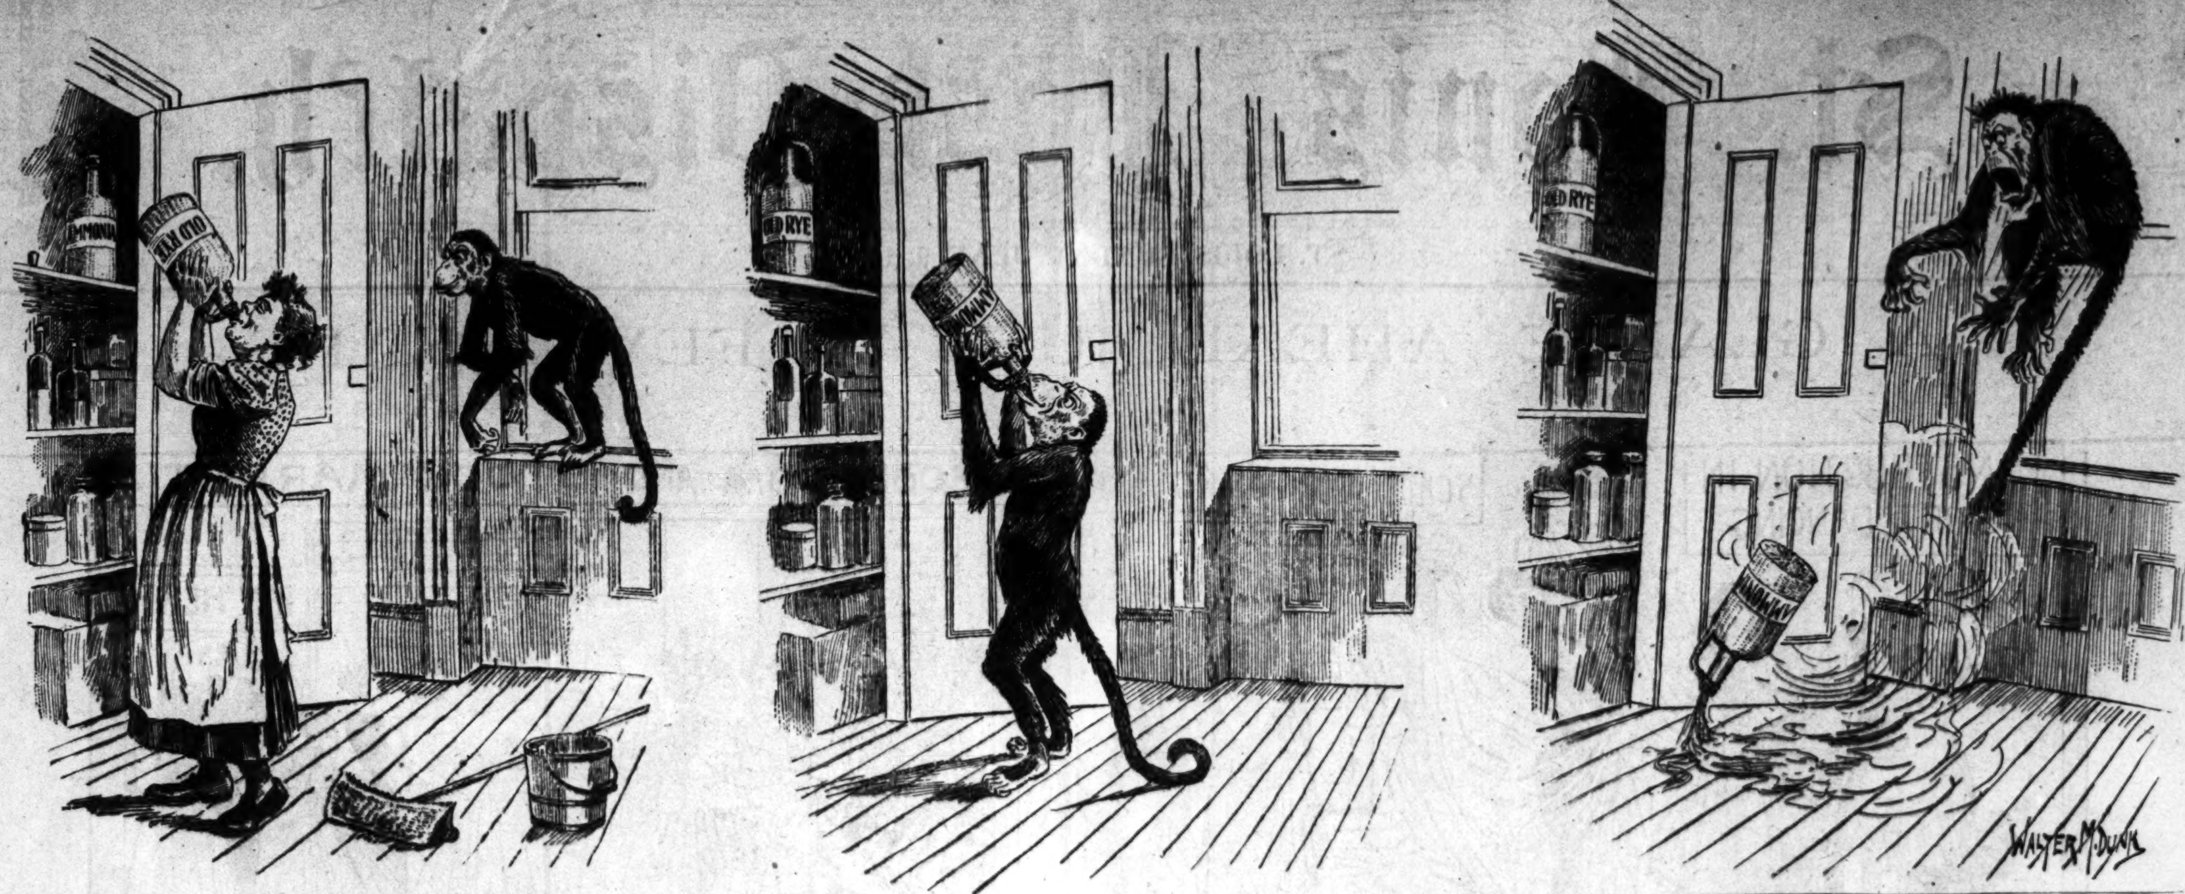
A COMEDY IN THREE ACTS AND A SPASM.



Going Him One Better.

It was on the uplands of Turkestan; around their rude camp-fire the savage Tartars had gathered to greet the strangers who had come among them.

"Why"—

The short, thickset traveller with the diamond stud pointed his finger indicatively —"is it that you seem to regard that tall, gloomy man of sinister aspect with deferential and fearsome admiration?"

The Chief of the Nomad Afghans gazed over his shoulder apprehensively.

"It is," he whispered, "because"—

He repressed a shudder.

—"it is well known he sold himself to the devil!"

The stranger white man laughed contemptuously.

"Shucks!" he said. "When I was in the New York Legislature in '95 Platt owned me, body and soul!"

Crossing over to the dreaded tribesman the straight-out Republican statesman from up the State patted him patronizingly on the back.

An Exception to the Old Saw.

"They say"—

The German gentleman held the object out at arm's length.

"—that circumstances alter cases, but" —he smiled softly to himself.

"—no circumstance in the world can alter this sweitzer-kase." Seizing a knife, he hurriedly cut into the limburger and devoured it ere the neighbors could complain to the Board of Health.

MODEST BUT POSTED.

Cabby—Hansom, gent? Hansom?

Jay Green (in from the woods)—I may be handsome, young feller, but dead onto all the games of you city sharpers, too.

SHE HAD.

May—Have you ever had your fortune told?

Daisy—Oh, yes, indeed.

May—By a gypsy?

Daisy—No, by Bradstreet. They have told it to every heiress-hunting Count in Christendom.

EVASIVE.

Lawyer—Madame, what is your age?

Witness—That is a question.

Lawyer—What is a question?

Witness—What you asked.

A FACT IMPRESSED.

City Boarder (sentimentally)—Do you believe that marriage is a failure?

Delaware Girl—I dunno. But the peach crop surely be!

HAPPY THOUGHT.

Saturated Sam—I say, Weary, you ought ter git yer hair cut. People 'll laugh at yer.

Weary Ways—Not much. I give it to 'em dat I'm a college man in hard luck and me tangled locks substantiate der story, see?

SUICIDE ON THE QUIET.

Mr. Hardluck—I would kill myself, but there is so much publicity given to suicide that all my relatives would be disgraced.

Mr. Coldblood—Get run over by a cable car and the police will keep it quiet.

SOMETHING BETTER.

Mrs. Soakleigh (sternly)—Will you kindly explain to me, sir, how you can come home in such a condition?

Mr. Soakleigh—It ish n't neshary. One demonshtration 'sh worth dozen exshpl'nationsh. I'm here.

The Poet's Love.

Is love a panacea for grief?
  A remedy for woe?
For wretchedness, a sure relief?
  The poets tell us so!
Is love a charm that lights the eye
  And tints the smile with bliss?
Subduing every fretful cry?
  The poets tell us this!
Is love, that love of which we've read,
  The love we daily see?
Or are all the poets all unwed,
  "Heart whole and fancy free?"
Alas! The secret is right here
  Of all their gushing "stuff;"
The poets are "old maids," I fear,
  Who write thus, for a "bluff!"

His Joke.

The clatter of knives and forks went steadily on.

But it was not until the landlady retired to the kitchen to unlock the safe and count the strawberries that the man with the V-shaped nose spoke.

"Our evening meals remind me"—

He glanced disparagingly at the monometallic platter containing the butter.

"Of a vaudeville entertainment, because"—

The man with the yellow whiskers seemed fearful of impending evil, while the man with the drooping chin smiled expectantly.

"The 'olio' is the principal feature."

For obvious reasons the smiles were shortlived and the subject was quickly changed. The landlady had returned.

GETTING TOO ROUGH.

First Pugilist—I'm goin' to quit this biz!

Second Pugilist—Why so? You've made big money.

First Pugilist—Yes; but there's a lot of toughs gettin' in ther perfession. Why last night one of 'em I was sparring with made a brutal attack on me and made my nose bleed. That's twice, and I'm goin' to quit.

That Dear Little Bicycle irl.

My heart is all mangled and attered and torn,
  I wish I could fall off the earth—
I really wish I had never been born,
  Or that I had died at my birth.
No one can imagine the torture I feel,
  My brain ever seems in a whirl,
And all on account of a maid on a wheel,
  A dear little bicycle girl.

REFRAIN.

She's winsome and pretty, her bloomers are natty,
  My brain she has set in a whirl,
A bright little jewel, yet awfully cruel,
  That dear little bicycle girl.

She sits on her wheel in bewildering pose,
  A picture of beauty and grace,
Her figure is perfect from derby to toes,
  A goddess would envy her face.
There's love in the light of her beautiful eyes,
  Her teeth have the tint of the pearl—
Oh, she is an angel in bloomer disguise,
  That dear little bicycle girl.

That she would accept me I'd never a doubt,
  And softly wheeled up to her side,
And started the old recitation about
  A love which I never could hide.
Her feet pressed the pedals, we quickened our pace,
  The wheels flew with maddening whirl,
She left me behind in the desperate race,
  That cruel young bicycle girl.

It Worked.

"I beg your pardon, madam, but I haven't asked you to buy any of my tablecloths as yet," said the peddler in tones of humbleness as the housewife paused to catch her breath.

"Then what did you stop here for, you"—

"Why, I was constrained by a sense of respect which I bear for all humanity to stop and offer my wares to you. If you will hear me just a moment I shall make my unenviable position clear to you. You know the lady over by the creek—the one in the white house with the green shutters yonder?"

"Of course I know her, the old gossipmonger"—

"Now just hold on till I tell you how the thing stands."

"Has she been lying to you about me?"

"Well, I dare say that she said nothing about you that any honest-minded person would believe. It was simply"—

"What did she say? Tell me what she said. Oh, I'd like to"—

"Well, she simply said that you didn't use tablecloths, and she wanted to bet me a week's board that I couldn't sell you one."

"What's that? Is that what she said? She said I didn't use them, eh? Oh, the hussy!"

"Now, it's not that I care anything about it," explained the peddler as he opened his pack, "yet I know decent and well-bred people when I see them, and I was determined (although it has thrown me somewhat out of my way) to see for myself."

The housewife gritted her teeth in silence and took her purse from her pocket.

"Now these are $5 a pair," continued the peddler in kindly tones. "Or you may have the entire twenty pairs (all that I have left) for $75."

As he passed empty handed out of the garden gate a moment later he saw over his shoulder the form of a woman standing on the porch. She was mute and livid and her eyes were cast at the house with the green shutters.

E DISCUSSES WIDOWERS.

Knew One Who Proposed to Seven Widows in Rapid Succession.

Copyright, 1896, by Edgar W. Nye.)

following letter comes from San Cal., to the Record-Union of Francisco, in answer to a brief nal signed by a widow who wished orspone:"

"San Diego, Cal.

r Union Dear Sir I see in the Sacnto Daily Record Union March 20th idow 36 years Wish to corspone a Wadower i am 53 years old and le of taken care of a Laday of the cine adres

"JOSEPH SHETTLERAE;

"San Diego, Cal.

her rite to me and tell F thing in the first latter no flurt ned to aply I mean bines J S"

The note is given here again in order to furnish the widest possible publicity to Mr. Shettlerae's sentiments.

In fancy one may see Mr. Shettlerae, of San Diego, pacing up and down his porch and impatiently stroking his ecru whiskers, meantime looking up the road for his third son by his second "womern," for the lad has gone to the postoffice, and the man who means business and who shrinks from a "flurt" is looking for a letter.

Instead of packing his lemon crop or shipping it to the San Francisco Lemon Aid Society Mr. Shettlerae's great big Holstein breast is beating for some one who desires to "corspone." One can hear the harsh rasping of his overalls as they interfere in passing and repassing each other in his hasty strides. Out across the long vista of gray ground and cactus bloom his ruby eyes, with sulphur-colored brows and real camel's hair eyewinkers, search the horizon for his son.

Oh, will not some one of entirely and diametrically opposite sex, who means "bines," "corspone" with him? Let her tell everything in the first letter. It would save time and postage. Joseph does not care for the past. He doesn't care hardly at all. It is the golden present that he banks on, not the Christmas present s far away.

I h ondered why the poet and the novelist should part the earnest lovers so youthful. Why not give the carroty widower a show in song and fiction—widower, 53 years old, 16 hands high!

I knew a widower once of that kind who locked up his shop one day and before teatime had proposed to seven widows, besides stopping an hour to bait his horse by the roadside.

I know this because part of the widows were relatives of mine and they met at our house to talk it over and send delegates to the general convention. They decided to go unpledged.

He was a self-made man, so far as his teeth were concerned, and drew a small pension on account of a slight hernia of the dura mater.

(There will be no risk in reading the above aloud by the fireside.)

Many is the time I have seen him take out his teeth and rub the rafters of his mouth with arnica, for the plate was made for a much larger man, and when he talked with these teeth in place little children ran screaming to their parents.

In my opinion the poem of passion and the romance of delirious rot has seen its best days unless the widower, with the padlock whiskers warranted not to crack, and the tortoise-shell neck, and the meteorological Adam's apple that goes down when there's going to be a storm and rises in clear weather, is given the centre of the stage.

A youth consumed with love wears tight boots and smokes himself to death, but you take a well-seasoned widower who means "bines" and, in the words of my talented friend, Richard Malcolm Johnston, sharp's the word and quick's the motion. He has no time to "flurt."

But let us pass on.

Last week I hurriedly jumped on the train to go through Virginia and an audience or two at the same time. I sat down hurriedly in the car and, putting on my tourist's checkered hat, which prevents curious people from ascertaining which way I am going, began to rehearse a commencement address which I had prepared for the June work among the colleges.

I had gotten well into the address and was just fitting a couple of gestures to it when I was aroused out of the car by a colored brakeman, and he was none too polite about it either.

I asked what the matter was and all that, for the passengers were looking at me with the same degree of amazement that the Rev. Lyman Abbott would create at a cannibal function.

The brakeman only handed me my little Dolly Varden valise and pointed up at the sign:

NO WHITE TRASH ALLOWED IN THIS YER KYAR!

And some of my best relatives fought four years to emancipate that race!

I was not disturbing any one. I was just attending to my own business. Yet I had to get out of there and go back into a Pullman, where the air was not pure at all.

Many of our folks were abolitionists and helped to break the shackles of these same people and yet I had to go out of this nice car back into the sleeping car, where the air seemed fixed, and George M. Pullman was to blame for it.

Race prejudice is an awful thing. The only race prejudice I ever had was at Jerome Park one time when I tried to pick a winner in six lessons without a master.

Race prejudice is a thing I hate. I have never missed an opportunity to elevate the colored race whenever I could, and yet I was ordered out of their car with contumely and a lot more such things as that which a colored man always has at his tongue's end, but which an uncolored man does not understand.

Henry M. Stanley once told me that his colo boy, Saale, one day in Africa chang s with him deftly and the gre asked him why he did it. possible Saale explained th to take advantage of the odor of the white race the African.

white man to go? If way, Ireland, which is now practically deserted, is the only home I see for an oppressed race. Who will help me to form a colony for Ireland?

The only way I see to get men for being fired out of the colored car is to tell of an incident which occurred to a neighbor of mine.

In November he butchered a shote for the purpose of making a Roman holiday in Rome, Ga., and left the carcass out over night to cool. The pig had a cob in its mouth and its thorax was pried open by means of a fat pine stick. The animal hung head down with a hickory gambrel or two-foot stick in each footlock to keep his hind legs well apart, and thus the moonlight could touch up the kidney and cool spare ribs and ceiling of this cold day.

A colossal somnambulist came that way, lifted the stiffened form to his shoulder, ran his head up between the two hind legs so that the hickory gambrel would rest against his windpipe and started off with the pork draped down his back.

In the morning the owner missed his pig, and strolling along to the worm fence he found the somnambulist choked to death on one side of the fence, with the pig on the other. In climbing the fence the pig had got over first and hooked the hickory stick across the windpipe of the somnambulist. Together they were found in the cold embrace of death.

THEY WERE BURIED IN ONE GRAVE.

This is a true story and leads us to inquire whether or not a direct tax in Hooper's Creek Township and blockade whiskey in Charleston will give us relief.

For my own part I must admit that the colored people in this neighborhood are a very well behaved set of people and much more agreeable to get along with than many of their pampered brethren in the Northern States.

This is a delightful country in every way, and a few choice lots adjoining my place may still be had by applying on the premises. Good neighbors, and only eight days from Europe. Fine timber. Early climate. One lung here is ample for breathing purposes.

The following news item I take from the Myrtle cor. Rutherfordton Democrat:

"Mr. Zeb Freeman was picking his ear the other day and got a pin out of it that is supposed to have been in his ear for about seven years, as he has been partially deaf for that length of time, which the pin is supposed to have caused."

Probably a coupling-pin, but the paper does not state. Otherwise I do not see anything startling about it.

Before closing this letter I must crave space to make a personal remark.

in South Africa containing a paragraph

Last week I received a paper printed in South Africa containing a paragraph marked with blue pencil. It claimed to be a careful reading of my handwriting and a fac-simile of my signature, which I now remember to have sent in answer to a request for an autograph from Africa, and was printed with comments which were uncomplimentary. The editor says in reading the signature that the writer should not be trusted as paying teller of a bank, and that the writing would indicate a man who may congratulate himself on every day of freedom from incarceration which he may enjoy.

This editor was unmercifully scored by me sixteen years ago through the columns of my own paper (now owned by Sheriff Boswell, of Wyoming), and it has taken him all this time to write a scathing reply. He is of English descent.

I called him the South African penal colony, I remember. It mortified him so that up to this moment I had the impression that the old catapult was dead.

If he does not let me alone some day I will go down there and reproach him. For over eighteen years he has been trying to hurt me among my Congo readers and cut down my circulation among the Zambezi people.

Unless he keeps my name out of his old paper I will be one of six picked men to go down there and anticipate justice.

Murder Most Foul.

(From Judge.)

It was evident that a foul crime had been committed, and Old Sleuth, the Harveyized steel-plate detective, had been called to the scene immediately upon the discovery. He at once set about, or rather slunk about, looking for clues.

Blood! blood everywhere! A new axe, with a bloody blade, large and well defined footsteps in the snow, and signs of a scuffle. A ghastly head, distorted with agony, lay upon the frozen ground, but there was no body.

This in itself was suspicious. It seemed for a moment to puzzle Old Sleuth himself.

Finally he expectorated softly, first removing his false beard, lest he might soil its silken lustre, and whispered hoarsely:

"This is not the work of an amateur." After adding another hue unto the rainbow of evidence by again expectorating he hissed, "This looks to me like Deacon Ketchum's work. Mind you, I don't say it is Deacon Ketchum's work, for it may be Parson Johnson's work; but it looks to me like Deacon Ketchum's work."

"That's jest like his cheek," cried Squire Hennery, tearing large bunches of tawny whiskers from his face. "Not only steal the last chicken I had in the coop, but butcher him on my new chopping-block with my new axe."

◆

A Crisis.

(From Judge.)

Under the electric lights the whole room was seen to be in a state of wild disorder. Articles of vertu were strewn over the carpet, mingled with many toilet accessories. Bureau drawers and cupboards were pulled open and their contents hung out. The furniture was dragged out of place and upset, and rugs lay in crumpled heaps.

In the midst of this terrible disarray two human beings confronted each other; one a woman, the other a mocking, jeering fiend whom the law called her husband. Her eyes had a strained, hunted look; her nervous hands pressed hard on her feverish brow. She strove for speech, but it was denied her, while the man still laughed his cruel, triumphant laugh.

At last, with a stifled groan, she fell swooning on the floor, irrevocably disarranging her stiff shirt-front.

She was a new woman, she had lost her collar-button, and she did not know how to swear.

Couldn't Place Him.

(From Judge.)

"Who am dis Napoleon dey're all talkin' 'bout?" said Deacon Ketchum at the supper table the other evening as he bit his piece of mince pie in two and handed half to the dog.

"W'y, didn' yo' nebber heah ob Napoleon?" asked his son with an air of superiority.

"'Pears toe me I has, now I kum toe t'ink 'bout it," replied the deacon. "He robbed er bank, didn' he?"

"No, no, fader; yo're 'way off."

"Den it wuz er railroad he bustid." cried the deacon convincingly.

"Wrong agin, dad; wrong agin!" chuckled the superior youth.

"He ain't de billiard player, am he!" queried the elder with a noticeable lack of confidence in himself.

"No."

"Nor de fellah dat eats thirty quails in thirty days?"

"Keep on guessin', ole man."

"Den he muster bin de man dat discobered Grober Cleveland."

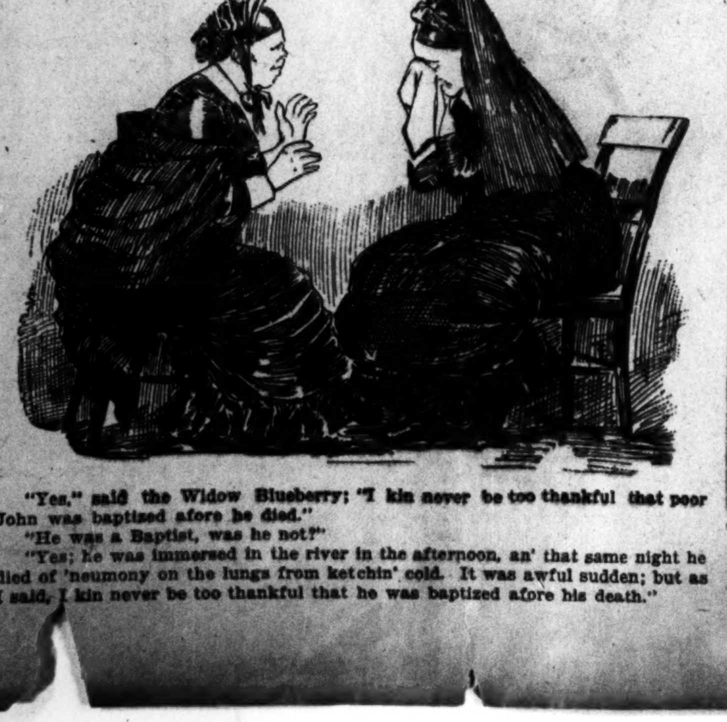
"No, fader; he wuz er fighter."

"Oh, sho! am dat all? Wa-al, dere's so much trash in de ring nowerdays I kain't keep track ob 'em."

And as the diplomatic scion of degenerate ancestors wished to borrow a dime about then he thought it policy to let it go at that.

A THANKFUL HEART.

(Copyright, 1895, by Keppler & Schwarzmann, Inc.)



"Yes," said the Widow Blueberry; "I kin never be too thankful that poor John was baptized afore he died."

"He was a Baptist, was he not?"

"Yes; he was immersed in the river in the afternoon, an' that same night he died of 'neumony on the lungs from ketchin' cold. It was awful sudden; but as I said, I kin never be too thankful that he was baptized afore his death."

HE WAS THE OTHER MAN.

So His New Friend's Advice Was Wasted on the Stranger.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

I was going over to Hoboken the other day when one of the passengers on the ferry-boat begged a light from my cigar. He was one of the greenest and most innocent-looking men I ever saw, and his speech seemed to give him away for a New England farmer. As he evidently wanted to be friendly, I chatted with him for a few minutes and then asked:

"Did you meet with any adventures while stopping in New York?"

"No, nuthin' to brag of," he replied.

"Didn't lose your wallet?"

"No—wallet's all right."

"Didn't change no $10 bills for strangers?"

"Not a change."

"And I hope you didn't let a green-goods man make you a victim?"

The old man winked at me and chuckled by way of reply.

"Then you did fall in with some of the profession?" I persisted.

"Wall, rayther!" he quaintly replied.

"And you didn't lose your money?"

"Not as I knows on!"

"But did you beat the game?"

He winked and chuckled some more, and then putting his mouth to my ear he whispered:

"Don't give it away, but I'm no John Henry from Varmount."

"No? Then who are you?"

"Old Green Goods himself; going over to Hoboken to meet a victim from Canada!"

The Latest Victim.

(From Truth.)

The car is going at a terrific rate of speed. The bell clangs out wildly, carriages and trucks turn helter-skelter from the track, and now and then one is tossed aside like a small boy from the horns of an angry bull. The passengers look wildly about, faces grow pale and strong men tremble in their seats—especially when the car is playing shuttlecock with an extra heavily loaded truck. An old lady is the only self-possessed individual in the car. She looks around inquiringly to find the reason for the terror-stricken countenances about her. After every heavy bump she calmly slides off the fat gentleman next her, upon whose shoulder the force of the collision has forced her, and quietly arranges her dress. Folding her hands over her old-fashioned shopping-bag, she awaits, as a matter of course, her next ascension up the side of the corpulent gentleman. Soon the confusion turns to a panic, women shriek and faint, and one man desperately tries to force himself through a window.

"Massy me!" exclaims the old lady, "be they mad! Guess I'll git out. Stop here," she calls to the conductor.

He quickly comes up to her, saying quietly, "Sit still, madam; we can't stop here."

"Why not?" she replies. "I want ter git off."

"The cable's got the grip, madam, impossible!"

"Good laws!" she ejaculates, "ef that ain't the most wonderful disease I ever see. There ain't a thing it don't take holt of."

His Peroration.

(From the Indianapolis Journal.)

"And now, brethren and sisters," said Rev. Mr. Wilgus at the close of his sermon on fads, "we have had so violent attacks of the Trilby fad and the Napoleon fad, that I have hopes before I die of yet seeing a Bible fad started in this congregation."

And with a sigh the good man sat down, while the choir rendered the latest adaptation from Wagner.

At Last.

(From Puck.)

The stout party with the eyeglasses gazed with rapture at the rolling, dark-blue waves.

"At last," he said, "the dream of my life is realized! I have the glories of the mighty deep before my eyes, the moisture of the salt breeze for the first time on my cheek!"

Here he wept.

The careless loungers of the sandy shore, recognizing the celebrated writer of sea stories, respected his emotion, and stood silent, nor jarred upon his joy with their idle babble.

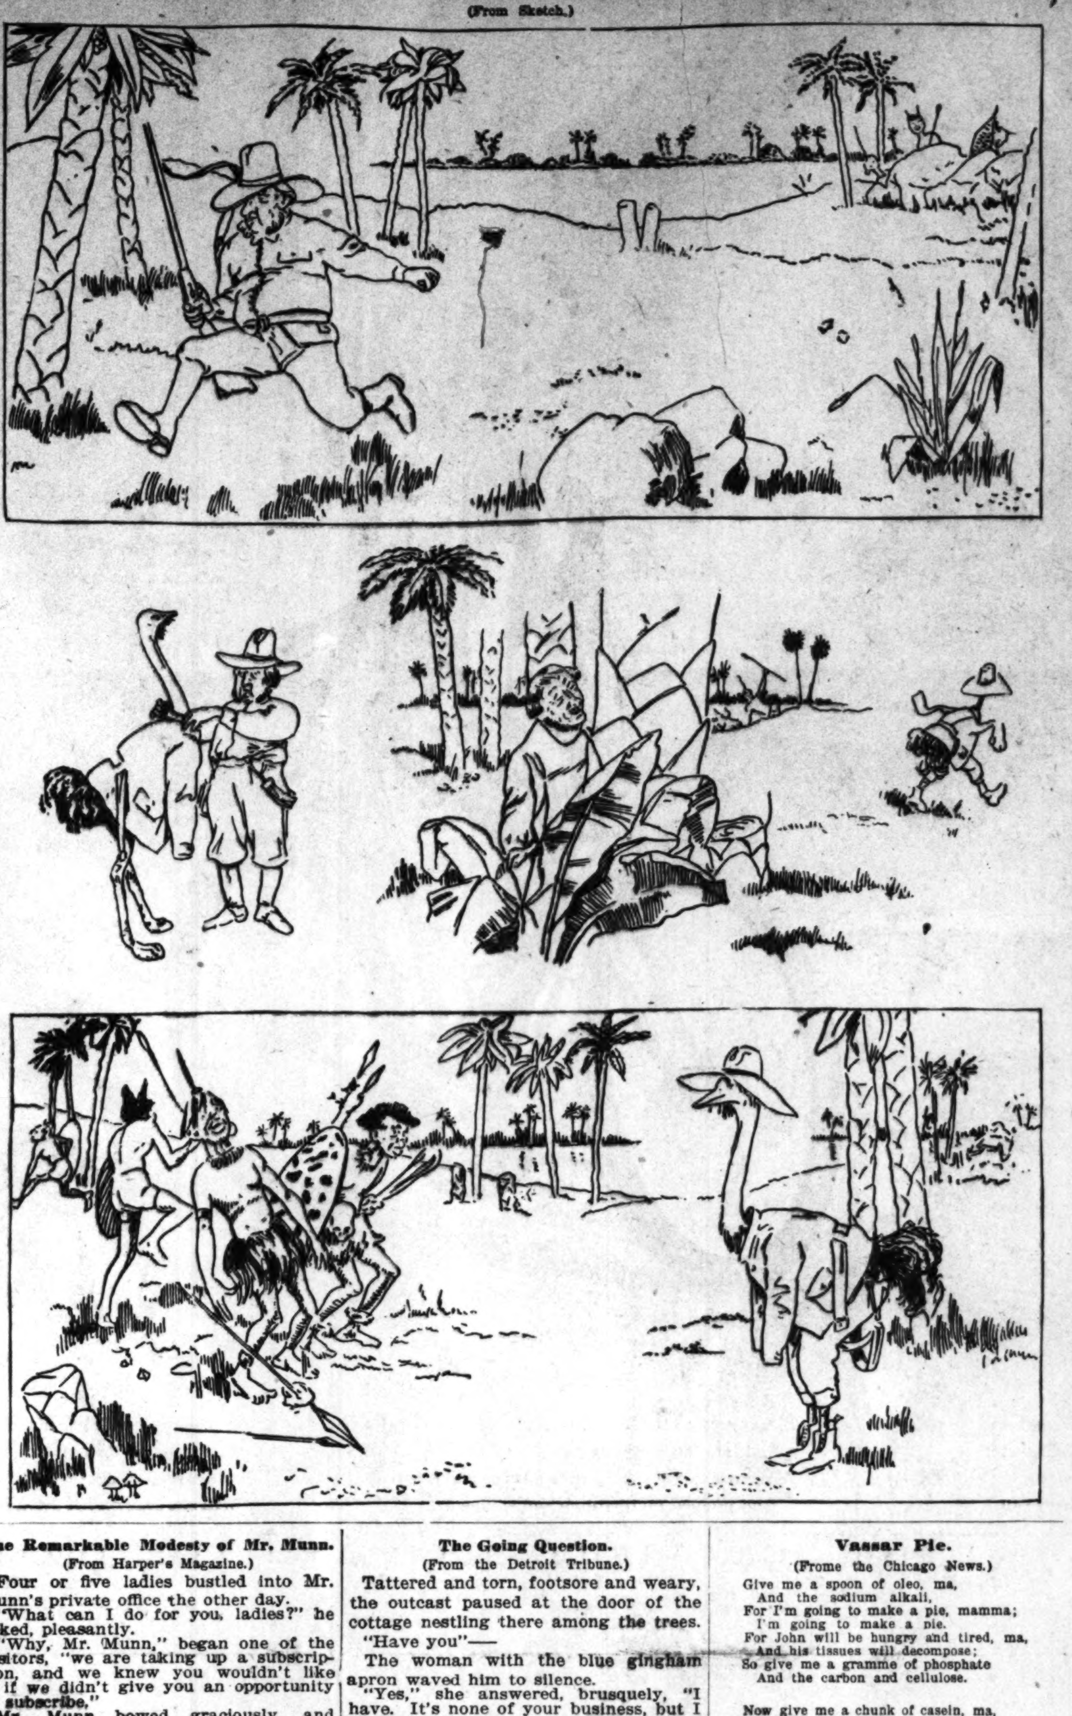
THE STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM.

(From Sketch.)



The Remarkable Modesty of Mr. Munn.

(From Harper's Magazine.)

Four or five ladies bustled into Mr. Munn's private office the other day.

"What can I do for you, ladies?" he asked, pleasantly.

"Why, Mr. Munn," began one of the visitors, "we are taking up a subscription, and we knew you wouldn't like it if we didn't give you an opportunity to subscribe."

Mr. Munn bowed graciously, and asked: "And the object? Of course it is a worthy one, or you would not be interested in it."

"Yes, sir," replied the spokeswoman, "we think it is a very worthy object. It is to build a home for aged and indigent widows."

"Excellent! excellent! I shall take pleasure in making you out a check."

"Oh, how lovely of you, Mr. Munn," exclaimed the spokeswoman when she received the bit of paper and read the amount—$1,000. "Oh, we didn't expect to get that much from you. We are ever so much obliged."

"So good of him," and similar exclamations were heard as the check was passed around for the admiration of the party.

"But, Mr. Munn," said the lady who handled the check last, "you haven't signed it."

"That is because I do not wish my benefactions known to the world," said Mr. Munn, modestly. "I wish to give the check anonymously." And he bowed the ladies out with great dignity.

The Going Question.

(From the Detroit Tribune.)

Tattered and torn, footsore and weary, the outcast paused at the door of the cottage nestling there among the trees.

"Have you"——

The woman with the blue gingham apron waved him to silence.

"Yes," she answered, brusquely, "I have. It's none of your business, but I don't mind saying that I'm sceptical about the hypnotism part, but her feet must have been just lovely."

After she had slammed the door the pilgrim turned with a sigh and went his way.

And This Also.

Fair Young Husband—Oh, dear! Oh, ouch!

Fond Wife—Alfred, how many times must I tell you to not to try to drive nails? That's the one thing a man can never learn to do. Let me see your finger.

Vassar Pie.

(Frome the Chicago News.)

Give me a spoon of oleo, ma,
And the sodium alkali,
For I'm going to make a pie, mamma;
I'm going to make a pie.
For John will be hungry and tired, ma,
And his tissues will decompose;
So give me a gramme of phosphate
And the carbon and cellulose.

Now give me a chunk of casein, ma,
To shorten the thermic fat;
And hand me the oxygen bottle, ma,
And look at the thermostat;
And if the electric oven's cold
Just turn it on half an ohm,
For I want to have supper ready
As soon as John comes home.

Now pass me the neutral dope, mamma,
And rotate the mixing machine;
But give me the sterilized water first
And the oleomargarine;
And the phosphate too; for now, I think,
The new typewriter's quit,
And John will need more phosphate food
To help his brain a bit.

The Squire.

(From Puck.)

He's gone; the little village store
Seems drear without him there;
The stove is cold, they've swept the floor
And put aside his chair.

For spring has come, the leafy grove
Shows winter drear is done;
The chronic loafer needs no stove;
He's basking in the sun.

But then, in summer's torrid days
The store keeps cool and dim;
He'll come back to his wonted ways
And place long held by him.

There once again he'll arbitrate
A nation's destinies,
And nonchalantly confiscate
The crackers and the cheese.

Higher Up.

(From Judge.)

Dame Rumor tells among the belles
A new decree of fashion;
The bonnet tall, in spite of all
Mankind, shall be more lofty.

Big sleeves, as well, promise to swell
To mountainous proportions,
Obstructing that not hid by hat.
So much for legislation!

One chance is left for man bereft,
Outwitted, duped and sadder;
Each coupon should be understood
To call for a step-ladder.

De Trop.

(From Life.)

Between the dreamy waltzes—
In the intervening calm,
They sat on the veranda,
Beneath a spreading palm;
And he whispered love in rapture,
"Alone, at last, are we!"
And she murmured, "Yes, it's lovely,
But it's horrid when there's three."

"Aha!" laughed little Cupid,
As he hurled a final dart,
Then gathered up his arrows
And made ready to depart.
While a shadow crossed their dreaming,
A cloud rose in their sky—
The summer night grew colder,
And each sadly wondered why,

Nor guessed at all the reason;
But the little love god knew,
And scoffed at human wisdom,
As the fickle sprite will do.
"Alas! poor foolish mortals,
Perhaps you've never heard
That three's delightful company
If Cupid is the third."

SAVED.

The Escape Was a Narrow One and He Appreciated His Luck.

(From Harper's Bazar.)

"Then you can never hope to love me!"

He had been pacing the floor nervously, but as he uttered these words he turned and faced the object of his remarks.

"Mr. Clinton," replied the beautiful girl he addressed, "much as I regret to pain you, I fear the demands upon my time are so great as to preclude the possibility of devoting enough of my attention to the subject which you have mentioned. As President of the New Woman's Advancement Club, as editor of the Bloomer, with the prospect of soon going on the lecture platform, together with my new book, 'Brain Without Sex,' now in course of preparation, I fear that it would be a hopeless task for me to take any further engagements.

"Do not misunderstand me. I do not wish to relegate the trivial affairs of life to mere oblivion, and I believe most thoroughly in recreation as a means of sustaining us in our life work.

"At rare intervals, when I am perhaps overcome by the arduous duties of my life work, I might condescend, as I have occasionally in the past, to give an odd moment now and then to the subject of which you speak. We all have our moments of relaxation, brief as they must be in my case, and I cannot lay too much stress on the value of some light form of amusement as a means of recuperation.

"In this sense I might occasionally descend to your level, and share your feelings, but it would be too much to expect this from me as a constant thing. Perhaps at some future time I might have more leisure, but I am afraid that I could never really love you in the sense that you use the term. Such a thing I have outgrown long ago."

* * * * * * * *

One hour later, in the little hall room of his boarding-house, not many miles from the scene where this story opens, a young man sat with clasped hands and an expression of radiant satisfaction on his face; and then, as he mechanically turned the picture of the woman he had loved towards the wall, he murmured gratefully to himself: "What a narrow escape! Suppose I had caught her in a moment of relaxation, and she had accepted me!"

COULD SNAP SHOT THE MULE.

But the Old Man Didn't Want His Phiz Shot at.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

An hour before noon I overtook a young man with a camera who was making snap shots by the wayside. A few minutes later we met a mountaineer on a mule with a sack of corn behind him, and after salutations had been exchanged the artist said he would like to take his picture.

"Is that thing fur takin' pictures?"

"Yes—takes a regular photograph."

"Would it look like me?"

"Of course."

"And the mewl?"

"Yes."

"Then I'll hev to disappint ye. Thar was a feller up yere with a squintin' masheen like that and he met my brother Bill. He sot Bill on a rock and squinted at him, and jogged along. When he got down to Knoxville he fixed the pictur' up and was showin't around, when a feller says to him:

"'Whar did ye meet this yere critter?'

"'Up above Cumberland Gap.'

"'And mought his fust name be Bill?'

"'I reckon.'

"'And his last name Scott?'

"'The same.'

"That's about all they said, but in the co'se of three days a lot of revenue officers cum along and gobbled on to Bill, and he's in the Albany prison doin' time yit. They dun reckoned he was in Texas 'till they saw his pictur'."

"But as the revenue officers don't want you, that removes the objection," explained the artist.

"It 'pears to, but it don't, do it," replied the old man, as he looked up and down the road. "You take my pictur'. You go down to Clinton. You show it around. Purty soon a feller cums along and says:

"'Durn my hide but that looks like old Jeb Scott, up in the hills!'

"'Yes, it's the old cuss hisself.'

"'Whar'd ye meet him?'

"'Over on the Clinch River.'

"'The dear old critter! How peart he's lookin' on that old mewl o' his! I'd gin a dollar to shake hands with him!'

"Wall," continued the old man, "in about three days I'd be roostin' in jail and hev only myself to blame for it, while them revenue fellows would be jest tickled to death."

"But I thought they didn't want you!" protested the artist.

"No, I reckon they don't, but they would as soon as they saw the pictur'. Some of 'em would recognize the innercent ole critter who locked seven of 'em up in a stable while the boys were totin' a moonshine still out of a ravine and over the mountains, and as I hain't much of a hand to talk, I'm afeared I couldn't explain how I happened to fall asleep and leave 'em thar 'till they cut thar' way out through the roof. You can squint at the ole mewl and the bag of co'n all day if it will obleege ye, but don't pull trigger 'till ole Jeb Scott gits down and hides behind a log.

Tracked to Their Lair.

(From Puck.)

But a thin partition now separated Sleuth, the detective, from the robbers' den.

Evidently they had no fear of being overheard, for their every word rang loudly as they boasted of their nefarious exploits.

"That job at the Astorbilt mansion?"—the detective never missed a word—"Say, that was a pudding! Four hours' work and cleared a cool three thousand on it!" Peals of laughter followed this, the hoarse "haw! haw! of the master thief ringing high above them all. The rest was lost in the sound of heavy hammering.

And then the detective, waving away the bay rum, asked the barber if his customers didn't kick at being shaved next to a plumber's shop.

A Picture.

(From Judge.)

The hollyhocks bloomed by the garden wall,
The bees swung by with an idle drone;
The roses clambered about the porch
And over the meadows the daisies shone.

The air was filled with the scent of flowers
And the fragrant breath of the lowing kine;
A maiden stood by a wicket gate
Embowered by the sprays of a framing vine.

A bird note trilled through the sunny air;
A rustic swain came up the road,
With his broad straw hat and his homely blouse,
A huge ox-team and a heavy load.

But what did she care for his flattering glance,
Or the buzzing bees or the cows' sweet breath,
Or the clustering vine with its scented flowers?
She's a city girl who is bored to death.

Lonely.

(From Puck.)

"I send you, dear," (he wrote) "to-day
Two tickets to the matinee.
I can't attend myself, you know,
I'm busy with my work, and so
Just keep for me the empty place
And let your own sweet fancy trace
The outline of my form, my dear,
As though I were with you, not here—
And then, as o'er my desk I bend
This afternoon, a joy will lend
Itself unto these figures grim.
In place I'll see your figure trim
And though we are apart, 'tis true,
Yet I'll be at the play with you."

She read, then seized a pen in hand
And wrote: "Dear George, I cannot stand
The matinee alone. Come, pray,
Or ever after stay away."

The moral of this tale, alack!
Is this: The sender's name was Jack.

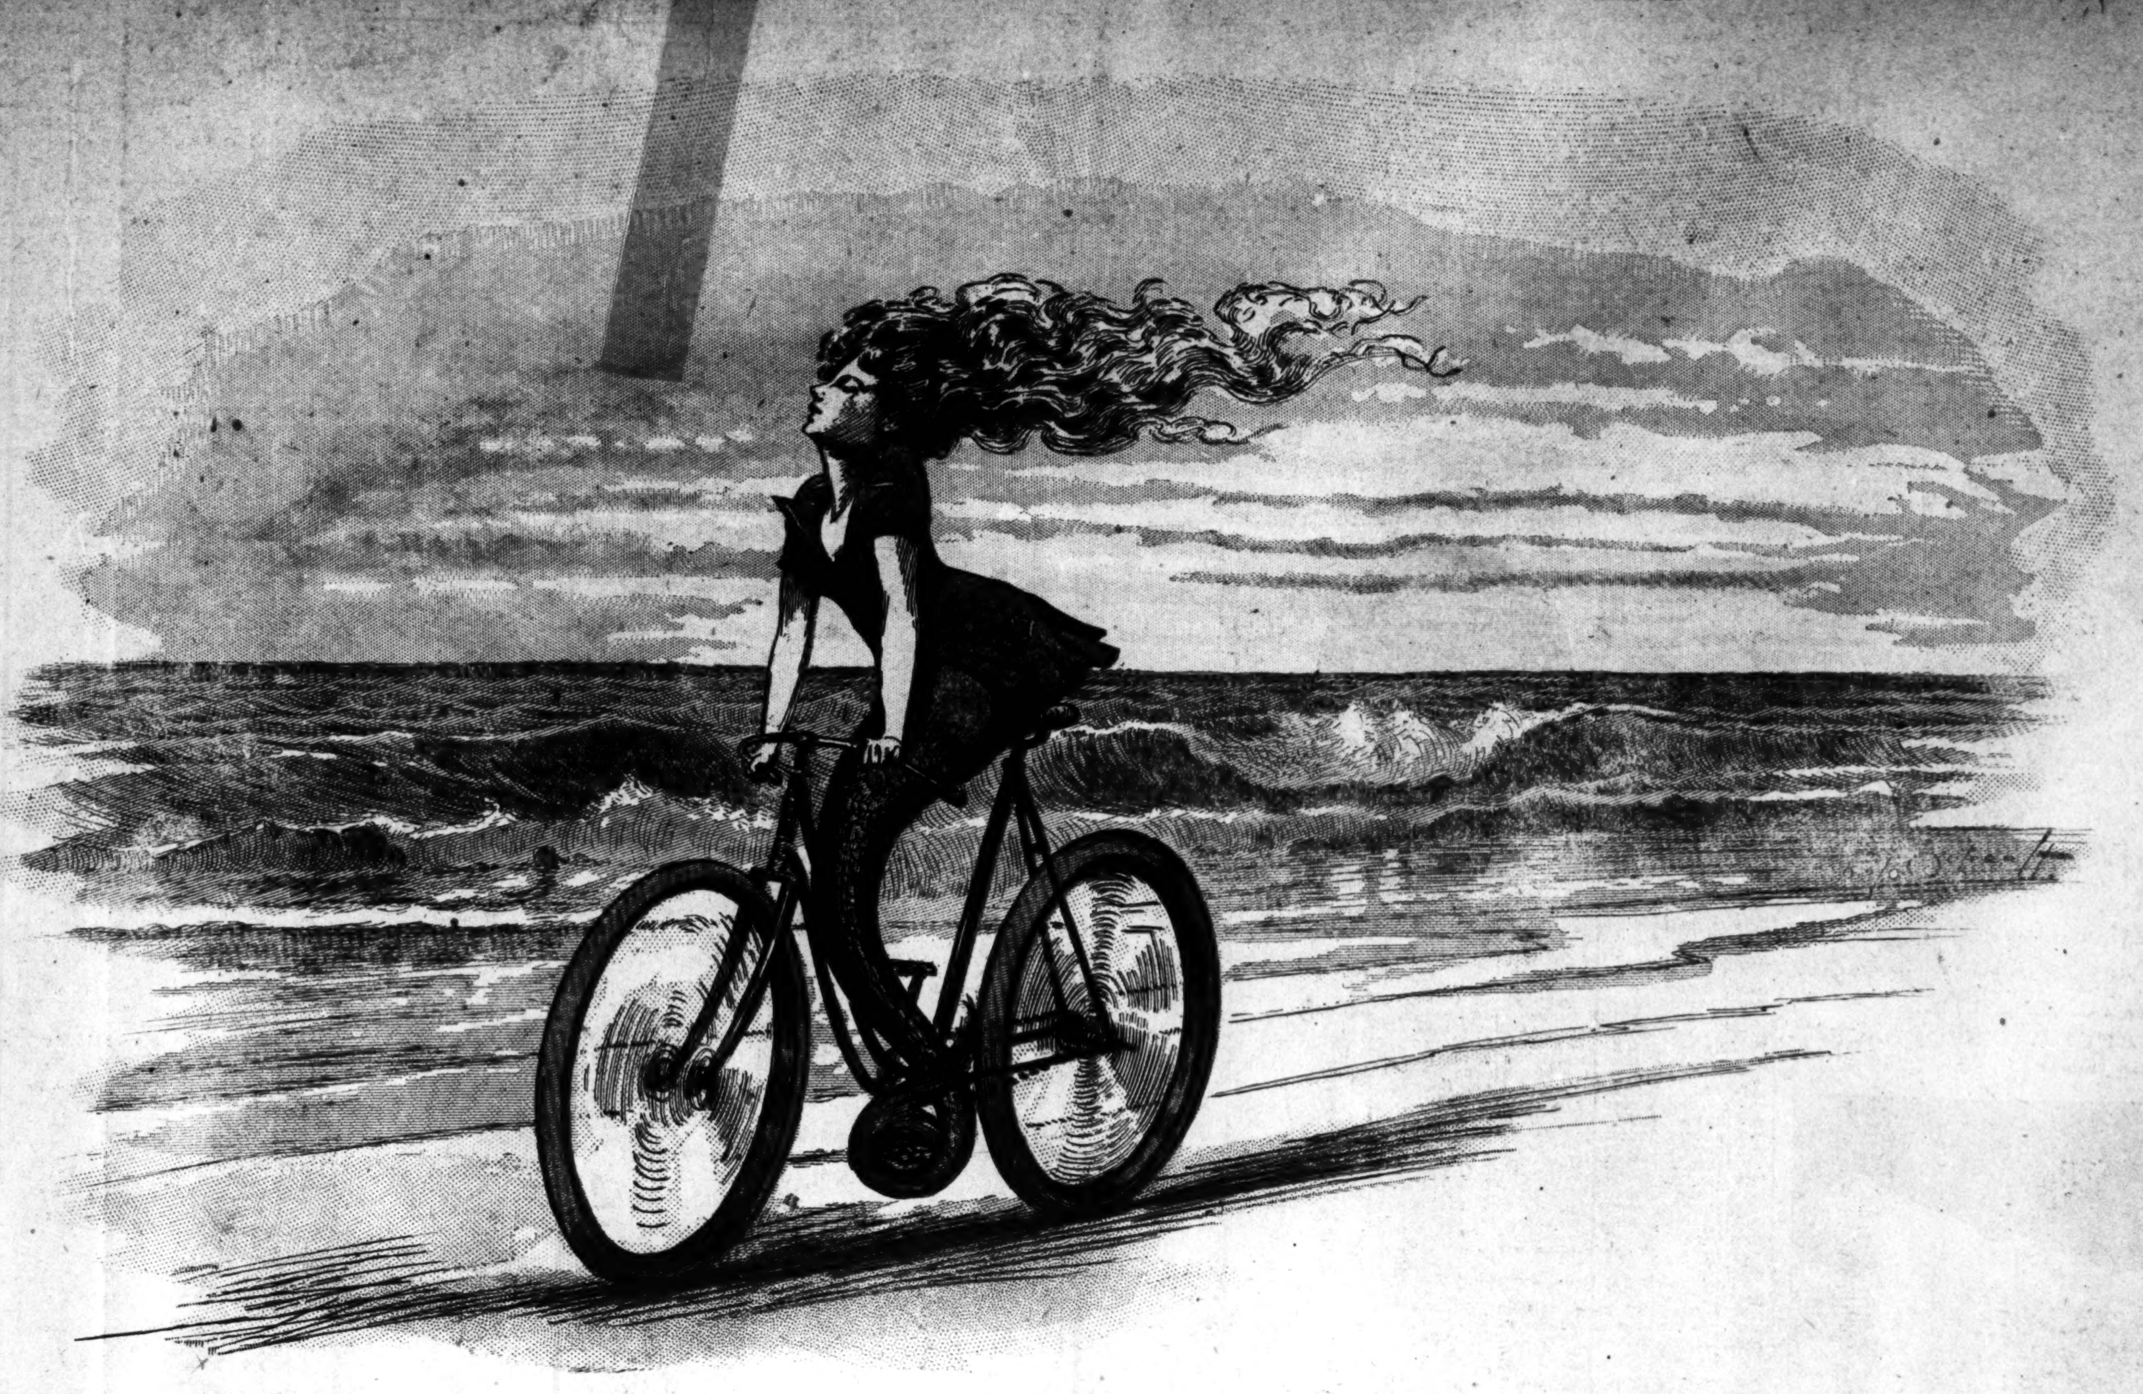
THE BLOOMERLESS MERMAID—A TAIL OF THE SEA.



'Twas a quiet spot on the bright seashore,
Where the glad waves dance in the sun,
That a bicycle maid her bicycle laid,
And plunged in the surf for some fun.

But as soon as she left her bicycle there
And into the ocean dipped,
A Mermaid dashed out, with a laugh and a shout,
Who jumped on the thing and skipped.

Now the maid with her bicycle clothes all wet
Still waits on the sand for her wheel;
But she waits there in vain, for never again
Will she gaze on her steed of steel,

For the mermaid loves the sport full well,
And she rides on the sand every day.
She's no bloomers to wear—she don't need a pair;
She isn't constructed that way.

——"have some more soup?"

With that spirit of cautiousness that is fostered and grows rapidly in a boarding-house atmosphere he replied evasively:

"Um, er—that is, ah, what kind of meat have you to-day, Mrs. Skraggs?"

For a moment the landlady assumed a thoughtful expression. But that was only a bluff. Presently she answered sententiously:

"Chicken."

Readily recalling many former experiences with bony necks and meatless wings, the boarder with the V-shaped nose hastily passed his plate for more soup.

The Great Panacea.

"Glitters is not gold; not"——

Drawing himself to his full height, his eyes emitting lurid beams of light, he fairly thundered forth the words,

"Not by a damsite."

The Senator from the far West then proceeded to prove that the free coinage of silver was the only remedy on earth for pestilence, famine, beef trusts and Trilbyism.

Come with thy smiling earth and gentle sky

Come with thy fleecy clouds, thy blooming hills

Shake forth the roses from your sunlit hair
(Fetch me my ulster, hanging over there).
O gentle spring, thou season of delight,

Thy purling brooks are music to my ear

IMMORALITY OF THE BICYCLE.

Boston's Rescue League Would Like to Suppress It.

YOUNG GIRLS IN DANGER.

A Remarkable Down Eastern Arraignment of Women Who Ride the Wheel.

BOSTON, June 8.—The Woman's Rescue League has adopted resolutions declaring that the bicycle woman and the coming "manish woman" are productive of much harm and no real good to the industrial and self-supporting women who create 80 per cent of the wealth in all the light manufacturing industries in this country. These women are entitled to political recognition by our lawmakers because they help create the wealth of the nation, while the "sporting woman," the "manish woman" and the "bicycle woman" bring disgrace on the true woman. The league condems bicycle riding by young girls and women for these reasons:

"Thirty per cent of the 'fast girls' that have come to the Rescue League for aid were bicycle riders at one time. It is resolved that, since the closing up of the houses of ill-repute in Boston the sporting girls are taking to bicycle riding because they can better ply their vocation on account of the opportunities given as cyclists."

An appeal is made to the prominent clergy of the United States for the suppression of bicycle riding by young girls because of the tendency to encourage immorality. The league further condemns the coming "manish woman" as a creature entirely useless and an unnecessary evil in this country, which should not be tolerated or encouraged.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—Among the 100 clerks discharged from the Pension Bureau to-day in a reduction of the force was a grand-daughter of Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star Spangled Banner." From her salary she supported her mother, who is 80 years old and blind.

TWO BULLETS IN HER BREAST

Eva Washington's Fate for Loving Rosie McNeil's Lover.

When two women love one man there is generally trouble. When both women are colored the hospital gets one and the police the other, sometimes. At an early hour this morning Eva Washington was brought to the City Hospital from her home, 1018 North Twelfth street, with two gaping bullet wounds in her left breast. She had been shot by Rosie McNeil. Eva is 20 years old and will probably die. Both girls are colored and lived in a very bad neighborhood. The shooting occurred at 1:30 o'clock and was the result of a quarrel over a common lover named Harris. The police are looking for Rosie.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Horace K. Allis, ex-President of the First National Bank of Little Rock, Ark., who was convicted of embezzling its funds and sentenced to five years' imprisonment, arrived in Brooklyn yesterday with other prisoners who will serve out their sentence in Kings County Penitentiary.

GRIM WANT IN OKLAHOMA.

Committee in Kansas City Soliciting Aid for Sufferers.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8.—The Rev. P. Shane and Judge E. B. T. B. Nash of Grant County, Oklahoma, are in the city as a committee sent out by the people of Grant County to solicit aid for the destitute and hungry. Testimonials from all the county officers, from Thomas J. Lowe, Territorial Secretary, from Gov. E. N. Morrill of Kansas and from the Mayors of the two Kansas Citys attest that they are qualified to speak. They declare that the condition among the settlers of Grant County is one of desperate want and the situation is such that only instant aid will prevent actual starvation among many who are trying to hold the claims secured in the Cherokee Strip opening in 1893. Three successive crops have been total failures, and not one bushel of wheat, barley or oats will be threshed in Prairie township. The prospect in other townships is no better. The destitution is so widespread that the county government can furnish no assistance, and the territorial government has no money for such purposes.

The settlers want provisions, flour, seed, food, clothing—anything in fact that will cover nakedness and fight off hunger. Many would leave but they have not the means, and work cannot be found. When the assessor made the assessment for Prairie township he found $162 in cash among the 600 or 700 people. The tax for the township was about $1,200. One man wanted to go away. He owed $4 taxes. He had a horse, a mule, a buggy and harness. All were sold, but because of the destitution prevailing they didn't sell for enough money to pay the $4 taxes and the costs.

The stories the two messengers tell of the destitution are affecting in the extreme. The Rev. Mr. Shane, who draws a pension of $14 a month, tells this story:

"For the last three months four families have been existing on my pension money. It would do in ordinary circumstances for the bare wants of my immediate family, but with four families you can imagine what it meant. Last Monday I drew $42 for my last quarter. I paid the grocery bill, which had accumulated during the quarter, and then had $1.75. Just before leaving for this trip I asked for credit for a sack of flour, but was refused it. Then we had to face immediate want. It had been customary for the merchants to credit those who had pensions, for they were sure of getting the money. But with credit denied, the last resource was cut off. My son-in-law and his wife started away in their wagon Tuesday without a cent and without provisions. They said they might as well beg and starve on the road as to stay there and starve. I have not heard from them since."

The Kansas City Live Stock Exchange has appropriated $50 and a movement has been started in the city to send food to the sufferers.

TWO SLAIN IN BATTLE.

Result of the Miller-McElroy Feud in Oklahoma.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

GUTHRIE, Okla., June 8.—News reached here to-day of a desperate battle between the Miller and McElroy factions in the northwestern part of the Creek Reservation, in which Dr. Bland and George McElroy, leaders on the McElroy side, were both killed and Jim Miller badly wounded. There has been trouble between these factions for half a dozen years, and eight or ten men have been killed during that time, Bruce Miller having been assassinated in an Ingalls saloon but two weeks ago.

SCHNAUBELT FOUND.

The Haymarket Bomb-Thrower Stabbed and Mangled in Honduras.

TEGUCIGALPA, HONDURAS, June 8.—News was received here last Saturday that an American had arrived at Pinalejo Villa, in the province of Santa Barbara, having been brought there from Chamalacon River, where he had been found in a dangerously wounded condition, his head battered in and three knife thrusts, none of which are necessarily fatal, except from the exposure.

The patrol which found him say he was entirely naked, having been robbed of all his clothes. The correspondent made the trip on horseback, and found the man in a serious condition. A close examination showed he was the man who passed as Rindakoff here a few weeks ago and admitted then that he is the Chicago anarchist, Schnaubelt.

NELLIE HARRISON IS NOW A BRIDE.

She Eloped to Alton With Earl Toler of Kansas City.

HAD LOVED A LONG TIME.

The Affair Was Kept a Secret From All Their Friends, But Now Everybody Will Know It.

Pretty Nellie Harrison, the bright and winsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Harrison, 4282 Cook avenue, will be known to her friends by that name no more. Wednesday afternoon she eloped with Mr. Earl Toler of Kansas City.

This announcement will cause a ripple in West End society, where the charming been kept so quiet that not even the most intimate friends of the bride and groom have as yet the slightest inkling that they are man and wife.

Wednesday afternoon they went out for a stroll. They went straight to the Union Station by a preconcerted arrangement and boarded a train for Alton. From there they went to Edwardsville, a few miles distant, where they secured a marriage license and an hour later the ceremony was performed by a minister, who was let into the secret.

A friend at Edwardsville witnessed the tying of the nuptial knot and all parties agreed to hold inviolate the trust that had been reposed in them. That a friend of the bride-elect materially assisted them in securing the license and keeping their secret was tacitly admitted by both of the happy pair to a Post-Dispatch reporter who called at the home of the Harrisons last night.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Toler and his bonnie bride took the train for her home, where they arrived shortly after 7 o'clock, apparently just returned from their lovers' stroll. Dinner had been kept waiting, and Mrs. Harrison had begun to grow uneasy at their non-appearance. But the sound of happy voices on the stoop and the merry laughter of her daughter as they began to ascend the stairs, brought sweet contentment to the fond mother's heart.

They entered the dining-room, Mr. Toler was cordially invited to become one of the little family party, and everybody seemed as happy as could be. The conversation was even livelier than usual, but before long the maternal instinct detected a strange, unusual restraint in her daughter's manner, a degree of mirth and merriment that to the mother's quick eye seemed unnatural. She watched her daughter and caught occasional knowing glances that were exchanged between the lovers.

After awhile she spoke of it, and soon the story was out. Miss Harrison confessed that she was a bride, that Mr. Toler would have to plead guilty to the soft impeachment of having married her that afternoon. Of course, there were tears, but they were not tears of grief. Mr. Toler stood gazing at the carpet, with his hands thrust down into his trousers' pockets, and when his young bride turned her fair face up to her mother's little globules had gathered in either corner of her big, soft gray eyes, and a look that pleaded for forgiveness came into her earnest, expressive countenance.

It was one of those sweet home pictures that no artist can paint. As soon as Mrs. Harrison recovered from her surprise she bestowed her blessing upon her children, and then they told her how it all happened.

They hadn't intended getting married for a long time yet, till—well, they didn't know just when. Mr. Toler came down here from Kansas City a few days ago to spend a week with his old chum, G. H. Marine of 2743 Russell avenue, and called on his fiancee nearly every afternoon and evening. They had been engaged for three or four months, but the parents of both parties objected to their getting married on the ground that they were too young, but gave their consent to the engagement with the tacit understanding that the ceremony would be delayed for some time.

Mr. Toler has been studying dentistry with Dr. Letord at the Kansas City Dental College and will not be graduated until next spring. His parents desired that the wedding be postponed until after his graduation.

They believed, however, that they could be married and keep the wedding a secret until they were ready to publicly announce it. The trip to Edwardsville was then arranged, and it was agreed that after the wedding Mr. Toler would return home and leave his bride at home with her parents until they could announce the marriage.

When a Post-Dispatch reporter called at the Harrison home Mrs. Harrison was surprised to learn that her daughter's marriage had reached the ears of the newspaper men. It had been kept a secret from all save the members of the bride's family, not even the groom's intimate friend being apprised of it. She called Mr. Toler and little by little the story was drawn from him.

The bride is Miss Nellie Harrison, daughter of Mr. J. D. Harrison, a retired business man. She is a vivacious blonde, with large, gray eyes set wide apart, wavy chestnut hair and fair complexion. She is slender and graceful and an accomplished young lady. She is only 20. Now that the marriage has been made public she will probably accompany her husband to Kansas City, where they will make their home.

W. A. Rule, Cashier of the Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, is her brother-in-law and it was while visiting Mr. Rule last winter that Miss Harrison first met Earl Toler. Since then she has made several visits to the Rule home. She was there last winter and left Kansas City only about a month ago. During the last visit Mr. Toler fell in love with her and his affection was reciprocated. About a week ago he left for St. Louis. He told his parents he was visiting a college friend. He took one of Mr. Rule's children, a boy, with him and left the child with Mrs. Harrison, its grandmother.

Earl Toler is well known and prominent in society circles in Kansas City. His father is E. W. Toler, formerly a member of the Kansas City Council and well provided with worldly goods. The young man is well spoken of.

FOOLED BY FLEISCHMANN.

Broke Off His Yeast Contract With the Whisky Trust.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

PEORIA, Ill., June 8.—The Whisky Trust has received another black eye by the repudiation of its compressed yeast contract with Fleischmann & Co., of Cincinnati, by which it will lose about $50,000 a year. The Riverdale Distillery, near Chicago, was the only trust house which ran the year round, its product being largely used in the manufacture of compressed yeast. The Trust fought for that business for many years, but two years ago made a five-year contract with Fleischmann & Co., by which they retired from the business, and turned over to them the entire yeast product of the Riverdale house. This week Fleischmann & Co. notified the Trust receivers that it would take no more yeast after July 1, claiming that the contract between it and the Trust was null and void, as being in restraint of trade. In the meantime the company has got control of the Trust market, and it will take a long and expensive fight to get any share of it back. In consequence of this action, Receiver McNulta has notified Nelson Morris, who is feeding cattle at Riverdale, that the house will have to be shut down at the termination of the yeast making, and all of his cattle must be out by July 1.

All the Peoria distilleries are being guarded by United States Marshals, in charge of Chief Deputy Donnelly of Chicago, but none of the former owners will attempt to take forcible possession of their old houses should the Supreme Court decide against the Trust. There will be a number of suits filed at once, however, to gain possession.

Ex-President Greenhut was intensely amused by the story to the effect that the Trust proposed to effect a great saving by shipping alcohol and spirits in tank cars, as oil is now. He said it was evident that the originator of the brilliant scheme didn't know there were any such things as revenue laws. All spirits must be barreled, guaged, stamped and tax paid before they can leave the warehouse.

HE WANTS $100,000.

Claim of an Indian Grandson of a Kansas City Pioneer.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8.—Jim Charley, grandson of William Gillis, who was a post trader here in early days and a member of the company which laid out Kansas City, is in the city pressing his claim for a property inheritance of $100,000, of which he has to date received only $6,000.

Jim was the son of Gillis by Kekaketoqua, the daughter of an Indian chief. In 1876 the three grandsons of Gillis were granted one-third of the Gillis estate by the courts. Jim's share was $100,000, but, being a minor, it was held in trust. He now wants his money. Jim weighs 315 pounds.

HENRI IN CUSTODY.

Charged With Robbing Uncle Sam's Mint at Carson City.

DENVER, Col., June 8.—James T. Henri, charged with complicity in the robbery of the United States Mint at Carson City, Nev., was arrested by United States Marshal Humphrey at Leadville and brought to Denver this morning, and remained in the custody of United States Marshal Israel until this afternoon, when he was taken to Canon City.

Henri seemed pleased with the opportunity afforded him to meet the charge, saying he is wrongly charged, and will be able to prove his innocence.

TWO TORN TO PIECES.

Deadly Work of Nitro-Glycerine in California.

OAKLAND, Cal., June 8.—John Harbits and Allen E. Butson were killed to-day by an explosion of nitro-glycerine at the Judson Dynamite Works, near West Berkley.

The men were engaged in repairing a plow used as a mixer in the nitro-glycerine works. Harbits struck the plow with a hammer, and about a pound of dynamite exploded. The men were horribly mangled. Frank Koster, another employe, though only a few feet away, was unhurt.

SHE COULD NOT HEAR THE GONG.

Deaf and Dumb Sarah Wicar Run Down by a Motor.

IS NOW DOUBLY AFFLICTED.

Bystanders Saw Her Danger and Shouted to Her, but She Could Not Hear.

An affliction she has borne for eight years was the direct cause of a second misfortune that befell little Sarah Wicar of 1107 North Eighth street yesterday.

Sarah, who is 12 years old, has been deaf and dumb for eight years.

Last evening her mother sent her to the grocery to get a can of milk for supper. She was skipping blithely along on her return, perfectly secure, despite her affliction in the midst of the crowds that lined the sidewalks on the way home from work. At the corner of Seventh and Biddle streets, where the Cass avenue electric line crosses she looked neither to the right or left. Why should she among that crowd, with every sense alive to approaching danger?

In the middle of the crossing she suddenly found herself deserted. Her companions had scattered in all directions. Her eyes followed them. How else was she to know the danger that she felt had come upon her? She lacked the one sense that had warned them of coming danger. The loud clanging of an approaching motor car had told them what to look out for. On the sidewalks they turned to see her standing bewildered on the car tracks, looking in every direction but the one from which death was bearing down upon her. They shouted to her, but that was useless.

The motorman pounded his gong and then turned his brakes, but his speed was too fast and the big car crashed with terrific force against the frail, little lady. Fortunately the shock threw her to one side and she escaped instant death. But her right foot remained on the track, and the heavy truck crushed it out of all human semblance.

The child suffered intense agony, but was unable to give vent to it. When a bystander picked her up her little face was contorted with pain, and she writhed and pinched her body to allay the anguish which thrilled her. Somebody in the crowd which had gathered summoned an ambulance and in a short while little Sarah was taken to the dispensary. Dr. Russell dressed the wound and pronounced it of a serious nature. She was then taken to her home.

Little Sarah lives at 1107 North Eighth street. When only 4 years old she contracted the scarlet fever, and when it left her voice and hearing had been taken away. She is a bright child, the only daughter of Hiram Wicar.

Motorman John Murphy said that after passing Carr street he allowed his car to go at an unusual rate of speed, as no car line crosses Biddle, and it is not necessary to show up. Near Biddle street he saw a number of people, but surmised that they would avoid his car; hence, did not slacken its speed. Little Sarah was crossing on the south side of Seventh street. She was in a crowd, and failed to look for the car. People on all sides of her scattered as they heard Murphy ring the gong. She did not notice this and continued slowly to cross the street. A number of people saw the impending danger, but none of them had the courage to rush in front of the car and save her. There was a last vigorous sound of the gong, a sudden contact of the car with an unresisting body, and the little girl lay in the street a cripple.

Conductor John Raney attended to her wants until the ambulance arrived. The child was badly crippled, and now besides bearing the double misfortune of being deaf and dumb, she will probably have to get about in future on crutches. A call was made at her home late last night. She was suffering constant pain, and tried to let those near her, know of her agony. The doctor attending says that her wounds will heal in a short while, but fears that the shock caused by the accident may result in her death.

BIT OFF HIS TONGUE.

Horrible Fall of Bricklayer John Steers From a Building Yesterday Morning.

While at work on a new building at [illegible] Manchester avenue yesterday morning John Steers, a bricklayer, met with a horrible accident which will in all probability result in his death.

He tumbled headlong from the wall of the building, 25 feet, to the hard ground and struck on his head. He almost bit his tongue off and received internal injuries from which he can hardly recover. An ugly scalp wound was also inflicted.

Steers was picked up, bleeding and unconscious by his fellow-workmen and carried into the building. Dr. H. A. Santa, with an office next door, was summoned and dressed the victim's wounds. He pronounced his condition serious.

Steers is 45 years old and has a family living at [illegible] Amity street. He was taken home in an ambulance.

TERRIBLE BURNS.

Three Thrown Aloft by an Oil Well Gas Explosion.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 8.—While drilling an oil well on the McDonald farm near here to-day a heavy flow of gas was struck at the depth of 1,000 feet. The drillers rushed to the boiler to put out the fire, but the great volume of gas exploded before they could get this done.

Three men were thrown in the air and terribly burned. John McLeod cannot recover. His brother, Edward McLeod and W. R. Proctor are also badly burned and there is slight hopes of their recovery.

FOUR GIRLS DROWNED.

While Bathing They Waded and Sank Into a Deep Hole.

DUBOIS, Pa., June 8.—Sadie and Dora Anthony, Sarah Rooth and Rosa Rimer were drowned to-day while bathing in Stump Creek near here. They were wading together when they sank in a deep hole. The four bodies were found together. The ages of the girls ranged from 14 to 17 years.

OLNEY'S SUCCESSOR.

How Atty.-Gen. Harmon Looks and Talks.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, O., June 8.—Judson Harmon is a tall man, a six-footer with shoulders to match. He is not fat, but there is no lack of muscle. His features are clear cut and rather pronounced. He has a good forehead and a firm jaw. His hair is thinning on top of his head, a little of it is gray and there is a suggestion of gray in his close clipped mustache. His eyeglasses are worn for use, not ornament. When he says a thing he says it distinctly. On the financial question, Mr. Harmon is with the Administration. He said that he was opposed to free coinage and to anything tending to debase money. In the present situation he did not see how gold and silver could be used together if silver was given free coinage. On March 4 last, he spoke for sound money at the dinner given to Congressman Storer in this city, in honor of his stand in Congress on the financial question.

Mr. Harmon has been a lawyer in Cincinnati since 1869 and his years of professional labor have been prosperous. In his early political affiliations Mr. Harmon was a Republican, but he followed Greeley and since then has been a Democrat. He stands well with his party, is a personal friend of Senator Brice, and is very close to ex-Gov. Campbell. Among his fellow-lawyers the new Attorney-General is very popular. Among his admirers are many of the younger members of the bar who from time to time have profited by his kindliness. Two or three years ago, Denison College from which Mr. Harmon was graduated before entering the Cincinnati school, conferred on him the degree of L. L. D.

The telegrams which lay thick on his desk this afternoon included messages of congratulations from friends in nearly every State in the Union. Several cablegrams lay with the others.

Lawrence Maxwell, lately Solicitor-General, sent this from New York: "Rejoice from the bottom of my heart with you and yours over the great honor so richly deserved and so worthily bestowed. I hope it may suggest our leader for 1896."

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—The commission of Mr. Harmon as Attorney General was signed by the President to-day.

CAMPBELL FOR GOVERNOR.

Senator Brice and Others Would Like Him to Run.

CINCINATI, O., June 8.—Senator Brice, Congressman Paul J. Sorg, ex-Consul Joseph B. Hughes and Democratic leaders from different parts of the State held a conference here to-day to induce ex-Gov. James E. Campbell, who was present, to consent to be the Democratic candidate for Governor. It is understood that Senator Brice will make an aggressive campaign against ex-Gov. Foraker to secure a Democratic majority in the Legislature to elect a Senator, but ex-Gov. Campbell to-day reserved his decision on running for Governor against Gen. Bushnell.

FORTY PERISHED.

And About Thirty Are Missing From the Koberdsdorf Flood.

OLDENBURG, June 8.—It is now known that forty persons perished in the flood at Koberdsdorf and at least thirty persons are missing. Koberdsdorf is a Hungarian watering place near here and the floods a result of mountain freshets which were so sudden in some instances all avenues of escape were cut off.

There is great distress among the peasants in the flooded districts. Telegraph wires, roads and bridges have been swept away in many places and the flooded districts are extremely difficult of access.

SILVER MAY SPLIT REPUBLICANS.

The League's National Convention Won't Ignore It.

SILVER MAN FOR PRESIDENT.

Platt Is Much Perturbed, and the White Metal's Foes Will Make a Desperate Fight.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Republican politicians are watching with anxiety the spoiled child of the party, the League of Republican Clubs. It has grown to be liable to do mischief. The national convention of the league will be held in Cleveland June 19 and 20. The trouble now is over the silver question. Four immense trains, to be known as silver specials, are going to the meeting from Denver and other silver centers. Besides the delegates they will carry all the silver orators and advocates of the West, and an attempt will be made to stampede the convention for free silver. Senator Thomas Carter will lead the silver men, and Congressman Sibley and Senator Cameron of Pennsylvania and most of the prominent Republicans of the silver party will be present. They say openly that they purpose to show the Republican party by the preponderance of silver men in the convention that the party must take up a silver man for President.

This is just what the Eastern Republicans want to avert now. They are keeping quiet on silver. None of the numerous presidential candidates or prominent leaders have come out openly, and the Eastern leaders are anxious to keep the question out of the convention.

Ex-Senator Platt is anxious about the matter, and the day before yesterday urged President Green of the State League and Gen. E. A. McAlpin, who is a candidate for President of the league, to keep silver out of the convention. The Platt people here have been talking with Senator Quay, and the Pennsylvania people and members from several of the New England States, especially those friendly to the Presidential aspirations of Thomas B. Reed, and they will stand together against the league's usurping the functions of the national convention and committing the party to any financial policy. So important does the matter appear to Mr. Platt that Edward Lauterbach has been detailed to go to Cleveland next Saturday night and represent him. The silver men of the convention say if they cannot get a vote on silver any other way they will put up a silver man for the Presidency of the league and get a count.

ADDITIONAL DELEGATES.

Gov. Stone Completes His List of Memphis Delegates.

Gov. Stone has completed his list of delegates to the Memphis silver convention by the addition of Capt. Wm. B. Eads of Carrollton and Hon. J. W. Farris of Lebanon.

ONLY TWO OPPONENTS.

Southern and Western Governors Who Object to Silver.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Replies from fourteen Western and Southern Governors irrespective of old party lines, show that with the exception of two, one Democrat and one Republican, they favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1.

The replies were sent in response to these queries issued from this city:

1. Do you favor the free coinage of silver by the United States independent of the action of any other nation?

2. Is there a strong probability that the Democrats of your State will vote to put a free coinage plank in their national platform?

3. What is the feeling among the Republicans of your State as to this question?

The only two Governors who did not respond in the affirmative to the first question were Gov. Stone of Mississippi, a Democrat, and Lord of Oregon, Republican. Gov. Stone says: "I do not favor the free and independent coinage of silver except as provided by the National Democratic platform of 1892. The Democrats of Mississippi would vote for a free coinage plank in the National Convention, if it were held now, but I do not believe they will in 1896. As to the Republicans, we have few in this State with views on this or any other question, but most of the few are opposed to the 16 to 1 free coinage. The Populists all favor it."

Gov. Lord says: "I am not in favor of free and independent silver coinage. I think the Democrats of Oregon will vote for a free coinage plank. The Republicans of Oregon are divided on the question."

Gov. Stone of Missouri leaves no doubt as to his position. He says: "I am in favor of free and independent coinage of silver. There is no doubt that the Missouri delegation in the Democratic National Convention will vote for a plank expressing the demand of our Democratic masses for such coin. The Republicans of Missouri stand about half and half."

Gov. Matthews (Dem.) of Indiana believes in the United States taking the initiative in securing an agreement among nations in this respect, and that if this prove a failure he believes in this Government independently coining silver, but excluding foreign bullion. As to the feeling among the Democrats, he is not sure, but the Republicans are undoubtedly for the gold standard.

Gov. Altgeld of Illinois responds affirmatively to the final two questions, and says the Republicans of Illinois also favor free silver.

Gov. Carr (Dem.) of North Carolina is positively affirmative on questions one and two, but does not answer to No. 3.

Gov. McIntyre (Rep.) of Colorado says: "I am in favor of free coinage independent of the action of any other nation. The Democrats of this State will vote for such coinage in their national convention. The feeling among our Republicans is the same as that among the Democrats."

Gov. Richards (Rep.) of Wyoming: "To the first, yes; to the second, yes; to the third, in my judgment, a majority of the Republicans of this State are in favor of free coinage."

Gov. Rickards (Rep.) of Montana puts it this way: "1. I do. 2. They will. 3 Unanimously in favor of free coinage, independent of the action of other nations."

Gov. Thornton (Dem.) of New Mexico takes a similar position on all three queries, as does Gov. Holcomb (Pop.) of Nebraska, except as to the third. He believes the Republican sentiment is divided.

Gov. Jones of Nevada answers to query 1, do most emphatically; to query 2, without doubt, as they have incorporated such a plank in their previous declarations; to query 3, in favor of bimetallism, but more conservative than the Democrats on that issue.

Gov. McConnell (Rep.) of Idaho answers in the same manner.

ON THE SILVER QUESTION.

Gov. Stone and Chairman J. W. Farris Announce Themselves Plainly.

The arrival of Committeeman J. W. Farris of Lebanon, who started the movement for a Silver State Convention, caused almost as much of a stir around the Laclede Hotel as the prospect of the St. Louis appointments. Then, too, everybody was talking about how Governor Stone felt on the question. The Governor soon announced himself. He said he had been interviewed so many times since he had been here when he was not present at the interview, and had had so many opinions attributed to him that he did not entertain that he would publicly set the matter right in a dictated interview, which he did to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

"I earnestly favor a State Convention," he said. "I agree with the Post-Dispatch that a convention ought to be held. I regret that the State Committee declined to call one. I believe that a very large majority of Missouri Democrats favor free silver coinage and also a convention. A majority of the committeemen are reported as saying that their constituents favor a convention. If so they ought not to be denied the right of meeting.

"The creature cannot be greater than the creator. The agent should not dictate to the principal. If the people cannot be trusted to meet in convention; if the wishes of a few men are to have sway over the demand of the masses, then we have reached a new era in our republican government and in the Democratic party.

"The State Committee represents the party organization. It is difficult for me to believe that the State Committee would refuse to call a convention if the Democracy of the State should, through county conventions, or through any other organized means, ask it to be done in unmistakable terms. I do believe in regularity. I would be slow to thrust the State Committee aside. The committee may be wholly out of sympathy with the dominant executive representative of the party, and I would greatly regret to see an open breach between the committee and the party. I would regard that as most unfortunate.

"A State Convention authorized to speak for the party should be assembled under the call of the Committee, and the committee will do itself injustice and the party injustice if it shall blindly and tyrannically refuse to obey the will of the people. A number of counties have held conventions and passed resolutions in favor of a State Convention; other county conventions are already called. Others, I am told, are about to be called. If the counties of the State shall by conventions or by any authorized means, declare for a State Convention and request the State Committee to call it, I cannot believe that the committee would ignore the popular demand.

If a general popular expression in favor of a State convention is made in terms that cannot be misunderstood, and the committee should then arbitrarily refuse to act, such other steps can be taken as may be deemed wise, or such as the people may, in their sovereign capacity, propose. If a majority of the Democrats of the State want a convention, let them meet in their county conventions and say so. On this subject I am entirely ready to accept the popular verdict, whatever it may be. So must all of us accept it. Let the people say for themselves what they want, and let that verdict control.

"I am anxious to preserve intact our party autonomy. I am anxious to avoid irregular methods. I hope everyone on both sides of the question will act with prudence and deliberation. In their battle for free silver, I am in hearty sympathy with the Post-Dispatch and all the other papers engaged with it on the side of the people. We can win the fight, and we will, if we make no mistakes. Let us put our faith in the people and rest our hopes on their intelligence and patriotism. Arouse them to action. Let us, however, strive to preserve the party organization and act through it.

"Now, you have my view of the situation for whatever it may be worth. Along these lines I am ready to move. I do not understand that the Post-Dispatch or Mr. Farris (who is one of the best Democrats in the State) or any one else desires to proceed outside the regular party organization if it can possibly be avoided. Let there be harmony and concert of action."

Mr. Farris also announced his plans definitely. He said that forty-eight counties had already declared for a State Convention through their committees or by county conventions, and as fifty-six was a majority it was now certain that many more than a majority would be in line in a short time. As soon as a majority is heard from Mr. Farris will ask the State Committee to reconsider its former action and issue a call. If it refuses, then Mr. Farris will ask Senators Vest and Cockrell and the leading Democrats from all parts of the State to join in a conference and indorse the movement for a State Convention.

He said before he left for home last night that a State Convention was now assured, and that it would be held the latter part of July or the middle of August.

State Treasurer Stephens and other Democrats from various parts of the State indorse Mr. Farris' plan. So did Norman J. Colman of the Rural World. The sentiment generally was to give the State Committee another chance, and if it still refused, then to go ahead, anyway.

Between the silver convention and St. Louis officers the loungers had a better time yesterday than they have enjoyed since the State election, and they will have straight tips enough to edify one another with for a fortnight.

Harris for Free Silver.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—Senator Harris of Tennessee left here to-day for Memphis, Tenn., to attend the silver convention there on the 12th and 13th inst. Before leaving he said that in his judgment the Democratic party could not win in 1896 unless it came out for free silver. He probably will take a leading part in the Memphis convention and make one or more speeches.

Free Silver in Georgia.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 8.—The Free Silver League of Spaulding County met at Griffin to-day and called a State Convention to meet here July 18 to discuss the best plan to pursue to obtain the free coinage of silver. Griffin is twenty miles below Atlanta.

Bimetallic Texans.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., June 8.—Gov. Culberson to-day appointed the following delegates from the State-at-large to the bimetallic convention to be held at Memphis on the 12th: Hon. John H. Reagan of Palestine, S. W. T. Lanham, Weatherford; George T. Jester of Corsicana, T. S. Smith of Hillsboro, John Bookout of Dallas, W. R. Hamby of Austin, J. R. Williams, Ft. Worth; Jas. McDonald of Galveston, D. R. Webb of Baird, J. C. Murrell of Gainesville, J. L. Wilson of Sherman, L. D. Lillard of Fairfield, and J. L. Greer of McKinney.

MUNYON
REMEDIES ALWAYS CURE

Save Doctors' Bills—Cure Yourself With Munyon's Remedies—No Experimenting; They Never Fail—Only Twenty-five Cents a Vial.

Always get the latest and best, no matter what you buy, especially when you buy medicines. What sane man would buy poor medicines when he is sick? He wants the best. Munyon's Remedies are both cheap and good. They are the very latest discoveries in the healing art. Don't fill your system with nauseous drugs. Don't be old-fashioned, behind the times. Be up to date, and buy the best and the latest—Munyon's Remedies. Get Munyon's "Guide to Health" and learn to cure yourself. It can be had free at any drug store, where the Munyon Remedies can also be had, mostly for 25c a vial. Those who are in doubt as to the nature of their disease should address Professor Munyon, No. 1505 Arch street, Philadelphia, giving full symptoms. He will carefully diagnose the case and give advice absolutely free. Remedies sent to any address on receipt of price.

Rheumatism cured in from one to three days. Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles quickly relieved. Catarrh positively cured. Coughs and colds quickly cured. Headache cured in five minutes. Nervous diseases promptly cured. Kidney troubles, Piles, Neuralgia, Asthma and all Female Complaints quickly cured. These Remedies are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents per vial. Munyon's Vitalizer imparts new life and vigor to weak and debilitated men; price, $1.

W. G. Kendrick, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Philadelphia, says: "I was cured of the most aggravated form of chronic catarrh by Munyon's Catarrh Cure. Had suffered for years and had tried many doctors and all the advertised remedies. The first dose of Munyon's gave me a thousand dollars' worth of relief."

Mrs. Margaret Brown, No. 20 Walsh court, Chicago, is 76 years old, and very feeble. She was seized with bronchitis, which developed into congestion of the lungs. Her daughter says: "We thought she would die. She was so old and feeble. But Munyon's Remedies saved her life, and she is now quite well again."

THOUSANDS MORE OF JUST SUCH TESTIMONIES.

NOT IMPORTANT.

An Officeholder's View of the Illinois Silver Convention.

BOSTON, Mass., June 8.—United States Assistant Treasurer Joseph O'Neill is not disposed to attach much importance to the free silver convention recently held in Springfield, Ill., nor to take seriously the statement that if its action shall be followed out to its logical conclusion the Democratic party will be in danger of disruption. He says that any convention that could be called by the silver men if they were to ignore the authority of the Democratic National Committee would not be representative of the Democratic party. Although he admits there is a strong feeling in the South and West in favor of the free coinage of silver, Mr. O'Neill says the views of the extremists who were reported at this Springfield convention do not represent the sentiments of the majority of the people of the country, nor even a majority of the Democratic party.

"If they persist in their course," said Mr. O'Neill, "in my belief it will result in further degradation of silver rather than its advancement, because the more this question is discussed before as an intelligent jury as the people of the United States, it seems to me the worse it is for the extreme advocates of silver."

PRATHER IS AGAINST IT.

The National Committeeman Says No Free Silver "Rump" Convention.

Col. J. Grif Prather, National Committeeman for Missouri, in amplification of his views upon the question of a call for a National Silver Convention, as expressed elsewhere in this paper in conjunction with other committee expressions, said last night to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"This end of the National Committee isn't in favor of any convention," he emphatically replied. "I am opposed to anything of the kind. There is no use in stirring up the matter by rump conventions now. I have no objections to keeping up the agitation, and when the National Convention meets if they want free silver the party will have to abide by it. But the party isn't going to be bound by these irregular conventions. If they keep it up they will drive a lot of Democrats out of the party. I see some paper said that I was opposed to the agitation of the silver question. I'm not at all. I don't object to discussing it all they want to, but I'm opposed to rump conventions and rump committeemen, and attempts to usurp the rights of the regularly constituted organizations of the party. Of course I am opposed to calling a National Convention before it is time to act in the regular way."

Sound Currency Club.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8.—The Sound Currency Club was organized at the Coates Hotel to-night by prominent members of the Jackson County Democracy. The direct cause of the club's organization is the effort of certain other prominent Democrats to pledge the party to silver. It is the intention to wage a vigorous campaign by organizing similar clubs in every county. Among those present were: Internal Revenue Collector Withers; ex-Supreme Judge Francis Black, ex-Senator Teasdale and ex-Police Commissioner Thomas Morrow.

Buchanan County Unanimous.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 8.—The Democratic County Central Committee met today and adopted resolutions favoring a State Convention to take action on the silver question. The vote of the commitee for a State Convention was unanimous.

Cape Girardeau County.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Mo., June 8.—At a meeting of the Democratic Central Committee of Cape Girardeau County at this place to-day, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The State Central Committee has failed and refused to call a State convention for the purpose of considering the question of silver coinage,

Therefore, be it resolved: First, that this committee is in favor of such a convention to be held not later than August 1, 1895, and the chairman hereof is hereby instructed to sign the call for a convention made by J. W. Farris, Chairman of the Committee of Laclede County, and in the event of the State convention being called the chairman of this convention, J. W. Limbaugh, is hereby authorized and empowered to issue a call for a Democratic county mass-meeting to be held in the city of Jackson at such date as he may fix for the purpose of electing four delegates to such convention and transacting such other business as may come before the meeting; second, resolved, that we are in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 without waiting for international agreement or the concurrence of any other nation.

Ohio State Committee.

CINCINNATI, O., June 8.—A special to the Commercial Gazette from Upper Sandusky, O., says Chairman M. A. Smalley of the Democratic State Central Committee has called the committee to meet on Thursday, June 25, presumably to fix day and place for the Democratic State Convention, although the call does not state its purpose.

HALL CRITICISED.

He Is Receiving the Censure of the Monroe County Farmers.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Mo., June 8.—At the mass-meeting at Paris to-day to take action on the silver convention question about 1,000 voters were present. It was an enthusiastic meeting. Hon. R. N. Bodine, prospective candidate against Mr. Hall in the Second District, presented the resolutions below. He made a stirring speech. One of the most significant facts of the gathering was that every criticism of Hall was greeted with loud applause by the farmer element, who were formerly his staunch supporters. Monroe was his stronghold, and made his election possible; but from a Roderick Dhu he has been changed to a man without a clan. His Washington interview has incensed the farmers beyond measure.

Following are the resolutions adopted at the meeting:

1. That we are in favor of the restoration of silver to the privilege equally with gold of unlimited coinage enjoyed by it for nearly a century in our history, and while it is desirable that such result should be secured by concurrent action on the part of the leading nations of the world, yet inasmuch as all attempts to secure action by international agreement have failed and are likely to fall in the future so long as this Government awaits such action, therefore we are in favor of immediate independent action on the part of the United States and of the next Congress, opening the mints to the unlimited coinage of silver, permitting it to be coined at a ratio of 16 to 1.

2. That, instead of, by our inaction, putting a weapon in the hands of the enemies of silver in other countries, we wish to strengthen the hands of the friends of silver, thereby enabling them to point to the action of the greatest nation of the earth in its favor.

3. We favor the holding of a State Convention for the purpose of expressing the views of the Democracy of the State upon this, the leading issue before the American people, and that if the State Central Committee still refuse to call such convention, then that it be called by a majority of the Central Committees of the various counties of the State.

4. That we congratulate the Democracy of Illinois not only over the splendid victory recently achieved in the interest of the people, but in the fact that their Central Committee is in line with the people and recognized that they are their servants and not their masters nor guardians.

Action of the Alabama Silver Democratic League.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 8.—The Alabama Silver Democratic League met in Birmingham to-night to select delegates to the Memphis Silver Convention of June 12th and 13th. Speeches were made praising Senator Morgan and denouncing Cleveland. One hundred and twenty-five delegates were chosen to the Memphis convention. The delegation will represent every trade and profession. There was much enthusiasm manifested.

ALL FOR SILVER.

North Carolina Democrats Become Enthusiastic.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 8.—At the meeting held here in the interest of bi-metallism and to select delegates to the Memphis bimetallic convention ex-Chairman Smith of the Democratic Executive Committee offered the resolutions which were adopted, demanding free and unlimited coinage of silver at a 16 to 1 ratio and appealing to men of all political opinions to join in the demand, declaring it an overshadowing question, and calling on all to unite on a free silver coinage man for President. Secretary of State Coke, who was formerly chairman of the Democratic State Committee, declared he was in full sympathy with the resolutions. Editor Ayer of Senator Marion Butler's Populist paper, appealed to all silver men to unite and to put party prejudices entirely aside. Ex-State Chairman Otho Wilson of the Populist party also spoke in support of the resolutions. Ex-Secretary Beckwith of the Democratic State Committee said he had worked for Cleveland, but would never work for him again nor for any New England or New York man unless he was for free silver.

The South Stirred Up On Silver.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Capt. Evan P. Howell of the The Atlanta Constitution is at the Marlborough Hotel. Speaking of the silver sentiment in the South, he said:

"I never in my life saw the South so worked up over any idea. It seems to have taken a firm hold, and it is not dying out, as some allege. There is a vast difference between the North and the South on the money question, and it is bound to end in a hard tussle. I am in favor of arranging our money system to suit ourselves, without recognizing foreign powers in the arrangement. There is no use denying that during the period in the history of this country when silver was most largely used, from 1860 to 1875, was the most prosperous time that we have ever known."

The Convention Will Be Held.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 8.—Regarding the statement of Chairman Harrity of the Democratic National Committee that he would not call a meeting of his committee with a view to calling a national monetary convention as requested by the Illinois convention, Chairman Hinrichsen this morning said: "This is no more than we had expected. So many of the members of the National Committee are tied to the Administration by offices which they already have or expect to get, or by business connections, that we have not expected them to take kindly to the idea of a national money convention. However, we shall give the Democratic National Committee an opportunity to formally refuse to issue the call. You may rest assured the National Convention will be held."

VERY MUCH IN EARNEST.

Marion County Insists That There Must Be a Convention.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

PALMYRA, Mo., June 8.—A delegated Democratic County Convention met at this place to-day to consider what position should be taken on the silver question, which resulted in the adoption of the following resolutions:

Whereas, a difference of opinion exists among Democrats as to the correct relation gold and silver bear to each other as money, and as the question is the most prominent now in our politics, and which, if not settled before the assembling of the next national convention, would be a fruitful source of party discord during a national campaign, and

Whereas, a cardinal principle of the Democratic party is the rule of the majority to which every loyal Democrat must subscribe, therefore to ascertain the sense of the majority of the Democratic party of this State upon this issue, and to promote the best interests of the party, be it

Resolved, that the Democracy of Marion County in delegated convention duly assembled in pursuance to the call of its duly organized county committee requests the State Democratic Central Committee to call a State convention of the party not later than Aug. 1, 1895, to give expression to its sentiment on the restoration of coinage of silver as money and the ratio it shall sustain to gold and that John H. Carroll, Esq., member of said committee from this Congressional District, is instructed to cast the vote of the Democracy of Marion County in favor of such convention.

Resolved, that should the State Central Committee refuse to issue a call for a State convention upon the request of a majority of the conventions of the counties of the State or through the regular County committees, we request the members of said State committee favoring a convention to make the call therefor which shall have force and effect as though issued by authority of all of said committee, and should the minority of said committee refuse to call such convention, then the Chairman of the Marion County Democratic Central Committee is instructed to co-operate with the Democracy of the other counties with the State to call such State convention.

Resolved, that we favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver with full legal tender at a ratio of 16 to 1 of gold by the United States without awaiting the action of an international agreement, which is solely a device to postpone the question.

Resolved, that copies of the proceedings of this meeting be forwarded to the Secretary of the State Central Committee and to John H. Carroll, Esq., member of said committee for this district. Signed by Thad Ray, Chairman; Wm. N. Hickham, Thomas W. Hawkins, John A. Knott, C. S. Wright, S. S. McPike, E. R. Lear, Committee.

It is the belief of the entire convention that should Missouri fail through its Central Committee to take a positive stand on the silver question, that there is great danger of losing the State to the Republican party at the next general election, or at least greatly reducing the Democratic majority. There is much complaint among the leading Democrats here at the action of the State Committee on the silver question.

Texans for Free Silver.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 8.—The free silver advocates held their first public meeting to-night and perfected the organization of the Tarrant County Free Silver League. Speeches were made by Senators W. J. Swayne and W. J. Bailey, Col. Richard Wynne, Maj. S. J. Hunter and others. Several hundred names were placed on the rolls. Free silver advocates are pretty strong here.

Little Rock Delegates.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 8.—A mass meeting of citizens was held to-night and thirty delegates were selected to represent this convention at the silver convention to be held at Memphis. Among the delegates selected were: Gov. James P. Clark, Gen. Dan W. Jones, ex-Gov. Henry M. Rector, ex-Mayor M. G. Hall, Patrick Raleigh, J. H. Harrod, Walter Terry, J. T. Beale, Gen. B. M. Queen, Judge W. S. McCain, C. B. Myers, J. T. W. Tillar, Judge T. B. Martin, Judge D. and George R. Brown. A resolution was adopted favoring a convention of all the silver clubs in Arkansas to be held at Little Rock.

What Do You Think

About when anyone speaks of a "blood purifier" or "spring medicine," or "That Tired Feeling?"

Why Hood's Sarsaparilla, of course, because this medicine has won an unequalled reputation and an immense sale by its merit in curing all blood diseases, and in giving that strength so much needed at this season of the year. If you have not yet taken it do so now. It will do you good.

"My boy was in very poor health and nothing seemed to do him any good. I read of the good Hood's Sarsaparilla was doing others so I thought I would give it to my boy. After he had taken one bottle he was much better and his appetite much improved. He took six bottles altogether, is perfectly well and healthy, has gained in flesh more than ever before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. A. J. FAULKNER, 341½ West 41st st., New York City.

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla and my health is much improved. I have not had that tired languid feeling any more." MRS. J. E. WILSON, 363 Congress av., New Haven, Conn.

ANTI-SEMITES ARE RAMPANT.

Would Exclude Jews From All Public Honors and Offices.

PARTY ISSUE IN GERMANY.

The New Baltic Canal Stands the Trial Trip Perfectly, and Will Be Formally Opened June 19.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copywrighted 1895 by Press Pub. Co.)

BERLIN, June 8.—The anti-Semites people's party of which Ahlwardt and Bockel are the leaders, adopted their platform at a meeting this week. The chief plank naturally is a propaganda to exclude Jews from all public offices and honors and also from the press, law and medicine. In addition, separate schools for Jews under State supervision and control are demanded. The meeting resolved that every person is to be regarded as a Jew if his or her ancestors of the past three generations include one person of Jewish blood. Persons who have married Jewesses are included in the same category. In view of the quantity of Jews among the members of the aristocracy and in banking and commercial circles, the achievement of this propaganda would cause considerable inconvenience.

The trial trips through the Baltic and North Sea Canal made this week by the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern and the Hamburg-American line steamer Palatia with the Chancellor, Prince Hohenlohe; the Prussian Minister for the Interior, Herr Von Koeller; the Imperial Secretary of State for the Interior, Dr. Von Roetticher, and the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron Marzehall Von Biberstein on board, showed that the canal is in condition for passage of a small fleet on June 19 and 20. The Palatia just touched bottom between Rendsburg and Hottenau, but it was nothing more serious than stirring up the mud. It transpires that when landing from the Palatia at Holtenau, Prince Hohenlohe had a narrow escape as he slipped and would have fallen overboard out for Herr Von Koeller, who caught hold of him and succeeded in pulling him upon deck.

According to the programme the Kaiser-Adler, with Emperor William on board, will head a procession of sixteen German and foreign vessels, which will pass through the canal during the evening of June 19. The Marblehead will represent the United States during the passage of the Elbe from Hamburg to Brunsbuttel and the canal will be closed to traffic until after the ceremonies are over.

The great canal which joins the Baltic Sea to the German Ocean cost about $38,500,000 and has been eight years in building. It intersects the peninsula of Schleswig-Holstein from Brunsbruttel, near the mouth of the River Elbe, to Holtenau on Kiel Bay and opposite the city of Kiel, a distance of about 50 miles. The military advantage of the canal is the fact that henceforth, in time of war the Germany navy cannot be divided and the provisioning of either the Baltic or the north shore cannot be interrupted or rendered impassable.

The agitation in France against the French warships at Kiel hoisting the German imperial flag nearing the sinister date "1870" has induced the Emperor to decide not to visit any warships during the celebration of the opening of the canal, as, if he visited any of them, he would be compelled to visit the Hoche, the French flagship, which would thereby be bound to hoist the standard.

The speech which Emperor William is to make at the Hohenlohe banquet on June 21 is awaited with curiosity. The French admiral Monard is to sit on his Majesty's right hand and the Russian admiral, Skrydleff is to sit on his left hand. Thus it will be difficult for the Emperor to avoid a special allusion to France as the most honored guest.

The foundation stone of the big Bismarck monument to be erected by the German Student Corps was laid on the summit of the Rudelsberg last Sunday. The ex-Chancellor's son-in-law will, at the expiration of his six months' leave of absence be appointed Prussian Minister at Hamburg, so as to enable him to be near his father-in-law. The latter's health continues to be good, and a visit to Kirsingen in order to take the waters is anticipated.

The postal authorities of Frankfort-on-the-Main have decided that the Government need not pay damages for the loss of the registered letters which sunk with the steamship Elbe, and the United States has not joined in the international postal regulations of 1891 bearing on that question. Some exceptions, however, will be made voluntarily.

A case of perjury which was pending against the Countess Perponcher, nee Pross, the American woman whose troubles have so long been before the public, has been stricken off the lists, the court being satisfied that the evidence against her was of the flimsiest character. The Countess is the wife of Count Von Perponcher, son of the ex-Chief Court Marshal of Emperor William I. The Count early in April last deposited the sum of 120,000 marks as bail for his wife who had been arrested on the charge of perjury and intimacy with Dr. Bruno Voight, who was being sued for divorce by his wife. The Countess was married in the United States in December, 1893. She will now sue her chief traducer, a teacher named Wiegandt in Muehlhausen, for slander.

Another question affecting the political rights of women has just been decided against them. An antiquated law still exists which prohibits women scholars and apprentices from joining a political society. A few women recently formed in Berlin a Women's Agitation Committee, having for its object to obtain for women equal political rights with men. The leaders of this movement were arraigned by the public prosecutor, and the magistrate before whom they were brought sentenced the women to fines ranging from 30 to 50 marks, and ordered the society to be dissolved.

A sensation has been created by the revelations regarding the barbarous treatment of lunatics inmates of the monastery of Mariaberg, made during the trial of a suit for slander brought against Herren Mellage, an inn keeper of Scharre and Warnatzsch, a newspaper man who published an exposure of the methods of the monks. These methods became known on the escape of the Scotch priest, Fr. Forbes, whose flight was facilitated by Herr Mellage. The evidence shows that the monks are illiterate men, totally unfitted to be attendants in an asylum. They inflicted cruel personal punishment, some times immersed the patients head foremost in ice cold water and the chains and other instruments of torture applied to the patients were produced in court.

After a week's hearing of the case the accused were acquitted as the public prosecutor admitted that the allegations were justified.

The newspapers all blame the parties concerned for bestowing the Order of Merit on Herbert Spencer without asking whether he, would accept it. Spencer's refusal coupled with Pasteur's refusal to accept the highest scientific distinction in Germany has caused a great deal of heart burning.

Herr Zoellener, the leader of the New York Liederkranz, has had his "dual war" opera, the theme being taken from the Franco-German war, accepted by the management of the Royal Opera House at Munich.

Manager Conried of New York has just engaged a new German company for America and Maria Beisenhofer for a tour to the United States.

Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, editor of the Century Magazine, passed a few days here during the week while on his way to Venice, in order to attend the wedding of his sister-in-law, who is the sister of United States Consul-General Dekay. She is to be married to an Italian nobleman.

OLNEY'S LAST DAY.

Preparing to Occupy the Position of Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—Atty.-Gen. Olney was busy all day at the Department of Justice, arranging his private papers and preparing for his transfer to the State Department.

There was no formal leave taking, although most of the subordinates of the department called during the day to tender their regrets and wish him success at the head of the diplomatic branch of the Government.

His duties as Attorney-General ceased to-night. His last official action in the old office was to sign the commission of Benjamin A. Bergen of San Francisco appointed Special Assistant of the District Attorney of Northern California to take charge of the litigation in the Redwood timber land entries and Chauncey Wood of Rapid City, S. D., as Assistant to the District Attorney of that State in timber cases.

Mr. Olney will be sworn in as Secretary of State at the State Department Monday morning, probably by Chief Justice Fuller.

POISON IN THE FISH.

One Death and Three to Follow in an Ohio Family.

AKRON, O., June 8.—Thomas Hine and his wife and three children living at Randolph near here, ate fish for supper last night. This morning Mrs. Hine died in agony and the three children are so ill that their lives are despaired of. It is believed that the fish were poisoned.

ANOTHER SCORCHING DAY.

The Mercury Reached 90 at 3 O'clock Yesterday Afternoon.

The mercury climbed away up the tube yesterday and during the afternoon threatened to break the glass and go off on a little private ascension of its own. It started off at 8 o'clock in the morning at 74 and slipped up to 90 at 3 o'clock.

From 4 o'clock on until night it grew somewhat cooler and declined to 84 by 9 o'clock. But for a good breeze that was stirring the day would have been insufferably hot.

Rain has fallen in Montana, the extreme North, Eastern Texas and the Lower Mississippi Valley. At Vicksburg and Shreveport over an inch has fallen in the past twelve hours.

It is decidedly cooler in the Lake Superior region and the Upper Missouri Valley and warmer in the East.

The thermometer readings for St. Louis were as follows:

6 a. m.	65	1 p. m.	88
7 a. m.	68	2 p. m.	89
8 a. m.	74	3 p. m.	90
9 a. m.	77	4 p. m.	90
10 a. m.	81	5 p. m.	89
11 a. m.	84	6 p. m.	88

INCOME TAX AND CHARITY.

How the Law's Unconstitutionality Benefits the Poor.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Rev. Dr. John Hall has contributed the $1,000 that his income tax might have been to the fund for home missions asked for by the General Assembly. It is said that many persons of wealth have thought of giving an amount of money equal to that saved by the death of the tax to charitable organizations. The Rev. Dr. Langford, Secretary of the Foreign and Home Missions of the Episcopal Church, said to-day:

"We received recently a letter from an anonymous contributor inclosing a sum of money. The donor stated that the money was to have been used to pay his income tax, but that since the law had been declared unconstitutional he felt like giving the money to charity. Still more recently a check for $1,000 from a lady in this city who is noted for her charity. She said that now, since the income tax had become a dead letter, she felt able to make the bequest and hastened to do so."

A FALLEN STAR.

Death of John A. Forepaugh, the Theatrical Manager.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—John A. Forepaugh, the well-known theatrical man, owner and manager of Forepaugh's Theater, died at his home in this city this afternoon. He was 42 years of age. His death was due to a complication of diseases.

An Unidentified Watch Charm.

Chief of Detectives Desmond has in his possession a gold watch charm bearing the initials "J. J. K.," which was found on the person of Mike Moore, who claimed to have found it at Fourth and Morgan streets on the 2d inst. It is held awaiting identification.

THEY ARE HERO WORSHIPERS.

Parisians Polishing Up the Halos of Their Great Dead.

CASTELLANE RECEPTION.

Frenchmen Now Claiming the Honor of Having Discovered America, and 5 O'clock Teas as Well.

Special Correspondence Sunday Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, May 29.—Paris seems to be in a perpetual act of glorification. The city is a vast pantheon, as it were, in which the halos of heroes as well as saints come in for frequent polishings.

In view of the approaching anniversary of Victor Hugo's death and of the assassination of Carnot the Pantheon is being put in order. The anniversary of Carnot's death is to be celebrated with great pomp. A large space is being prepared to receive the wreaths already promised from foreign countries, not to mention the towns of France. The subscriptions assure already the speedy erection of a monument in Park Monceau in memory of Chopin. A monument sculptured by Chopin, was dedicated yesterday at Felicien David's tomb. Many Americans will congratulate Bartholdi, who has received the medal of honor in sculpture at the Salon, and Rives de Chauannes, who has just been named member of the Academy of Arts at Dresden.

The ladies of the American Club in the Latin quarter gave a tea last week to Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. Among many attentions being paid to the new Countess of Castellane by the American colony was the dinner in her honor at the house of the Drakes in the Avenue Du Bois de Boulogne. The Countess wore white satin with a garniture of rose lace and the famous pearl necklace of the Castellane family. A reception followed the dinner, dancing ending the evening. Among the dinner guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, Princess Colonna and Mme. Lingee.

The ex-Empress Eugenie is in Paris as usual at this season. She is at the Continental, where many of the Bonapartist party have inscribed their names in her visitors' book. She goes out very little and receives few visitors. Not so Mrs. Jack Gardner, who is also here. She is in demand. In Rome the Queen honored her by admiring her diamonds. She has also seen the Pope. In Paris she always holds a little court of her own.

About the time of the Chicago Exposition several paragraphs in Paris papers set forth alleged facts to prove that to France belongs the honor of having discovered America. At Notre Dame on the opening day a mass was said in which was sung the veritable hymn said to have been sung by the sailors on the historic voyage, a hymn to the virgin. Next comes the claim (apparently just as serious) that it was in France, not England, as hitherto believed, that the 5 o'clock tea came into being. These after dinners were invented for chattering, says an old chronicler. That the conversation was mere chatter is evident. It was at Queen Blanche's 5-o'clocks that the famous treaty Meaux had its origin. But there was also variety in entertainment. For hither flocked the wives of Counts and Barons who had gone to the holy wars with her son Louis. These noble ladies in turn recited verses or sang ballads of love. After 1636 tea was used in France, and was an exclusively aristocratic beverage.

The French papers give good notices of the first number of Prince Poniatowski's French-American review and predict its success. With the names of Tolstoi, Daudet, Clemenceau and others for the literary work and Formaine and others for the artistic there should be some compensation for the $10 subscription. Whether the object of the review "to unite the art and literature of the two countries" will be achieved time will prove.

Many columns are printed in the papers concerning Marcel Prevost's new play at the Gymnase, "Les Demi Vierges," which all are flocking to see. The notices say that the risky situations and language are atoned for by the author's talent, by his observation and philosophy. Jane Hading's role is admitted to be most difficult.

The Court of Cessation, considering the question of bull fighting in France, decided three months ago that the bull is a domestic animal. A scene which occurred yesterday gave good cause for a reversion of the decision. While a train loaded with cattle from South America was being unloaded forty bulls escaped. A panic resulted as the bulls rushed through the market, attacking other cattle and goring people. Four men were wounded. The municipal guard was called out and one of the bulls shot. As the market was crowded the shooting of the others was dangerous and took over an hour.

To discount the unpopularity earned by sending a squadron to Kiel, Ribot has asked the Chamber to vote an appropriation for a monument to the memory of the French soldiers who fell in the war of 1870. The move is a clever one, but too transparent to be effective. It will not save the Government the ordeal of an interpolation on its foreign policy.

The anniversary of "Bloody Week" passed off without disturbance. The various socialist organizations went to the cemetery and deposited wreaths at the foot of the Mur des Federes, where 30,000 communists were shot in May 1871 by order of Gen. Gallifet. No speech or demonstration was allowed and some deputations, resenting this arrangement, carried away their wreaths and burned them. Thus the celebration, like many others of its kind, ended in smoke.

Aid Moral and Financial.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 8.—After listening to the plea of John E. Mahoney, a representative of the striking cigar-makers of Detroit, the Buffalo cigar-makers resolved to lend moral and financial aid to their Western brothers.

A SUIT FOR $2,000,000.

Brought by William A. Brown Against the Vanderbilt Estate.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A suit for about $2,000,000 against the estate of Commodore Vanderbilt will be begun shortly by Wm. A. Brown, a son of a business associate of the founder of the Vanderbilt fortune. The transaction on which the suit is based is more than forty years old, and the delay in bringing the action brings out skeletons in the Brown family.

Wm. A. Brown was a ship builder, who made a fortune and a name for himself in the first half of the century. Along in 1850 he was worth $1,300,000. He and Commodore Vanderbilt were neighbors. Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Brown were fast friends. They entered into an agreement for a steamship line between New York and San Francisco by way of Nicaragua. The suit is based principally on memoranda of this agreement for the runnings of the steamers Independence and Pacific between San Juan and San Francisco on the Pacific monthly for five years. He was also building another steamer, the Daniel Webster. Vanderbilt was to run steamers between Nicaragua and New York. Neither was to dispose of his line without the consent of the other. No partnership was designated by this agreement, but each party was to be responsible for the expenses of his steamers.

Brown was obliged to borrow, and Vanderbilt indorsed for him, taking a bill of sale of the steamers with the understanding that when the money was repaid the steamers were to be transferred back to Brown. They earned $480,000 the first year, but, it is alleged, Vanderbilt never made an accounting, but kept both money and ships.

About this time Brown failed and preferred that Vanderbilt should keep them for a time rather than they should go to his (Brown's) creditors, but died before his affairs were fully adjusted. The Commodore admitted to the widow that he had not treated the dead man right, but promised that his son, Wm. H. Vanderbilt, would settle it, but it was never settled, and this suit has been delayed all these years.

The widow has a comfortable fortune and did not care about bothering with lawsuits. The $2,000,000 claimed is made up of the proceeds of the sale of the different steamers, the loss of profits through the sales and the interest. The Pacific and Daniel Webster sold for $200,000 each, the Independence for $150,000 and the Seabird for $100,000. The lawyers for Vanderbilt say that the family has no knowledge of the claim and can find no memoranda bearing upon it.

HARMON AND HARMONY.

Rallying Cry Suggested for the Presidency.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Ex-Gov. Hoadley yesterday sent the following telegram to his former law partner, Judge Harmon, who has been appointed Attorney General by President Cleveland:

"Accept our congratulations. We know you will think only of your country and never spare yourself. Thus will you win success."

"I am delighted with Judge Harmon's appointment," said ex-Gov. Hoadley to a reporter. "He is fitted by education, by origin, by physical and mental make-up to adorn the place. By the way, the Baptists of this country will be pleased. Attorney General Harmon is the son of a famous Baptist preacher, the Rev. B. F. Harmon. They are a brainy family. Judson Harmon has a brother who is one of the most expert alienists in the United States. Harmon's wife is a cousin of Will Cumback of Indiana."

Mr. Colston of Cincinnati, Judge Harmon's law partner, and a former partner of ex-Gov. Hoadley, entered the office at this moment, and joined the latter in eulogizing Judge Harmon.

"I met Gen. Maxwell this morning," said ex-Gov. Hoadley, "and he was enthusiastic over Harmon's appointment. He went so far as to name Harmon for President. He would certainly make a strong candidate. He is a man whose strength throughout the country will increase the better he is known."

"'Harmon and Harmony' would be a great rallying cry," suggested Mr. Colston and ex-Gov. Hoadley laughed at the remark.

NO REINSTATEMENT.

The Kansas Supreme Court Decides Against Two Senators.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 8.—The Supreme Court refused to order Gov. Morrill to reinstate Senator Householder, who was suspended pending an investigation.

This indicates that the Court will decide likewise in the effort to restore Senator Rogers as Regent of the State University.

FRED BAIDERI AND HIS GUN.

He Got Drunk and Shot a Boy in the Thigh.

While under the influence of liquor last evening, Fred Baideri, 25 years old, of 644 South Fourth street, fired three shots from a revolver through the door of his house. One of the bullets struck Lawrence Palmer, 9 years old, living with his parents at 318 Plum street in the right thigh, inflicting a slight flesh wound.

Charles Thiel of 1701 Paul street disarmed Baideri, who was arrested.

A Penitentiary's Predicament.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 8.—The Supreme Court to-day decided that the Auditor of State need not audit Warren Chase's accounts. This would put Chase without the means to run the penitentiary were there not receipts from the mines and other sources that provide an income.

Bunker Hill.

Miss Clara Bell Cornwell of this place and Mr. David McKenzie of St. Louis were married.

Willie Jencks, the 11-year-old son of Charles Jencks, fell from a tree and was badly bruised about the head and shoulders.

Christiana Leschen, aged 73 years, widow of Charles Leschen, died on Friday and was buried from the German Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. C. Hintz celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary at the residence of their daughter, Mrs. Theodor Bumann. The couple are 81 and 79 years old respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Hintz were married in Germany and came to this country in 1871. They have eight children living, who, with their families, were present at the anniversary.

Elsie, a 3-year-old daughter of George Richards, had a leg badly broken by a horse stepping on it.

Miss Josie M. Barton of Carbondale has been appointed principal of the High School, to succeed Miss Mary Woodruff.

GEORGE SMITH'S RUINED HOME.

Religious Enthusiasm Puts an End to 17 Years of Wedded Bliss.

HIS WIFE IS A FAITH-HEALER.

She Became a Disciple of Mrs. Woodworth, Neglected Her Household Duties and Left Her Home.

The lately organized Church of God has not brought happiness to all its members. An overplus of zeal on the part of Mrs. George A. Smith of 5637 Theodosia avenue has broken up a once happy family.

George A. Smith, a middle-aged man, tall and slim, and of sallow complexion, and whose face is mortised with the wrinkles of worry, sat by a little table in his frame cottage last night. When seen by a Post-Dispatch reporter he was eating a meager meal of crackers and cheese and water. His little 9-year-old son lay asleep in a bed near by.

The house was in a topsy-turvy condition, and looked much as if a small cyclone had passed through it. Bureau drawers and wardrobes had been emptied, beds were upside down and rag bags were strewn over the floor.

His wife Emma, with whom he had been living for seventeen years, had left him during the afternoon and had stolen away a cartload of household effects.

"I came home this evening," he said, "just in time to see a city ambulance rattle up and take my wife off to the City Hospital. I did not know that any such arrangement had been made. I think these Christian science women persuaded her to leave me because I am a non-believer in this divine healing and trance business. She wanted my little son to live with a family of one of these divine healers, but I took him away from them.

After she was gone I found that she had gone through the bureaus, wardrobes and cupboard and had sent away a cartload of small household effects. She can stay at the hospital until she is ready to come home."

Mr. Smith called on Chief Reedy at the Four Courts, and the Chief told him he would investigate his story and endeavor to recover his household goods.

At the City Hospital it was said that there was nothing serious the matter with Mrs. Smith.

Behind Mrs. Smith's departure from home is a peculiar story.

This is a home that has been broken up by religious fanaticism that is demonstrated by mysterious trances and seances.

Out on Montgomery street and Glasgow avenue is located the Church of God and the Holy Ghost. It was founded about six years ago by that peculiar product of religious zeal known to fame, or, rather, notoriety, as Mrs. Maria Woodworth. She held a series of meetings there in a big tent, and attracted a crowd of religious enthusiasts who soon imagined that they, like her, were born with a God-favored power to do wonders in saving and exciting souls. Money poured in by the peck-measureful, and soon $20,000 was raised to build a church.

Rev. H. H. Spiher is the pastor. The creed is quite singular. It is a combination of Christian science, hypnotism and spiritualism. The church teaches the doctrine of divine healing by the laying on of hands.

When the faith-cure star, Mrs. Woodworth, had gone her way to glitter and gleam in new fields, there came disruptions in the ranks of the divine healers. One woman would imagine that she was favored with more power than the other members, and she would break away from the flock and start a little divine healing organization of her own.

Mrs. George A. Smith has been a cripple for several years. She once suffered from the white swelling in the hip joint, and one of her limbs is shorter than the other. Intellectually she is not strong, says her husband. Three or four years ago she was persuaded to attend the meetings of the divine healers. She saw women fall in a trance and claim that what they called "the power," had taken possession of them. Mrs. Smith immediately became possessed of the same religious enthusiasm, and imagined that the Holy Ghost would restore her health. She joined the divine healers and became one of the most erratic of all the enthusiasts. Finally, she broke away from the Church of God and became a follower of another woman, who was given to more elaborate manifestations of the "power." She became a preacher, and imagined she possessed the power to heal the sick by the laying on of hands.

"Now my wife has become a crank on this trance business," said Mr. Smith, last night. "I saw that she was going too far with it for her own mental and physical welfare. I saw an agent of the Prudential Life Insurance Company. While I was away these women would come to my house and go into all sorts of trances, and fall on the floor and roll over and kick up their heels, and cut all kinds of capers. This 'power' they claim to possess affects each one differently, it seems; for one would moan pitifully, while another one would laugh. My wife would go into a trance, and puff and blow and roll her eyes toward the ceiling. She would seem to be in a great nervous strain, and after the trance she was physically exhausted.

"Finally she began to stay away from home with these other cranky women, and remain out until late at night. When I came home in the evening there would be no supper prepared for me.

"My wife at last said she was going away into Doe's Run, about 80 miles into the country, to preach with a band of divine healers. Instead she remained one month, and I had to cook my own meals at home. When she returned she was out every night almost, going through these trances with other women and a few cranky men. When I asked her where she had been she always told me it was none of my business. A short time ago, while I was expostulating with her, she attempted to strike me, and I simply held her to prevent her from doing me bodily harm. She scratched me in the face. But she called in a policeman and wanted me arrested, claiming I had struck her. But I was not arrested. I don't understand this trip to the hospital. Now that she is gone she can stay."

REDUCED CROP.

Statement to Show That Cotton Production Has Fallen Off.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A large cotton-house has prepared a statement to back up their contention that the cotton crop of the South is to be partially reduced. FITS CURED

(From U. S. Journal of Medicine.)

Prof. W. H. Peeke, who makes a specialty of Epilepsy, has without doubt treated and cured more cases than any living Physician; his success is astonishing. We have heard of cases of 20 years' standing cured by him. He publishes a valuable work on this disease which he sends with a large bottle of his absolute cure, free to any sufferer who may send their P.O. and Express address. We advise anyone wishing a cure to address, Prof. W. H. PEEKE, F.D., 4 Cedar St., New York.

UNAMERICAN TEACHINGS.

Bishop Doane of Albany, N. Y., in an adddress to the graduating class of a female seminary, directed chiefly against the woman's suffrage movement, took occasion to attack the principle of manhood suffrage. He expressed the belief that "we shall be brought back to a democracy which shall demand for its existence government by men whom education and actual Americanism of final interest in the nation qualify to govern."

If this means anything it means that we have made a mistake in adopting manhood suffrage and that the ballot should be restricted to citizens of property and superior education. It is a mild expression of a combination of the brahminical and plutocratic doctrine that only the learned and the rich should have a part in government.

Attractive as this plan appears in theory, it has invariably worked badly in practice. If Bishop Doane had read history aright he would not have been deluded with the idea that the extension of the franchise is followed by a proportionate increase of corruption and dishonesty in government. On the other hand he would have known that this bugaboo of the classes has invariably proved a blessing to the community. While it has been viewed with fear and aversion by those whose so-called vested rights and special privileges it has curtailed it has tended constantly to purify politics and restore justice to government.

In every part of the world the extension of the ballot has been productive of purer politics and better government. The British Government was rotten to the core until the Reform Bill was passed, and in so far as the franchise has been extended in Great Britain politics has been cleansed and governmental standards have been elevated.

But our own country furnishes a no less striking comparison of government by the few and government by the many. Prof. McMasters, who is the best living authority on American history, has this to say of American politics under a restricted suffrage:

"A very little study of long-forgotten politics will suffice to show that in filibustering and gerrymandering, in stealing Governorships and Legislatures, in using force at the polls, in colonizing and in distributing patronage to whom patronage is due, in all the frauds and tricks that go to make up the worst form of practical politics, the men who founded our State and National Governments were always our equal, and often our masters. Yet they lived in times when universal suffrage did not exist, and when the franchise was everywhere guarded by property and religious qualifications of the strictest kind."

No property interest and no amount of learning will prevent the abuse of power which one set of men may possess over others. Universal suffrage is the best rectifier of governmental ills, not only because it puts a shield in the hand of every citizen, but because it brings the whole body of citizens under the most powerful of educational influences. The ballot is the greatest of popular educators.

If Bishop Doane does not know this he is unfit to teach young Americans of either sex.

THE INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL.

The frequent reports of resumption of work by industrial establishments which were closed during the recent depression, and of increases of wages, have led to a careful canvass of the industrial situation in the manufacturing centers of the country. The results offer most encouraging proof of a general and pronounced industrial revival.

The investigation covers the period from April 1, when the indications of reviving trade began to be manifest, to June 1. Within that time 227 manufacturing plants, which had been idle, resumed operation, giving employment to 53,400 operatives. The total number of employes who have received advances of wages of not less than 10 per cent in the same period is 178,000. The number of employes striking for higher wages has been reduced from 36,000 to 25,000.

This is a remarkable showing, not equaled for any period of equal duration within many years. It proves conclusively that the better times predicted at the beginning of the year are here. The effect of the renewal of profitable activity in manufacturing will be felt more and more in all branches of trade. The country is undoubtedly on the verge of as great a boom in business as our unsatisfactory financial system will permit.

SAFETY IN SUMMER PLEASURES.

The summer excursion will soon be in full blast, and, although the days have gone by when the Mississippi pilot tied down the safety valve in order to win the race with a competing boat, hardly a single season goes by without some more or less serious accident and even loss of life. A note of warning is necessary to the pleasure-loving public to look out for their own safety, and especially to bring to public attention all negligence on the part of those who plan excursions, by boat or rail, to provide for the safety of the thousands of lives in their care.

All cases of overloading of excursion boats, of failure to carry life boats and life preservers, and of allowing drunkenness, either among passengers or crew, should be promptly reported to the proper authorities and ventilated through the newspapers.

Inspection of steamboat boilers and of the general condition and capacity of excursion boats should now be strict and thorough. It is a case where the lives of thousands of women and children are at stake, and while excursions on the river and into the country save the lives of large numbers every year by enabling them to enjoy health-giving breezes and exhilarating change, all this is dearly purchased at the cost of holocausts by fire and wholesale drownings such as have taken place in some excursion seasons.

The city is growing so rapidly that each year will see vaster crowds hurrying to the near-by summer resorts and patronizing the excursion boats. Nothing but constant watchfulness can guard the pleasure-seeking public from danger and death.

SOME SELF-CHOSEN PEOPLE.

Amid the general unrest at the end of the century there is a strong tendency among the most restless and apprehensive to go far from the madding crowd and form colonies under new and untried conditions. Among the latest of such colony experiments is one that Mrs. Anna L. Diggs was to found on the Potomac, and still more recently an Indiana schoolmaster named Trueman L. Stewart was reported as about to lead out from Anderson, Ind., a chosen band to found a would-be Utopia in Tennessee.

Probably the most curious and interesting of these attempts to "flee from the wrath to come" are the colonies started by "prophet" Cyrus L. Teed, who styles himself "Koresh," and "prophet" H. E. Butler of California, who publishes an interesting little monthly called "The Esoteric," which seems to have a considerable circulation.

These two examples of the modern Moses have in common the two chief features of their millennial schemes, namely, the use of the Bible as a basis of their peculiar doctrines, and the idea of building an immense city—a new Jerusalem — whose inhabitants should live under communistic conditions.

The prophet of Koresh has already formed the nucleus for his city at Estero, Fla., and has issued a pamphlet telling in seductive style that it "will be laid out to contain thirty-six square miles. Its principal avenues will be 400 feet broad, with parks of fruit and nut trees the entire length of streets."

Prophet Butler is not so well advanced nor so grandiloquent. He has the nucleus of a colony, however, in California, his plans being more simple and pastoral, but not less communistic. One of the central ideas with each leader is that they are saving their followers "as brands from the burning." "Come out and be ye separate," they cry, and quote not only the Scriptures, but Gibbon and Hume, to show that conditions now are as bad all over the world as they were in a limited area before the fall of Rome.

In so inducing people to cut themselves off from their fellows, even repudiating the ties of family if need be, these men wilfully cast away the opportunity of helping to reform the world through the ballot and by personal example. They hold themselves higher than human law, and seek isolation when they should be at work among their fellow-sufferers if they really believe that universal ruin is so imminent.

THE WEAKNESS FOR TITLES.

Within the past few weeks a famous actor and an equally famous author of England have accepted Knighthood from their government. They have been "elevated," as the phrase goes, from the class of mere manhood in which they had won distinction to a "higher" plane occupied by great and little, good and bad, by men, some of whom are distinguished by merits of their own, some by the whim of officials. The badge itself is no criterion of worth. It is a purely conventional mark, which is so common that it no longer indicates character or worth, but on the contrary is often bought for money or awarded for doubtful political service.

Nevertheless these barbaric gawds have a wonderful hold on the imagination of men. Even the most superior are not always proof against the temptation to deck themselves with superfluous ornament and assume titles which are meaningless or have come to be positively ridiculous. To those who care nothing for externals the acceptance of these "honors" by Henry Irving and Walter Besant is a mystery which defies solution. It would seem to be a condescension on the part of men like Irving and Besant when they voluntarily surrender a well-earned place apart and enter a mixed company of personages, some of whom are persons and many not.

We are a long way yet from the simplicity of character which is thought to be the goal of human achievement. We are still bound up in externals and are prone to value the decorations of life rather than the realities. It is very hard to be simple.

THE WHEAT SHORTAGE.

To support their claims that damage to the winter wheat crop has been greatly exaggerated, R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, have pointed to the unusually large receipts of wheat at Western markets for this season of the year. The point they try to make is that farmers would not be selling their old wheat as freely as these receipts indicate if the new crop was threatened with serious shortage.

Unfortunately, the facts do not bear out this theory. The comparatively large receipts at Western markets are due more to the shifting of stock from one accumulative center to another than to increased farmers' deliveries.

The St. Louis market, for instance, having been almost cleaned out of its stock of wheat through sales to mills in the West, East and North has been drawing upon Chicago's stock for supplies. This is true also of Toledo, Kansas City and other Western markets whose stocks have been low.

A careful examination of the reports will show that a very small portion of the receipts of wheat at the primary markets for several weeks past has come directly from the country.

The Judges of the courts of Philadelphia propose to appear in gowns next fall, imagining that they will be much more impressive thus clothed. If the gowns of these Philadelphia Judges shall inspire no more respect than those worn in the Supreme Court of the United States have inspired, it is hardly worth while to get into them. Honest opinions and fairness to all classes impress the people much more than gowns or wigs.

It has been decided by several courts that bicycles are "vehicles" and as such subject to all the regulations laid down in the law for wagons and carriages. But notwithstanding this decision wheelmen continue to ride on the sidewalks to the discomfort and danger of pedestrians. The practice should be discontinued before some serious accident casts discredit upon the sport and provokes adverse legislation.

An Illinois legislator declares that the proposed inheritance tax is as bad as the income tax. Possibly the time is coming when there will be no tax whatever on wealth and the State may see its way clear to reward in some way these people who come into possession of large amounts which they have neither earned nor deserved.

A Florida barber, who ceased work and refused to go on after cutting off half the hair of a customer, has been sustained in court. The customer had not asked for credit until the job had proceeded thus far. If Florida precedents are to hold good we have reason to hope that this country will shortly be on a cash basis.

The clearings for the past week are exceptionally cheering. They show an advance over those of the corresponding week of last year of 24.9, practically 25 per cent. This is an advance of about 17 per cent over the returns of the corresponding week of 1893. There is a suggestion of a business boom in these figures.

Esteemed contemporaries, by means of lettered mats and other contrivances, are making touching appeals to people to "read them." The fact is, however, the great majority of the residents of this city are reading the Post-Dispatch, because it is the best and cheapest paper they can get.

The watchful and judicious advertiser does not throw his money away. He investigates and learns where to put it in order to realize the best returns. All advertisers should see the circulation books of the Post-Dispatch and get the benefit of the information they contain.

The Washington Post is an admirable joker, but it ought not to speak so lightly of the Pingree potato movement. The Pingree potato scheme has been a blessing, and whether it yields squashes or potatoes, it is deserving of recognition and encouragement.

A Kentucky poet is comforted by the belief that the bluegrass will wave over him when he is dead. Kentucky poets must have more wealth than most poets if they can leave enough to pay for keeping their graves sprinkled during the droughty seasons.

A Pittsburg Councilman wanted to bar bloomers from bicycling, but the rest of the Council did not dare to support him. The bicycle bloomer is evidently in this country to stay, even in Pittsburg.

A Chicago Alderman has just been burned in effigy. But Chicago Aldermen are not sensitive. They are in office for what they can make, and no amount of fire that does not scorch them personally will have much effect.

The biographical sketch of the new Attorney-General shows that he is eminently qualified to fill Olney's shoes. He was a Republican at one time and is the most successful corporation lawyer in Ohio.

There is another happy Englishman with a title. The American Duchess of Marlborough has settled £6,000 a year on her new husband. If the British aristocracy droops it is not for lack of American money.

If the city pays extra for the daily removal of the slaughter-house offal it will be a voluntary contribution to the handsome profits which Ed Butler makes on the stuff at his reduction factory.

When a resident of New York went to a police station to ask that a dead cat be removed he was arrested as a lunatic. The sanitary ideas of the New York police are evidently not up to date.

The great grandson of an African King has gone to Liberia to start a drug store. Should he conduct it on the Kansas plan he will soon have enough to buy himself a throne.

The guests at the Burden-Sloane wedding were worth $800,000,000. What a sweet relief the Supreme Court's income tax decision must have been to these unfortunate people.

A dishonored husband in Indiana fired nine shots at the guilty pair without hitting either of them. So poor a marksman would do better to leave his wrongs to the courts.

The School Board cannot find money enough to furnish accommodations for all the children, but it has no trouble in raising several thousands for the increase of salaries.

Rabbi Moses of Kentucky would never have driven the money changers out of the temple. On the contrary, he would have called out the militia to protect them.

The $7,000 required annually to support the luxury of three or four new dispensaries in the suburbs would do something towards completing the new City Hall.

Lord Dufferin is one of the most accomplished linguists of the day.

Paderewski will begin his third American tour on Oct. 30, next, in New York City.

M. Suares, a Jewish banker, has given $200,000 to the French archaeological school at Cairo.

Mr. Gladstone says that he looks upon Walter Scott as one of the great benefactors of his country, of Great Britain, and the world at large.

Postmaster General Wilson, who seldom smoked before he was 40, has become an inveterate smoker. Secretary Morton, on the other hand, has given up the habit.

Prince Dimitri Khilkoy, a Russian nobleman, has followed Tolstoi's advice and divided his estates among his peasants, having reserved only seven acres for himself, which he cultivates to support his family.

Count Leo Tolstoi is now engaged on two works—a novel and a religious and philosophical essay. The novel will appear simultaneously in several publications next June, and the essay is to be published by an English magazine.

Queen Victoria is never so well and free from rheumatism as when a dry, cold atmosphere prevails; and she has brought up all the members of her family to be hardy, so that on the coldest day there is none of the coddling over fires and shivering about the house which prevails with her less robust subjects.

David Is a Flirt.

From the Springfield Leader.

"Suppose you were to ask a lady whether she would marry a gentleman in case he should ask her, what would you think of her if she declined a proposal that might never be made?" Thus simpered the coy David R. Francis when a Cabinet appointment was hinted at in his presence. Many a modest maid has circumvented embarrassment by declaring herself in advance, David. The Tom Sawyer of politics is not a new character. We fear that delicate David is a flirt.

Hoss and Boss.

Written for the Post-Dispatch.

Boss and Committeemen,
Committeemen and Boss,
They all went out to the Fair Grounds races
To pick the winning hoss.

The hoss is a noble beast;
He runs with vigor and vim;
But woe to the party when its chiefs
Devote themselves to him.

THE PASSING SHOW.

The effort of metropolitan residents to raise flowers and enjoy them is both pitiful and interesting. When one sees the long and clinging vines which hang from the windows of the St. Louis Club and thereafter notes the green things which are a part of West End homes, he is inclined to hope that no matter what the frosts or droughts, the city gardens will live and prosper.

Flowers are not so hard to keep, after all. What they need is constant attention. Take the blue wisteria which brightens so many gardens in this town and it is an easy matter to keep it alive. Petunias are cheap and very pretty, and the only objection to them is that they lack scent. Ten acres of petunias will not give back a single whiff of perfume.

Palms and rubber plants are pretty only for their greenery, and they are easily kept if one will remember that every day they must be washed with a sponge and coddled as though they were children.

I notice palms and rubber plants all over the West End, but some of their leaves are yellow and they need attention. Still, rich people may do as they please about plants.

It is a matter of peculiar gratification that John M. Wood has been made a Judge of the Circuit Court of St. Louis. He has only been a resident of St. Louis a short while, but he brings with him to the bench the free air of the country, and in consequence his decisions will be characterized by independence. Somehow or other I like a country lawyer. He seems to have imbibed a large amount of patriotism and common sense. He is not moved by great financial considerations, and there is that within him which speaks of the Fourth of July. Now and then he is liable to be as mean as anybody, but as a rule the country lawyer comes nearer to patriotism than any other—and for that reason I hail the appointment of John M. Wood as an augury that there will be plain, unvarnished justice in our Circuit Court.

A city like that of St. Louis is a great kaleidoscope. Watch the people going to work of a morning and home of an evening and you will be surprised to find how little you know of the world.

The other day I stood at St. John's Methodist Church corner and watched the procession go by. There were all sorts and conditions of people. Some of them had bicycles which came out of Noah's Ark. Some of them were in vehicles similar to those ancient drags which I saw in old Mexico ten years ago. Others occupied buggies which in former days did duty for doctors and were long since discarded.

But I did enjoy the sight of cyclers and riders and walkers who came into the city on the latest improved machines, who seemed to be interested in life and all that it contains, who pushed forward in the race for position and did not appear to care whether they had observers or not. That is the class which eventually succeeds and doesn't owe you any thanks either.

There are very few chimes of church bells in St. Louis. The most noticeable, if not the only set, is that of the Pilgrim Congregational Church at Washington and Ewing avenues. The chimes were a gift from some generous gentleman in the East, but he had no idea of the disturbance he would cause in this community, or perhaps he would have given something more useful and interesting.

Nobody knows how many lawsuits have grown out of the Pilgrim Church chimes. Nobody who has not kept a record of passing events can tell you the number of profane or ill-fitting words which have been uttered in the neighborhood of Washington and Ewing avenues. Still, those who were most emphatic have moved away and those who remain are enthusiastic champions of the chimes.

Next Sunday will be children's day in all the Protestant churches of the city and it is already apparent that more than usual efforts are making for a celebration that will be an honor to the city and distinctively interesting to the children.

I think this programme whereby the little folks are specially remembered with a day of their own is a particularly good one, and it has accomplished a vast deal toward the development and growth of the Sunday-schools.

Missouri has rarely indulged in politics in an off-year, but just now the people seem to be in the throes of a prodigious campaign.

And it is all about the question of national finances, concerning which Republicans and Democrats are as divided among themselves as against each other. It is a question that will always have two or more sides, but there is an obvious preponderance of testimony in this State to show that at the present moment there is only one side uppermost. National finances is a subject of vast import and extensive detail, and a campaign which discusses and surveys it will at least have the merit of leading the people to learn something of the theories and principles underlying the very foundations of their government.

The appointment of Mr. Olney as Secretary of State of the United States was fully anticipated and discounted by public expectation. Just why it should have been is not clear. What special fitness Mr. Olney has for diplomacy is not known to anybody in this country, and it is somewhat curious that he should have been instantly named in the public mind for promotion. Probably on the theory that he has attained distinction as the leading light of plutocracy and that the portfolio of Secretary of State represents the "blue blood" or stands for whatever is aristocratic in our great Republic.

Mr. Cleveland has managed to make some large statesmen out of very obscure material and Mr. Olney is a conspicuous instance of it.

The numerous complications in the affairs of this Catholic diocese may lead to some important changes with respect to the holding of property by archbishops and priests acting as trustees. In the olden days it was well enough to hold and convey real estate by these means, but to-day it is so much simpler and more business-like to form a church corporation. No money is required to do this, and it places the temporal affairs of the church in a position where they will not depend upon one man for prosperity or for transfer.

The Catholic Church is very slow to make changes of any kind, but there appears to be a chance for reform in this direction which cries aloud for attention. The millions of property in this city owned by the church needs to be handled with considerable business skill and ability and it is growing more difficult to keep it dependent upon the health or caprice of any one person.

The young men who can afford to breakfast on sliced tomatoes at the St. Nicholas during these warm days and play billiards all evening at the St. Louis Club are much in evidence. They ought to be happy and they doubtless are.

But the fact that there are such young men brings to the surface the more instructive fact that St. Louis has a bunch of comparatinvely idle young men, after all. The city has boasted for a century that despite its age and aristocracy it had no real club men—no real club life; that all its inhabitants, whether rich or poor, are industrious and busy and that its club houses are empty during the business hours of the day.

But a great metropolitan city cannot remain in that condition. There comes a time in its development when dilletantism and idleness caused by unearned wealth become a fact, and so St. Louis, running along in its groove, has reached the pleasure-seeking clubman's stage at last.

The excursion season has opened with a vigor which promises larger patronage than ever before in the history of the city. Excursions are all right, provided the surroundings and conditions are right. It is probably true of St. Louis that no city has accomplished so much in the way of proper conditions, but at the same time there are numerous reforms which may yet be instituted. Rich and poor alike patronize the excursion—whether by rail or by steamer—and from this commingling of conditions should emanate an established regard for the decencies of life. The St. Louis excursion is as a rule clean and wholesome, but there are yet reforms which need to be agitated and pressed forward to fruition. Among them is that of illuminating all picnic grounds and making rules for the care and control of them. When this is done picnics will grow more and more popular.

Let the Facts Be Known.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

One of the Carnegie mills at Braddock, Pa., is being rebuilt as a tin-plate factory. We are also informed by the Republican organs that the manufacture of tin-plate is rapidly increasing and that the Secretary of the Treasury has suppressed the taking of tin-plate statistics lest this fact have to be admitted by Democratic tariff-destroyers. As the duties of tin-plate have been reduced to the rates prevailing before the McKinley revision, the force of all this as a high-tariff argument is not obvious.

Bland's Boom.

From the Springfield Leader.

A dispatch from Jefferson City says that a presidential boom for Bland is to be started there when the silver convention meets. A boom for Bland does not require starting. It is now on the way and it will make Democrats hustle to keep up with the procession.

A Massachusetts' Opinion.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Governor McKinley's State now reports another lynching, but it will not be charged to his use of the pardoning power. It is due to the lawlessness of the people of the affected locality, just as in the Danville (Ill.) case. The people of Danville, by the way, were fair enough to pass a resolution the other day at a public meeting to the effect that the double lynching there arose not from any lack of confidence in Governor Altgeld, but from the enormity of the crime. These Northern communities are thus ready to justify about every Southern lynching that takes place.

Right You Are.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

The cuckoo organs will find great satisfaction in printing the remarks of Mr. Sherman of Ohio, made yesterday at Zanesville. Mr. Sherman is the fountain head of the financial policy of the present administration.

Kick Him Up Stairs.

The Attorney General had one great case on his hands, and he lost it. Therefore he is promoted. Perhaps there is something he can do better than to represent the Government in court.

The Remedy.

From the Troy Free Press.

The recent session of the Missouri Legislature cost about $57,000. Although the direct benefits are rather small for such a large expenditure, the State will "get even" by the election of an honest Legislature in 1896—one which cannot be controlled by the lobby.

Twilight.

From the Yellow Book.

Spirit of Twilight, through your folded wings
I catch a glimpse of your averted face,
And rapturous, on a sudden, my soul sings,
"Is not this common earth a holy place?"

Spirit of Twilight, you are like a song
That sleeps, and waits a singer, like a hymn
That God finds lovely, and keeps near Him long,
Till it is choired by aureoled cherubim.

Spirit of Twilight, in the golden gloom
Of dreamland dim I sought you, and I found
A woman sitting in a silent room
Full of white flowers that moved and made no sound.

These white flowers were the thoughts you bring to all,
And the room's name is Mystery, where you sit,
Woman whom we call Twilight, when night's pall
You lift across our earth to cover it.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Committee Kinglets.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"And when all Israel saw that the King would not hearken unto them, the people answered the King saying, What justice have we in David? and we have none inheritance in the son Jesse. Every man to your tent, Oh, Israel!"

If it be permitted to a sinful layman, to take a text from the Scriptures, upon which to elaborate a proposition, we should select the one above quoted for our animadversions on the State Central Committee. This body of men has been selected but for one purpose—as the agents of the party, to speak for it, and to obey its behests. The people are supreme, yet they delegate to a few the province to form a constitution or to make laws, but they have never abrogated their undoubted right to meet and make both their constitution and laws.

We should have a new committee. The one now in existence is dominated by influences hostile to good government and party success. There is an absolute want of harmony among the members, and in three instances the real members are different from those whose names appear as members. In order to carry the next election there should be a most thorough and complete organization. The present committee, by the masterly manner in which the party was led to disaster and defeat by it in the last election, certainly demonstrated its absolute want of ability to cope with the men who are in control of the Republican organization. Therefore, "Every man to your tent, oh, Israel." SENEX.

Economy in Living.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Miss Skinner's letter in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch will never, I fear, start a boom in the matrimonial market.

I imagine some of our athletic young men and maidens looking aghast at a prospect of pea-soup-and-bread breakfasts and one-vegetable dinners.

Let us look nearer home for the cost of table board. My husband and I went to housekeeping calculating to supply our table at $5 a month apiece (Miss Skinner's figure also), because we knew of several friends who were doing it and living well. We are doing it now, as our monthly account at the grocery and my personal memoranda of expenses at the meat and vegetable market plainly show.

We both take our three meals at home and both are blessed with good appetites. Moreover, we do not believe that economy consists in doing without.

We have our coffee at breakfast and supper, besides two or three dishes and nearly always a little meat. Dinner is soup, one kind of meat, at least two kinds of vegetables, and dessert several times a week. Our economy may be summarized—no waste no fancy cuts of meat, home-grown vegetables and fruit. Yours for cheap living.

St. Louis, June 5. WEST END.

Swingley's Motives.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Had Chief Swingley come out openly and said: "I believe in the doctrine, 'to the victor belongs the spoils,' I stand squarely and flat-footed upon that platform, and will adhere to that principle until every political foe is relegated and my henchmen crowned with the laurels of our victory," then could we say, Mr. Swingley we believe you speak and act in a spirit of manly sincerity.

But no. Mr. Swingley has the betterment of the Fire Department at heart. He sees a marked degree of inefficiency in certain timber and plies his ax to lay it low. At the first fatal blow, a Hester, a Finnerty goes down. Hold! Mr. Swingley—have you really the interests of the city at heart? Are you a safe judge of competency and inefficiency? These men have a record familiar to the people. These men have a record that is an honor to themselves. These very men have proven themselves to be brave, courageous and fearless fire-eaters, and in dropping them from the service on the pretense of inefficiency you do them an injustice for which you can never make restitution were you to live to be the age of Methuselah. UNPREJUDICED.

St. Louis, June 8.

For the Chief's Consideration.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Kindly keep the ball rolling for justice started in your issue of yesterday, the 6th. It is time respectable people should rise against Chief Harrigan, for it is their money that is paying the police and not the disorderly women and the men who are backing them up. Take the district that the Pure Home Association are trying to save, and see the filthy gangs that are in different places, always ready to insult and humiliate decent people and to help drive them out of their homes for the sake of these women, while the police stand around and laugh at it. A decent person has no protection. There are some men on the police force whose rottenness should be shown up. If Chief Harrigan does not know this he should know it.

JUSTICE NO. 2.

St. Louis, June 7.

A Slaughter-House Nuisance.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The butcher, Schwenk, at, I think, No. 3712 Florissant avenue, pens up a lot of young calves in his slaughter-house for about three or four days out of a week, and you can about imagine what an annoying noise they create. A night of perfect rest is an utter impossibility, and in my estimation this ought not to be allowed among residences. Their yard adjoining their slaughterhouse is invariably in a most filthy condition and a disgrace to Florissant avenue.

Have spoken to my landlord about it and he promised to look into the matter, but so far he has neglected it, and I therefore apply to you for relief.

A POST-DISPATCH READER.

St. Louis, June 7.

The Ground Floor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

One of Mr. Cleveland's appointees took the writer hereof aside and proposed to give him some ground floor information. He said an agreement had been entered into between Mr. Cleveland's friends and Mr. Sherman's friends by which honest money people of both parties were to unite on Mr. Cleveland or John Sherman for the presidency. He said the bondholders, including the national bankers; the officeholders and all fixed salary men; the pensioners and the Grand Army of the Republic, could be relied upon to support the ticket; and that from the action of the large boards of trade and chambers of commerce, he thought the conservative business men of the country would support it also, while the agricultural and working classes would divide—some voting the Populist, some the straight Democratic and some the straight Republican tickets.

This may account for the action of the State Democratic Committee last Saturday. Those gentlemen are the custodians of the Democratic party in Missouri, and may have a deal in sight in which addition, division and silence will be the programme.

The Illinois Democrats have declared their independence of the political tricksters. Shall Missouri remain in the shambles?

St. Louis, June 7. BOIS D'ARC.

A Weary Knight's Protest.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The Constitution, I believe, says that everyone has the right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Yet right here in St. Louis, at the behest of a hotel keeper, who seems to think that he is monarch of all he surveys, the police keep people from sitting on public property, which they have as much right in as he has. It seems to me if a person has the right of sitting on one side of the Court-house, they have the same right to sit on the side facing the Planters' House, in spite of the protectorate established by the hotel keeper. They say that the owner of the St. Nicholas Hotel has established a protectorate in the same way over Government property facing his property.

In spite of A. P. A.'s and every other kind of A's organized to uphold the Constitution, every voter is sworn to uphold both the State and the United States Constitutions, yet it looks as if wealth is bigger than either constitutions or anything else. As Sam Jones says, "I guess you see the p'int." They and their patrons don't like to look while living luxuriously at people who don't know where the next meal is to come from. Is it not about time to quit making flesh of one and fish of another and have equal rights for all and privileges for none? If the police don't know the Constitution they should be furnished copies of the same, and if they go by that they will have no stancher friends than the [illegible] members of the BOYS IN BLUE FROM MANY STATES.

Will Camp at the Fair Grounds From July 1 to 7.

BIG LOCAL MILITARY EVENT.

$16,000 Will Be Hung Up for Prizes, and There Will Be a Sham Battle July 4.

St. Louis will be the scene of the most brilliant military pageant during the first week of July that has been witnessed in the West since the close of the Civil War. The great Interstate drill between the National Guard, Zouave and Cadet Companies of the United States will take place at the grounds of the St. Louis Fair Association from July 1 to 7 inclusive.

The premiums, amounting to $16,000, are offered by the Fair Association, and advices indicate that from twenty-five to thirty States will be represented in the drill. The Citizens' Committee having charge of the enterprise is composed of Col. M. C. Wetmore, Chairman; Col. H. A. Guinzburg, Secretary; Mayor C. P. Walbridge, Lieut-Gov. J. B. O'Meara, ex-Gov. D. R. Francis, Thos. K. Niedringhaus, L. G. McNair, Pierre Chouteau, Col. Wm. Bull, Wm. T. Haarstick, D. G. Cook, J. S. Walker, R. E. Filley, John O'F. Delany, D. S. Holmes, R. C. Kerens, Wm. H. Lee, Dr. H. J. McKellops, G. W. Niemann, John Scullin, John W. Turner, F. J. Wade, Frank Galennie, Chas. Hodgman, M. Rumsey, Robt. Aull, F. A. Wann, O. L. Mersman, Col. Jas. G. Butler, Alvah Mansur, Wm. F. Nolker.

The Military Committee is composed of Captain H. H. Hinton, Chairman; Capt. Frank M. Rumbold, Capt. C. A. Sinclair, Capt. E. A. Warren, Capt. E. V. Walsh, Capt. E. H. Loffhagen, Capt. Theo. Schultz.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Citizens' Committee was held at the offices of the Fair Association on Thursday. Col. M. C. Wetmore, Chairman, presided.

Mr. F. A. Wann, Chairman of the Railroad Committee, reported that satisfactory progress had been made in the way of securing a low rate to the encampment.

Col. H. A. Guinzburg reported that he had had a protracted interview with the Governor on the subject, and that Gov. Stone was impressed with the importance of the event and in sympathy with the success of the same. He further recited that the Governor would immediately issue invitations to the Governors of all the States in the Union to be present on Governors' Day, Saturday, July 6.

The Citizens' Committee will co-operate with the Governor in the matter of securing the attendance of the Governors of other States, and in pursuance of this policy instructed Secretary Guinzburg of the committee to immediately write letters to the Governors of all the States in the Union, inviting them to be present on Governors' Day. It is fully expected that the Governors of five or six of the States with their respective staffs will be present on Governors' Day.

The fact that an effort will be made to secure the attendance of Secretary of War Lamont has been made public, but the effort is by no means a half-hearted one, and it is expected that the Secretary will be here. The Fair Association have already written a cordial invitation to Secretary Lamont to be present, and this invitation was supplemented on Thursday by the following letter from the Citizens' Committee:

HON. DANIEL S. LAMONT, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR—On behalf of the citizens of the city of St. Louis we beg to extend to you a cordial invitation to be the guest of this city during the military drill and encampment to be held on the Fair Grounds and under the auspices of the St. Louis Fair Association, July 1 to 7 inclusive.

It is confidently believed by those in position to know that this will be a memorable event in the annals of military encampments.

The citizens of St. Louis are anxious for an opportunity to give expression to the feelings of high esteem they entertain for you, and are a unit in emphasizing through the Citizens' Committee their earnest hope that it will suit both your convenience and your inclinations to honor us with a visit at the time named.

Hoping to be advised at an early date that we shall be honored by your presence during the drill, we are, sir, with considerations of regard, very truly yours,

THE CITIZENS' COMMITTEE,
M. C. WETMORE, Chairman.
H. A. GUINZBURG, Secretary.

A similar invitation from the Fair Association has also gone forward to Gen. John M. Schofield.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, of the Loyal Legion and of the United Confederate Veterans have also been invited to be the guests of the city during the drill.

Secretary Gwynn of the Fair Association received a letter on Thursday stating that four crack companies from Washington City would enter the drill. Encouraging news from all over the country is being received, and it is confidently believed that this will be one of the greatest drills in the annals of interstate gatherings.

The Fair Association has all the arrangements for the entertainment of the companies at the Fair Grounds well under way. The camp will be laid out in a few days. The track fence in front of the grandstand will be removed immediately after the close of the races on the 22d, and everything will be in perfect readiness by the first of July.

On the Fourth of July a monster sham battle will be given in the afternoon. At night a fireworks display and artillery practice will be the features.

The Secretary of War will detail three United States officers as judges, and will send a battery of artillery and a troop of cavalry from Jefferson Barracks, Fort Leavenworth or Fort Sheridan.

The Citizens' Committee will entertain the invited guests.

Mayor C. P. Walbridge is taking great interest in the coming encampment. He has always been foremost in local military matters, and has, by his money, enthusiasm and work done a great deal toward building up the National Guard in St. Louis. When asked his opinion regarding the coming Interstate drill he enthusiastically said:

"It's a glorious project. Whenever the citizens of St. Louis put their broad shoulders to the wheel it means success. Look at the great prize list of $16,000 to be competed for in infantry, artillery and zouave drills. It is the richest amount I ever heard of being offered in State, interstate or any other military competition.

"Then again," said His Honor, getting warmed up, "what prettier and more attractive sight can you imagine than the beautifully select spot on the St. Louis Fair Grounds, literally covered with the militia of America, with their tents dotting the surface here and there, and their companies in battle array, ready for the prize action."

"There is no public enterprise," said Festus G. Wade, "which the citizens of St. Louis have undertaken in recent years, which is attracting more widespread attention and interest than the coming Interstate drill and encampment under the auspices of the St. Louis Fair Association on their unexcelled Fair Grounds. There is hearty co-operation on all sides, from Gov. Stone and his staff, from Mayor Walbridge, from the leading citizens of St. Louis in mercantile, social and commercial spheres. All the elements that contribute to the material wealth, the progressiveness and general prosperity of St. Louis are concentrated in the one grand object of making this stupendous project a glorious midsummer success."

Col. M. C. Wetmore of the Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Co. is likewise one of the most enthusiastic workers for the success of the Interstate Drill and Encampment.

"The Fair Grounds is the greatest place in America to hold a military encampment," said the Colonel. "Its convenience, accessibility, unsurpassed equipments, natural beauties and general accommodations give it advantages not enjoyed by any other institution in the world. This affair should attract all the distinguished military organizations, the Governors of the different States and their staffs, the leading military officials and a million people."

"The Citizens' Committee," said Col. Guinzburg, "is composed of St. Louis' representative business men. They appreciate the fact that a drill of this character will do more towards showing the people of the country that St. Louis is one of the progressive cities of the Union, and whenever anything is undertaken here it is done heartily and thoroughly."

The Branch Guards, under Capt. C. A. Sinclair, are drilling nightly for the first place. The Branches have held the Galveston cup, won at Indianapolis in 1892, and were reputed to be the best drilled company in the United States.

Company F of the First Regiment, under Capt. E. V. Walsh, is set upon winning first honors in the maiden drill at the encampment. The company is drilling every night and all day Sundays.

Judge Klein's Decisions.

Judge Klein Saturday handed down several opinions in Court-room No. 1. In the case of Edward D. Shaw vs. Henry Helmaller, a proceeding for an injunction to restrain the defendant from further prosecuting an attachment suit in Illinois against plaintiff and from seizing plaintiff's wages, which were exempt from garnishment, a motion to dissolve the injunction was overruled, thereby protecting Shaw.

Kate B. Degge vs. the American Express Co., a suit for damages by reason of injuries sustained in the transit of a picture en route to the World's Fair. The court held that the company was responsible and granted plaintiff a new trial.

Elishie Sheehan vs. the Fruin-Bambrick Construction Co.; action for damages; demurrer overruled.

Louis H. Haase, assignee of Charles A. Fischer, vs. Nelson Distilling Co.; suit to recover attached goods; judgment for defendant.

Henry M. Voris vs. City of St. Louis; suit for damages; judgment of $1,750 for plaintiff.

RECEIPTS FOR SIX MONTHS.

Report of the Illinois Central Railroad to Gov. Altgeld.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Gov. Altgeld to-day received the statement of the gross receipts of the Illinois Central road for the six months ended April 30, 1895, of which the State's share, seven per cent, amounts to $296,723.

Excepting during the fiscal year 1894, when the earnings of the railroad were so greatly reduced by the coal and A. R. U. strikes, the receipts of the railway, and consequently of the State therefrom, have invariably been larger from May 1 to October 31 than in the earlier half of the year. There is therefore every reason to expect that the State's receipts during the current year will exceed $600,000 and be greater than in any preceding year except 1893, when the World's Fair brought them up to $753,059.

Eastbound rates from Chicago have gone to utter smash. Nobody is making the slightest pretense of maintaining rates, and prices are pretty much what the shipper chooses to make them. Grain is openly taken at 15 cents, 5 cents under the agreed tariff, and other reductions are proportionate. The collapse of the money pool has broken down the last barrier, and rates are now in a more demoralized condition than they have been for the last five years. The money pool was not so much of a help in the maintenance of rates, but it assisted somewhat, and now even the aid that it afforded is gone.

The passenger officials of the Western roads will meet the early part of next week to inject if possible more life into the Western Lines Passenger Association. If they can agree on nothing the executive officers will take up the matter. All the lines seem to be hoping for an agreement, but none of them are expecting it with any great confidence.

FRATERNAL MEXICANS.

Anxious to Have the United States Prominent in Their Exposition.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The foreign director of the Mexican International Exposition, R. De Cornelia, arrived to-day. The exposition will be opened April 2, 1896, in the city of Mexico. Mr. Cornelia said the Mexican Government was anxious to have the United States the leading country represented.

"The Mexicans," said he, "are anxious that the United States shall enter into closer relations with them than any other countries. The greater part of the Mexican foreign trade is in the hands of French and German capitalists. They see no reason why their powerful neighbor, a leading commercial nation, should not have the greater part of the trade."

Twenty-two States of the Union have appointed State Commissioners. There will be for the United States four main buildings for manufactures, mechanical arts, agriculture and food products. Each will be 250 feet long and 100 feet wide. The grounds will include 600 acres, and will be situated between the castle of Chepultepec and the residence of President Diaz. The opening day will be the anniversary of the battle of Pueblo, when the French were driven out of Mexico. President Diaz was the hero of the battle, and the anniversary will mark the sixteenth year of his term of office.

A Pioneer Drug Store.

St. Louis abounds with large drug stores, and of late years, people have been able to purchase their favorite medicines at a price that would suggest that the druggist is losing money—but whether that be a fact or not, the druggists who do cut prices seem to prosper and grow rich. It is claimed the Anti-Monopoly Druggists on Sixth and Market streets are the pioneers of cut prices. Be that as it may, it certainly seems as if they are "in it" at present from the prices quoted by them in their attractive advertisement in to-day's issue of the Post-Dispatch. The Anti-Monopoly Drug Co. will remodel their store at Sixth and Market streets, and in order to make room for carpenters, decorators etc., will sell their entire stock below cost.

Everything in the line of drugs, patent medicines, toilet articles, sundries, etc., are offered at exceedingly low prices. To every lady and gentleman presenting coupon cut from their advertisement on page 24 the Anti-Monopoly Drug Co. will present a bottle of fine perfumery. Read their advertisement and cut out the coupon.

NEW TAMMANYITES.

Forty to Take the Oath of Allegiance to the Society.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A special meeting of the Tammany Society has been called for next Monday evening. The nominal purpose is to initiate new members, of whom there are forty who have yet to take the oath of allegiance. The Tammany Society in the future plans of Croker and Grant will be a much more important factor in Tammany Hall politics than at any time since the present leaders came into power. Mr. Croker absolutely controls the society through its council of sachems. With them he can control Tammany, even though reorganized by a committee of 100, and both he and the ex-Mayor believe it is necessary to restore enough confidence in Tammany to make success possible. That is the reason the friends of both Croker and Grant are hustling for new members of the society and are bringing them in fast enough to hold two meetings a month, when generally there are no meetings held in the summer. One of the most powerful leaders said to-night: "There is no doubt that Mr. Croker will resume the leadership this fall. We need him. We have no one else with his executive ability or powers of organization, and I believe he intends to help put Tammany back in power. I do not believe he will give up all his time to the organization as he did before. He will carry out his intention of putting the details in charge of a committee of three assistants. That was his idea when he offered to retire a year ago last month. Mr. Croker had no intention of getting out of politics or out of the leadership, but when he made the first break, Gilroy and his friends forced him out. This is well known in the Executive Committee."

The latter part of next week will see Tammany beginning the work of reorganization.

APPROVAL AT WASHINGTON.

Plans Filed by the New York and New Jersey Bridge Co.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—The plans filed by the New York and New Jersey Bridge Co. last Wednesday have already been submitted to the Chief of Engineers of the War Department and it is understood they have received his approval. They are now in the hands of the Judge Advocate General, from whom they will go directly to the Secretary of War, if the Judge Advocate General finds no flaw on their compliance with the law. It is understood that Secretary Lamont will affix his approval some time next week. As these plans are purely preliminary in nature, no point was involved requiring the approval of the Secretary save as to the height of the bridge and the width of the span. The detail plans will in turn be submitted to the close scrutiny of the Secretary.

Death Under the Wheels.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARGOULD, Ark., June 8.—Chas. Jeffreys, a 12-year-old boy, was killed in this city this morning by the North-bound local on the St. Louis & Southwestern Railroad. He was very badly mangled and died shortly after being hurt.

New York Ladies Who Will Participate in Tableaux Vivants.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Tableaux Vivants, under the direction of Mrs. Sutro, which recently proved so successful for the benefit of the Kindergarten and Potted Plant Association, are to be repeated Thursday evening, June 13, at Palmer's Theater, in aid of the New York music-room at the Atlanta Exposition. The tableaux, as on the former occasion, will be posed by artists and the models will be women of social prominence. Mrs. Hiram C. Von Kroh will pose as Carmen, Rhoda Nichols will pose as Mrs. Carlisle in her painting of "The Scarlet Letter." Mrs. Joseph B. Read, Chairman of the New York Committee of the Exposition, will appear as her own portrait by O. S. Parsons and several others will also appear.

Paying a Debt From War Times.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Police Justice Harriman has consented to pay to Joseph H. Clarke, who was formerly his apprentice, $70 in settlement of a debt that dates back to war times. The law committee of the local G. A. R. arbitrated the matter.

FITS CURED

(From U. S. Journal of Medicine.)

Prof. W. H. Peeke, who makes a specialty of Epilepsy, has without doubt treated and cured more cases than any living Physician; his success is astonishing. We have heard of cases of 20 years' standing cured by him. He publishes a valuable work on this disease which he sends with a large bottle of his absolute cure, free to any sufferer who may send their P.O. and Express address. We advise anyone wishing a cure to address, Prof. W. H. PEEKE, F. D., 4 Cedar St., New York.

FARADAY BEAT O'CONNELL EASILY.

Gray Horse Won the Last Stake of the Meeting.

SAN BLAS WAS UNPLACED.

Southerner, at 15 to 1, Captured the Two-Mile Race From Rapidan and Cyantha.

The Mound City Handicap, worth $1,500 to the winner, was the feature of the card yesterday at the Fair Grounds and it was won by Col. Bob Holloway's sensational gray horse Faraday, who galloped away from such good ones as The Ironmaster, O'Connell, Figaro, San Blas and Cadmus. Faraday and O'Connell were about equal favorites, 9 to 5 being the average price of each. The big plungers led by Faraday's owner and P. A. Brady were all down on the gray horse, but O'Connell never lacked support and the bookies took a lot of straight money on him.

The story of the race is easy to tell. O'Connell made the running, chased by The Ironmaster and Faraday, but when it came to the final issue in the stretch the big son of Harry O'Fallon "chucked it up" and let Faraday beat him easily.

Next in point of interest to the stake race was the two-mile contest. The poorest class of "cattle" at the track went to the post, but it proved an interesting race, nevertheless. The lightweighted Lonsdale made the pace, leading for the first mile and a quarter. Then he fell back completely worn out and after the race was finished, his jockey, a little yellow boy named P. Jordan, became dizzy and sick in the scales room and had to be looked after by one of the track physicians.

Charm, the favorite, was beaten by Rey del Mar, a 10 to 1 shot, in the last race. The judges did not think Garner had ridden Honig's filly as vigorously as he might, but Owner Honig convinced them that he was betting on his filly, and Master Garner was let off with a warning. Honig made his bet with Leo Mayer, who took but one or two other wagers on Charm.

Barney Schreiber captured the first race with Doyle, and came mighty near winning the second with Schiller, who gave Green Morris' Sir Play a red hot argument for the money. Tea Set, the favorite, was unplaced in the fourth race, which was won by Danton, backed from 4 down to 3 to 1.

Southerner, winner of the two mile race, was well played by a select division of the sharpshooters at the enticing odds of 12 and 15 to 1.

Rey del Mar was also backed by those who remembered his good third to O'Connell and Buck Massie the day the former ran seven-eighths of a mile in 1:27½.

Pleasant weather drew the usual big Saturday crowd to the track, and the going was in splendid condition.

The purses for the supplementary meeting of two weeks commencing Monday have been cut to $300 and $400. Quite a number of the big owners are very much dissatisfied at the cut, but with the exception of Green Morris and one or two others, it is thought they will continue to race here. Morris says he will take his horses away today.

MOUND CITY HANDICAP.

Six horses started in the stake race, the scratches being Handspun, Sumo, Linda, Trenton, John Cooper and Simmons. Faraday and O'Connell were always the favorites, while the prices against Cadmus and Figaro lengthened out from 3 to 1 to 6 to 1, and 5 to 8 to 1, respectively. Corrigan's representative, The Ironmaster, could be had at 15 to 1, and the Mississippi Valley Stake winner, San Blas, the despised outsider at 2 5to 1.

They got off in front of the club house with Faraday leading, San Blas second and Figaro third. Around the turn O'Connell shot through the bunch and before they straightened out for the run up the back stretch, the big chestnut was in front, running like a house afire.

The Ironmaster and Faraday were behind, but neither got anywhere near him until they struck the stretch. Then the gray horse passed The Ironmaster and challenged O'Connell. The latter's backers did not suppose that anything in the race would ever be able to catch him, but Faraday was equal to the job, and when he got to the big gelding it was all over.

O'Connell had all he wanted, and Faraday went by him as though he was anchored, winning easily, with two lengths to the good. O'Connell beat Figaro for second money, and San Blas saved his stake by running fourth, one length behind Figaro. The Ironmaster was a length behind San Blas, with Cadmus trailing along two lengths away. Cadmus' race was a big disappointment to the handicappers. He figured well, and when Schreiber laid even money against his chances of showing the smartest bettors at the track flooded him with big money on Cadmus to run third. Felix Carr was to have ridden Cadmus, but could not make the weight; Ross was secured at the last minute. San Blas' good fourth was as big a surprise as the poor showing made by Cadmus. Both horse and jockey were thought to be outclassed, as the price would indicate, but Larrisey's breadwinner proved that his defeat of the Ironmaster Thursday was no fluke, by giving Corrigan's horse another sound thrashing. Faraday's victory enabled the Murphy-Holloway confederacy to take a lot of money out of the ring. This is the second stake won by the same stable during the past week, Arcadia having carried the white and orange to victory in the Brewers' handicap for 2-year-olds last Tuesday.

THE OTHER EVENTS.

Six 3-year-olds went to the post in the first race, with Dr. Work a listless favorite at evens and 2 to 1. Pow Wow, backed from 8 down to 4 to 1, and Lottie Altar, backed from 3 to 1 down to 13 to 5, were most in demand. Doyle got off in front, but was soon passed by Trenola, who made the running, chased by Doyle. In the straight Doyle came to the front and won easily by nearly two lengths. Pow Wow, who had gotten off last and worked his way up, beat Trenola a head for second money.

Philetta and Sir Play were equal favorites at 8 to 5 each for the second race, but Philetta failed to run one, two, three, and although Sir Play won, it was only by a narrow margin in a red-hot drive from Schiller, a 15 to 1 chance, from Schreiber's stable. Sir Play made all the running and Schiller came from behind in the stretch. Keechler was third, eight lengths behind the struggling first two.

Sixteen cheap platers faced the starter in the fourth race and Mr. Ferguson got them off in surprisingly good shape, although Upman, who had refused to break, was left. Leader Ban cut out the pace to the half, when Danton came from third place and won ridden out by a length from Galen Brown. Dick Deneath was third, only a neck behind. Tea Set, the 2 to 1 favorite, proved a big disappointment, finishing in the ruck. Danton closed equal second pick at 4 to 1 with Grafton, who was also unplaced.

Eleven started in the two mile race. Barney Schreiber's King Mac was the pick at evens and 8 to 5, but he failed to get a chalk mark, the winner turning up unexpectedly in the 15 to 1 shot Southerner, who beat Rapidan, one-half a length. Cyantha was third, two lengths away. Hartford sulked and refused to run.

Charm, backed from 7 to 5 down to 6 to 5, and Lizzetta at 5 to 2, were the picks in the last race, but both were beaten out by Rey del Mar, an 8 to 1 chance. Lizzetta led into the stretch and then fell back. Rey del Mar won in a tight fit from Charm, with Lizzetta third, five lengths back.

DRIVING CLUB MATINEE.

Montroy Defeated Brenner and Morello in the 2:39 Trot.

Those who went out to the Driving Club matinee races yesterday expecting to witness some good sport were not disappointed. It was one of the best meetings of the season, notwithstanding the fact that the three events were won in straight heats. The attendance was quite large and a growing interest in these Saturday afternoon matinees is quite apparent.

The 3:00 exhibition pace was won by the sorrel gelding Unique, by Hambrino, from Spelbrink's Montezuma stables, pacing the second heat in 2:31¾. George W. Julian's gelding John Gill gave him a hot race the first heat and L. Petersen's Abdallah filly and Theo. Herold's J. W. Telford went after him the second mile.

Clairwood, owned and driven by Wm. Bernsdorf, had but little trouble in winning the 2:54 trot. In the 2:39 trot there was the usual good race. First honors were awarded to the bay gelding Montroy, entered by the Colman stock farm and driven by Carl Rothenheber. Brenner, bay gelding driven by Geo. W. Julian, finished second in every heat and was well enough up to make it interesting for the winner. The first heat was trotted in 2:38¼. The summaries:

3:00 exhibition pace, mile heats, two in three:

CLUB NOTES.

The programme for Saturday, June 15, will contain a free-for-all mixed exhibition, trot and pace; 2:43 purse trot and a 2:50 purse trot. Entries close on Friday at 1 o'clock.

N. S. Kaime will ship his Red Wilkes stallion, D. W. B., now at the Marshallfield stock farm, to New Hampshire, this week.

Guy S. Warren, one of the club's new young members, has lately brought from Kentucky the 3-year-old filly Wickla by Wickliffe 2520, son of George Wilkes—dam Leshia Time by Mambrino Time.

The bay gelding Dave Cox, 2:29¼, seen frequently in the club's races last year, is said to hold the European trotting record in a two-mile race. He was owned while in St. Louis by J. C. Sharp, but secured his mark in Mexico, Mo., in August last.

M. C. Cookston has sold the brood mare Nettie Morgan to A. C. Danforth, Washington, Ill. She is by Baron Wilkes and a full sister to Rubenstein, 2:08—dam Ollitippa by Aristos.

OUR JACK'S VICTORY.

Hamilton Won With Him in the Domino Handicap at Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, June 8.—There was an excellent attendance at Gravesend to-day, and the spectators were well paid for their journey to the track, as the racing was as good as on any day of the meeting. The Domino handicap brought out a good lot of horses, although Sir Walter, the top weight, was scratched. Rubicon was soon settled upon as the favorite and was well backed, although he has never shown a liking for anything over a mile in fast company. He did not care for as much as that to-day, and gave it up at the end of the three-quarters. Soon after the flag fell to a good start Owlet took the lead, and held it to the stretch, when Our Jack shot out from the bunch and won easily. In the Madison stakes, Sebastian was the favorite, but the best he could do was third, Brisk winning. Except that there was a poor start in the fifth, the races were devoid of special features. The summaries:

First race, six furlongs, selling—Factotum 102 (Keefe), 8 to 1, first; Chiswick 104 (Penn), 10 to 1, second; Adelbert 116 (Taral), 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:15. Ameer, Interior, Cockado, Will Fonso, Tom Skidmore, Shelly Tuttle, Parvenue, Ella Reed and Gala also ran.

Second race, one mile—Redskin 114 (Doggett), 7 to 5, first; Captain T. (Keefe), 6 to 1, second; Beldemere 113 (Taral), 11 to 5, third. Time, 1:42½. Waltzer, Ingoldsby, St. Michael and Miss Dixie also ran.

Third race, Madison stakes, five furlongs—Brisk 104 (Penn), 11 to 5, first by a neck; Religion 93 (O. Leary), 5 to 2, second; Sebastian 105 (Griffin), 4 to 1, third. Time, 1:02¼. Del Coronado also ran.

Fourth race, Domino handicap, one and one-sixteenth miles—Our Jack 102 (Hamilton), 10 to 1, first; Stowaway 113 (Taral), 6 to 1, second; Peacemaker 100 (Penn), 4 to 1, third. Time, 1:48¾. Rubicon, Declare, Owlet and Gotham also ran.

Fifth race, five furlongs—The Native 106 (Doggett), 4 to 5, first; Heresy 103 (Griffin), 6 to 1, second; Tenderness 106 (Penn), 2 to 1, third. Time, 1:02½. Raynor, Perseus, Skyblue and Fred Train also ran.

Sixth race, one and one-eighth miles, selling—Sir Dixon, Jr., 93 (Keefe), 8 to 5, first; Sue Kittie 89 (O. Leary), 8 to 1, second; Charade 123 (Doggett), 10 to 1, third. Time, 1:56¾. Beansy, Lochinvar, Longbridge, Little Matt and George Dixon also ran.

South Side's New Departure.

The South Side Park officials propose to make the electric light track as popular with the ladies as with the gentlemen. Commencing this week, every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening will be given over to the ladies, they being admitted on those evenings to all privileges free.

Track Talk.

Another gentleman's race will be run at the Fair Grounds next Saturday afternoon.

P. A. Brady is one of the biggest bettors in the ring these days. He had $500 straight at 2 to 1 on Faraday.

Sam Adler would like to bet $1,000 even that Libertine cannot beat O'Connell at six furlongs.

Everybody is anxious to see O'Connell, Libertine, Maid Marion and Dr. Hasbrouck come together at six furlongs.

Ben Fly received a telegram from Joe Murphy yesterday stating that Harlem would reopen next Thursday sure.

LONG SHOT TO THE FRONT AGAIN.

Latonia Oaks Captured by a Rank Outsider.

LEAFLET AT LENGTHY ODDS.

Thirty to One Could Be Had Against the Winner, and the Favorite, Hessie, Was Disqualified.

CINCINNATI, O., June 8.—There was an immense attendance at Latonia to-day, fully 9,000 people, with more than half the grand stand filled with ladies. The chief event of a splendid card of races was the thirteenth renewal of the Latonia Oaks, won by Leaflet, against whom as good as 30 to 1 was laid. The odds on favorite Hessie, finished second, but was disqualified for a very palpable foul of Favorine in the stretch. The latter would probably have won the stake had she not been interfered with. Summaries:

First race, selling, six furlongs—Piccaroon 100 (Walker), 8 to 5, first; Susie R. 104 (Perkins), 2 to 1, second; Begue 98 (W. Jones), 6 to 1, third. Time, 1:15¾. Sunburst, Jurist, Quickstep, Eva L., Franklin and Mary Lou also ran.

Second race, selling, mile and an eighth—Ashland 97 (W. Jones), 10 to 1, first; Toots 92 (R. (Isom), 4 to 1, second; La Joya 102 (Perkins), 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:55. Elva, Ray S., Bessie Bisland, Sigurd and Pittsburg also ran.

Third race, free handicap for 3-year-olds, seven furlongs—Buckwa 110 (R. Williams), 8 to 5, first; Chant 109 (Martin), 8 to 5, second; Selika 105 (H. Williams), 5 to 1, third. Time, 1:28½. The Reaper, Brandoo, Laureate, Fair Faith and Lehman also ran. Buckwa and Chant coupled in betting as Smith's entry.

Fourth race, the Latonia Oaks, one mile and a quarter, net value of stake to winner, $3,975—Leaflet 105 (R. Isom), 30 to 1, first; Favorine 107 (Perkins), 7 to 1, second; Jane 117 (Martin), 5 to 1, third. Time, 2:09½. Hazeema, Queen May and Carrie Lyle also ran. Hessie finished second, but was disqualified for fouling Favorine.

Fifth race, five furlongs—Moylan 115 (Perkins), 1 to 3, first; Onaretto 102 (R. Isom), 7 to 2, second; Royal Choice 115 (Chorn), 10 to 1, third. Time, 1:02¾. Cochina, Americus, St. Lee and Saraoff also ran.

Sixth race, selling, six furlongs—Capt. Drane 110 (R. Williams), 7 to 2, first; Joe Mack 110 (Perkins), 11 to 10, second; Tanroid 89 (H. Williams), 50 to 1, third. Time, 1:15¾. Belle Foster, Royal Spirit, Horace Argo, Billy Bennett, Koko and Lady Popper also ran.

CASH DAY WON.

Carmichael's Colt Defeats Evanatus and William T. at Hawthorne.

HAWTHORNE, Ill., June 8.—To-day's results were as follows:

First race, one mile—Paron 99 (Magnussen), even, first; King Bors 105 (Clerico), 6 to 1, second; Hannon 92 (Soden), 8 to 1, third. Time, 1:42¾. Weola, Capt. Spencer, Glen Luck and My Hebe also ran.

Second race, seven furlongs—Cash Day 112 (Ballard), 1 to 2, first; William T. 110 Clerico), 3 to 1, second; Evanatus 101 (Irving), 30 to 1, third. Time, 1:27¼. Montalvo and Gateway also ran.

Third race, five furlongs—Kamsin 118 (Cochran), 5 to 2, first; Frontier 110 (Irving), 3 to 1, second; Scimitar 103 (Soden), 4 to 1, third. Time, 1:02¾. Etna, Strawbertha Belfour, Hoffman and Hester also ran.

Fourth race, six furlongs—Ottyana 109 (Covington), even, first; St. Croix 105 (Krause), 7 to 1, second; Floreanna 108 (Rose), 50 to 1, third. Time, 1:15¾. Blaze Duke, May Rose, Empera, Treasure, St. Pat and Anna Mayes also ran.

Fifth race, steeplechase, short course—San Gabriel 127 (Coughlin), 50 to 1, first; Silverado 133 (Blakely), 6 to 1, second; Miles Standish 164 (Stanford), 3 to 1, third. Time, 3:28¼. My Luck, Bedford, Orrin Rogers, Scamp and Lawyer also ran.

Roby Results.

ROBY, Ind., June 8.—Results:

First race, six furlongs—Kingsclere first, Ulster second, Saybrook third. Time, 1:18¼.

Second race, five furlongs—Gretchen first, Sobriquet second; Cassie Nell third. Time, 1:05.

Third race, seven furlongs—Queen Bess first, Damask second; The Rook third. Time, 1:31¾.

Fourth race, six and a half furlongs—Tit-for-Tat first, Lulu T. second, Marden Pet third. Time, 1:28¾.

Fifth race, six furlongs—Wild Arab first, Bennie June second, Baldur third. Time, 1:18½.

Sixth race, one mile—El Reno first, Gunwad second, Genoid third. Time, 1:45.

Mr. George H. Rawlings, formerly of Rawlings Bros., has returned to this city to assume charge of the retail department of the E. C. Meacham Arms Co. George has always been very popular with sportsmen, and his host of friends will doubtless welcome him with open arms to their midst, and St. Louis congratulate herself upon the return of a good citizen. George will be pleased to see his friends at any time at 306 and 308 North Fourth street.

Alton Editor Missing.

ALTON, ILL., June 8.—C. R. Brinton, editor and publisher of the Morning Advance, disappeared yesterday. His absence is noted particularly because he is under bond to appear on a charge of criminal libel, and his bondsmen are uneasy. City Marshal Kuhn to-day sent dispatches to surrounding cities in hopes of securing his detention.

Mr. Albert Aal of the firm of Becker & Aal, 515 Olive street, left for New York last evening to be present at a large sale of furs that will take place in that city next week.

LONDON GOSSIP.

Opening of Ascot Heath Now Engaging Attention.

LONDON, June 8.—The rumors so persistently circulated recently of the probability of an early dissolution of Parliament are gradually dying out, as the moving spirits of both the Conservative and Liberal parties have already been made up for the racing at Ascot Heath, which will begin on Tuesday next and last until Friday, inclusive. There will be assembled Britain's noblest and richest, and small fortunes will change hands daily in the wholesale betting which will take place almost within sight of Windsor Castle. All will be out in force, and no doubt Nazrulla Khan, the Afghan Prince, who has been feted and petted until the very mention of his name to the sober-minded citizen is almost nauseating, will be there in all his half-savage glory. There is the usual row about tickets of admission to the royal inclosure. The Conservatives assert that Ascot suffers terribly in its former exclusiveness on account of the Liberals being in power, as the Master of the Buckhounds, Lord Ribblesdale, who has charge of such matters, is obliged, it is claimed, to admit the wives and families of his Radical supporters.

These conditions, of which a ticket of admission to the grand-stand at Ascot Heath contains the following clause: "If the holder is in default in respect to stakes, forfeits or bets on horse racing or has been guilty of any fraudulent practice on the turf or any matters connected with it, or shall display or make use of any stool, color, hat or number, badge or name, or other device for the purpose of betting or take money in advance for bets, or make bets 'past the post,' his ticket will be forfeited and he will be expelled from the stand and inclosure without having any claim to the return of the money paid for his ticket."

But there are people who do not look upon being present at Ascot as a great honor. Vanity fair, for instance, considers it to be "no compliment to be one of such a mixed and ill-dressed crowd." Last year, it says the lawn was swarming with people who had never seen royalty before and who stood staring straight at the royal box.

It is announced that Dr. Pin, the English lawn tennis champion, who has for the third time just captured the Irish championship and won outright the Fitzwilliam cup, has decided to retire from the tennis field, owing to his growing practice as a doctor.

The joy over the Prince of Wales' victory with Florizell in the race for the Manchester Cup is naturally heightened by the Americans' defeat and the belief that the Trans-Atlantic visitors lost heavily.

The Sun, commenting on the defeat of Mr. Dwyer's Banquet II., says:

"Our visitors' cleverness is only visible when they are running a horse in tenth-rate company. The first time they met a fairly representative field, both horse and jocked failed to meet expectations."

Great crowds of English and Americans are leaving to-day for Paris in order to witness the race for the Grand Prize of Paris of 200,000 francs for entire colts and fillies foaled in 1892, which is to take place to-morrow over the Grand Course, about one mile and seven furlongs. The English will make a determined effort to capture this prize. There will be about 16 starters, including Kirk Connell and Soloro. The Britishers will play a bold game in order to prevent foul riding. The Anglo-French jockeys and horses are to be guarded by great numbers of detectives and the racers will be lead to the course accompanied by many policemen. The latest betting is 3 to 1 against Omnium II., 8 to 1 against Soloro and 10 to 1 against Kirk Connell.

Many disconsolate Americans returned from Manchester last night and this morning, having lost heavily on Banquet, in the race for the Manchester Cup, won by the Prince of Wales' Florizell II., and they are not consoled in any degree by the knowledge that Mr. Richard Croker, who was looked upon to back the Dwyer horse, won on the Princes's entry. The bookmakers and others were astonished at the way Messrs. Croker, Dwyer and other Americans bet. They are adverse to taking bets from the Americans, who, they say, have no regard for the value of money.

Mr. Dwyer has engaged Mr. Miller, formerly purser of the American Line steamship Paris, as his general manager here.

Mr. Croker is devoting much of his time to his society. He gives dinner parties and has a box at the opera. Mr. and Mrs. Croker left for Ireland, where the former is to complete the purchase of an estate.

A heavy consignment of American and Canadian horses were sold here yesterday. They were much admired and found many buyers. Twenty-two Canadian horses averaged 30 guineas apiece, and twenty-four Canadian horses which were landed from the steamer Carlisle City a few days ago, were sold at the same average price. Nineteen American horses, exported by W. H. Forrester of Iowa brought an average of 23 guineas each.

England's greatest hero at present is her famous cricketer, Dr. W. C. Grace, and the talk of conferring the honor of knighthood upon him, which began in jest, is now urged in earnest.

Various public testimonials are to be given to Dr. Grace, and the Daily Telegraph to-day opens a shilling subscription to a fund for him, asks cricketers throughout the world to contribute to it, and heads the list with 2,000 shillings.

Prof. Andrew D. White, First President of the Cornell University, is greatly interested in the success of the Cornell crew, now training at Henley-on-Thames for the race for the Grand Visitors' Challenge Cup. He has arranged to have the Cornell Glee Club to make its first appearance in England at the reception which the United States Ambassador is to give on the Fourth of July.

SUBURBAN CANDIDATES.

Horses Entered for the Big Stake Suffering With a Cough.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Unfavorable weather during the last week has had a bad effect upon some of the entries for the Suburban Handicap, which is to be run at Sheepshead Bay next Saturday. Nearly all those now at Gravesend or Sheepshead Bay are, however, given work daily, and will be until the date of the big event. Many of the horses are coughing badly.

The Santa Anita string is troubled with this complaint more than any others at Gravesend. Rey del Caredes and Lady Diamond are suffering so much that their trainer has stopped their work and put them under a course of treatment.

Rey El Santa Anita is almost himself again, and did a mile very handily yesterday morning without showing any sign of his recent trouble.

Matt Allen's string, which suffered from mouth disease, is all right, and in active training again. This string will soon leave for Saratoga to recuperate before the meeting begins. Most of the candidates are quartered at Gravesend and Sheepshead Bay. Bassetlaw is likely to be a starter, as he is getting a nice preparation after his illness. Pittsburg Phil's Candelabra is a strong favorite among a select coterie. He is being sent from a mile and a quarter to a mile and a half every other day with 105 pounds.

Domino has received a royal preparation. Hornpipe is himself, and does not show a particle of the lameness which he had after his Brooklyn Handicap victory. Declare showed on Thursday that he is in rare form again, and if the track is very heavy he will likely go to the post. The Dutch Skater was doing well before he was shipped to Baltimore. It is not probable that he will go to the post. The same may be said of Ed Kearney and Flora Thornton. The latter is a good mare and a rare stayer over a distance of ground. Gotham is a good 3-year-old, and if all goes well with him on the day of the race Col. Ruppert's colors will likely be close up at the finish. Lazzarone is doing well, but he appears to have gone out of form since the great race he ran in the Brooklyn Handicap.

Ramapo is receiving a careful preparation, and will go to the post. Rubicon is doing well and will likely be a contestant. Sir Walter will most likely figure on the card.

Mr. A. Waldheim, senior member of the firm of May, Stern & Co., the large house furnishing establishment at Eleventh and Olive streets, returned to the city yesterday after an absence of several weeks in the East, where he has made large purchases of beautiful goods for the fall trade. May, Stern & Co. have created consternation among their competitors recently, by advertising and selling the justly celebrated "Quick Meal Stoves" for $2 less than the regular price for these goods.

WEDDED TO HER ART.

Californians Fear Actress Clemmons May Not Marry Howard.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 8.—It is stated here that Howard Gould and Miss Katherine Clemmons became engaged in London more than nine months ago, and that not only was it not kept a secret from Miss Clemmons' family, but that the actress did not pledge her troth until she had consulted with her mother, Mrs. F. W. Dayan, and obtained her consent. The young woman is so devoted to her profession and so anxious to become a star of the legitimate school that her family fear that it will be hard for her to give it up. The wedding day has not yet been set, but it is said to be probable that the couple will come out to California and be married at the pretty summer home of the bride's parents at Palo Alto.

Chain Around the Skeleton's Neck.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

SOUTH MCALESTER, I. T., June 8.—Some workmen while digging post-holes at South Canadian unearthed a human skeleton with a chain around its neck. The identity of the remains is unknown.

EHRET WAS A VERY EASY MARK.

The Washingtons Play All Around the Browns.

SENATORS MADE NO ERRORS.

They Jumped on the Browns in the First Inning and Never Let St. Louis Catch Them.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—Ehret proved an easy mark for the Senators to-day and they played all around the Browns. So easy was it for the home team that Anderson was taken out of the box and Stockdale was put in his place.

The Washingtons started out to make runs in the first inning. They had piled up four before the St. Louis team was aware of what was being done and the Senators never let them catch them afterward. Four more were made in the fifth and three in the ninth with enough scattered here and there to swell the total to 14, while the Browns by a few hits managed to make two in the fourth, one in the sixth and three in the seventh.

The home team played an errorless game, while Cooley, Miller, Peitz and Ely each had a black mark registered against them.

Washington made no less than five two-base hits and two three-baggers, while outside the scattering singles Cooley knocked out the only good ones for the Browns, making a home run.

Ehret sent eight men to first on balls and did succeed in striking out two men.

FOUGHT ON THE FIELD.

Disgraceful Exhibition Given by the New York and Pittsburg Players.

NEW YORK, June 8.—There was war at the Polo Grounds to-day and Manager Doyle was ordered out of the game for protesting. Wilson spiked Killen and knocked the ball out of his hands. Killen retaliated and swung his right at Wilson without landing. Wilson came back in the same way, also missing. The Police Captain finally decided to call a halt. He walked to the plate and ordered the New York players to the bench. Killen was forced to retire, Hawley taking his place. Killen will be laid up for several days.

The story of the game can be told in a few words. The Pirates played fast ball and the home team was unable to stand the pace. Score:

YALE THE CHAMPIONS.

Won the Second Intercollegiate Game From Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 8.—Yale won the inter-collegiate championship to-day. Easton pitched effective ball, but was for some unaccountable reason sent to center. Alteman proved less effective and gave way to Wilson. Carter, whose arm was in bad shape, was fairly pounded out of the box in two innings and Trudeau replaced him. The game was replete with costly errors. The score:

Wabash College Won.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., June 8.—Wabash College Base Ball Team this afternoon defeated the State Normals of Terre Haute by a score of 22 to 12. It was the last game in the State championship series, and Wabash College has second place.

Future Capitals Reorganized.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

SEDALIA, Mo., June 8.—The Future Capital Base Ball Nine, which recently disbanded owing to internal dissension, was reorganized last night. The following officers were elected: Manager, Dr. S. S. Crow; Secretary, Ben P. Goodwin. The club has good backing and is ready for all comers.

COLLEGIATES' FIELD DAY.

Results of the Athletic Exhibitions on the Christian Brothers' Grounds.

The delightful weather of yesterday, together with a most interesting programme of athletic events, served to draw a large crowd to the college campus. The students of the various city schools were out in force and enlivened the proceedings with their college yells. The sub-freshman class of the college was distinguished above all others by their neat uniforms, class colors and characteristic cheers. The events were run off in order, with the following results:

Midget race—Fr. Murphy, first; Fred Storms, second.

Egg race—Geo. Bailey, first; E. Rosenberger, second.

100-yard dash, intermediates, handicap—B. Hunter, first; C. Chambers, second.

100-yard dash, seniors, handicap—T. Bland, first, time, :10¾; M. Levy, second.

Running broad jump—T. Bland, first, 20 feet 5 inches; J. Walsh, second.

Three-legged race—McAtee and Bernero, first; Patier and Metzger, second.

Ball throw—Chas. Linehan, first, 105 yards.

100-yard dash, heavyweights—J. Barton, first; J. Rauer, second.

100-yard dash, championship—J. Riley, :10 4-5.

Throwing 12-pound hammer—McAtee, first; Croakin, second.

Half-mile run—E. Bernero, first, 2:38; A. Reynolds, second.

220-yard dash—T. Bland, first, 1:24 4-5; J. Riley, second.

220-yard hurdle—C. Linehan, first; J. Walsh, second.

Running high jump—J. De Moss, 63 inches, first; T. Bland, second.

440-yard run—T. Bland, first; J. Walsh, second.

Half-mile walk—E. Bernero, first; C. Linehan, second.

Slow bicycle race—Won by W. De Turk.

Mile run—D. Loughlin, first; E. Caples, second.

The athletic exhibitions were followed by two games of ball. The St. Louis C. B. C. vs. McGrew Guards, the score being 21 to 7 in favor of the former. The other game was between the Memphis C. B. C. and Bank of Commerce, the score being 9 to 5 in favor of the former.

While the Owner Was Drinking.

Three unknown men jumped into Wm. Zerst's buggy at Broadway and Hickory street at 10 o'clock Saturday night and drove away. Mr. Zerst left his horse and buggy standing at the corner and stopped at a neighboring saloon to get a drink. As he came out the door he saw the three men drive away.

He yelled at them to stop, but instead they lashed the horse, going at lightning speed west on Papin street.

The matter was reported to the police, but up to a late hour the trio had not been captured.

CORNELL CREW PRACTICING.

Courtney Has Them Out Pulling on the Thames Early in the Morning.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Mail and Express has the following cable: Henley—The weather since the arrival of the Cornell crew belies all the stories of fog and rain told about England, and if it only continues until the regatta there will be no reason for complaint. To-day was pleasant, and the light northerly breeze which blew directly up the reach was not strong enough to do more than slightly ruffle the water, and caused no inconvenience to the crew. This morning Courtney walked the crew down from their training quarters, reaching the boat-house about 10 o'clock. The work on the river was confined to starting, Courtney's desire being to get the crew accustomed to breaking away and getting to top speed as quickly as possible. A score of times this was tried, the crew stopping before going an eighth of a mile. They get away quick, but there is no other crew here yet to afford opportunity for comparison. After the morning practice the crew removed to the quarters at Underwood, which could not be got ready for them before to-day.

MONEY POSTED.

The Corbett-Fitzsimmons Match Now Sure to Come Off.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Mr. Dan Stewart of Dallas, Tex., when seen at the Dempsey benefit in Madison Square Garden to-night said:

"The guarantee money for the appearance of Corbett and Fitzsimmons in the ring at Dallas, next October, was posted this evening, and this removes all possible doubt of the fight coming off. I will probably go back to Texas to-morrow or Monday and am more than satisfied with the success I have met in securing the big event for the syndicate I represent."

CREEDON AND HENNESSY.

The Middleweights Will Meet at Boston on June 17.

BOSTON, June 8.—Dan Creedon, the Australian middleweight, and Billy Hennessy of Clinton, Ia., were matched to meet at the Suffolk Club on June 17. The men signed to fight twenty rounds at 158 pounds.

MIXED RACING.

Trotting, Pacing and Running Meeting at Denver.

DENVER, Colo., June 8.—The racing season opened to-day at Overland Park with perfect weather. The track was fair and several of the finishes close. About 2,500 people were in attendance. The remarkable feature of the day was the number of horses distanced in the pacing race. In the first heat three were distanced.

In the second, Judge Tyler, the winner of the first heat, injured his forequarter in the break and was distanced, and in the fifth, Athal Wilkes broke badly several times and was finally distanced. The race was given to Peto, as none of the other horses in it had won a heat.

All three running races were won by mounts of Jockey J. Smith. In the fourth race Little Eli came in second, but was disqualified on account of the jockey being under weight. Following is the summary:

First race, pacing, purse $800, 2:25 class, one mile—Peto won third and fifth heats and race; Athal Wilkes won second and fourth heats but was distanced in the fifth. Quicksilver, A. T. McGregor, Judge Tyler, Atlanta S., and Hattie Jefferson also started. Best time, 2:19¾.

Second race, trotting, purse $800, 2:28 class—E. W. S. won in straight heats. Pankey, Tantabit, Mary Magdalen, Nellie Campbell, Golden Gate and Belvidere, Jr., also started. Best time, 2:21¼.

Third race, running, purse $125, six furlongs—Arkansas Traveler first, Artless second, Ventwood third. Time, 1:36.

Fourth race, running, purse $125, four and a half furlongs—Northwestern first, Roy second, Silverman third. Time, :58.

Fifth race, selling, purse $125, six furlongs—Borderer first, Pat Lee second, Violetta third. Time, 1:20.

Letter Did Not Come.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Assistant Postmaster Gaylor said this afternoon that he did not know how it was that no letter came from Postmaster Hessing to Postmaster Dayton this morning, but simply none did come. Postmaster Dayton is in Washington, but his secretary was at the appointed place for the end of the bicycle race. The post-office wheelmen, however, turned out to have a letter for Gen. Miles, as did his defeated rival from the army. Whether this was due to a change in the plan or was simply accidental Mr. Gaylor had no means of knowing.

AT SOUTH SIDE.

Bobby Wats and Talent Win for the Talent.

The results at South Side last night were as follows:

First race, nine-sixteenths of a mile—Arthur C., Keen, 114 (Howe), 10 to 1, first; Vocalye, 119 114 (F. Hueston), 12 to 1, second; Ada (H. Berger), 6 to 1, third. Time, 1:00. B., Quisada, Minnie L., Heloose and Dr. Lyon also ran.

Second race, eleven-sixteenths of a mile—Bobby Watts, 108 (Raymond), 8 to 5, first; Butcher Boy, 107 (Foote), 10 to 1, second; Attille, 108 (F. Hueston), 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:12½. Tie Celver, Bill Barnes, Con Kinney and Highwayman (by Forester) also ran.

Third race, one-half mile—Brown Dick, 113 (McFadden), 4 to 5, first; Anne K., 108 (Thomas), 3 to 1, second; Hubert O'Neal, 108 (Moore), 8 to 1, third. Time, :51. Jack McGrady, Joe Cotton, La Cigale, Cocacola and Audephone also ran.

Fourth race, three-quarters of a mile—Tiffin, 108 (Griffin), 6 to 1, first; Gertie Black, 115 (F. Hueston), 4 to 1, second; The Monk, 109 (Howe), 4 to 1, third. Time, 1:18. Bargain, Jordan, Heads or Tails, Prospect and Rosemont also ran.

Fifth race, seven-eighths of a mile—Miss Specks, 103 (Thomas), 3 to 1, first; Extra, 109 (Howe), 5 to 2, second; Ed Beaman, 105 (B. Rigby), 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:32¼. Prospect, Red Jim, Sir Cuthbert, Idea and National also ran.

Louisville Road Race.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 8.—A large crowd saw the E. B. Dye & Co. ten-mile road race here to-day. It was one of the finest handicap races ever witnessed in this city. John Mason Brown of Louisville, a six-minute man, was the winner in 29m. 18s. A. W. Edwards, a 5m. 30s. man, was second in 29m. 21s, and Ed L. Evans, a six-minute man, was third in 30m.

The time winners were: A. J. Nowlin, 26m. 2s.; Hugh Caperton, 26m. 3s., and B. J. Dauber, 26m. 4s.

Carlinville Cycle Meet.

Sanction has been given for a grand class A diamond meet on June 27 at Carlinville, Ill., under the auspices of the Carlinville Cycling Club. The track is one of the fastest in the State, as was proven by their meet last year.

ALFARO FOR PRESIDENT.

Chosen By the People of Ecuador After Ten Year's Exile.

GUAYAQUIL, June 8.—Within a few days Gen. Alfaro will arrive at Ecuador and take charge of the affairs of state. He has been proclaimed President by the people, although he has been an exile for ten years from the country, he is still a great favorite with the masses. He has telegraphed from Nicaragua that he will start for Ecuador immediately.

Fears that Ignacio Veniemilla, the former Dictator of Ecuador, who is now in Peru, intended marching into the country are no longer entertained.

A YOUNGER MAN NEEDED.

Minister Ransom Is Not Likely to Return to Mexico.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO CITY, June 8.—It is well understood that Minister Ransom is not likely to return here. While he was well liked during his short stay the general feeling is that the United States should send here a younger, more vigorous man, one able in every way to take up the social as well as the diplomatic duties of the position.

Struck With a Club.

James Whitaker and John Wilkinson got into a quarrel at Eighth and Walnut streets last night during which Whitaker struck Wilkinson on the head with a club inflicting a severe scalp wound. The injured man was taken to the Dispensary and his assailant was arrested.

GIVEN BY DR. COPELAND.

SYMPTOMS MOST FREQUENTLY PRESENTED BY CATARRH SUFFERERS.

Expert Treatment at Nominal Rates—Trial Treatment Free to Those Applying in Person.

Great numbers of people suffer from the malign poisons of catarrh, as from other subtle chronic maladies, without any correct or definite idea of the nature of their affliction. The following symptoms have been carefully arranged by Dr. Copeland, to enable many sufferers to understand just what it is that ails them. Many diseases, known under various specific names, are really of catarrhal origin and nature. Every part of the mucous membrane, the nose, throat, eyes, ears, head, lungs, stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and bladder, are subject to disease and blight by catarrh. The proper course for sufferers is this: Read these symptoms carefully over; mark those that apply to your case and bring this with you to Dr. Copeland. If you live away from the city, send them by mail and ask for mail treatment.

MAKING IT EASY.

Invalids receive steady treatment at the Copeland Medical Institute, 816 Olive st., without any tax or assessment beyond a rate of $5 monthly, including all medicines, to office and mail patients alike. Trial treatment free to those applying in person.

CATARRH OF THE HEAD AND THROAT.

The most prevalent form of catarrh and results from neglected colds. Speedy and inexpensive cure by the Copeland system.

"Is the breath foul?"
"Is the voice husky?"
"Do you spit up slime?"
"Do you ache all over?"
"Do you blow out scabs?"
"Is the nose stopped up?"
"Do you snore at night?"
"Does your nose discharge?"
"Does the nose bleed easily?"
"Is there tickling in the throat?"
"Do crusts form in the nose?"
"Is the nose sore and tender?"
"Do you sneeze a great deal?"
"Is this worse towards night?"
"Does the nose itch and burn?"
"Is there pain in front of head?"
"Is there pain across the eyes?"
"Is there pain in back of head?"
"Is your sense of smell leaving?"
"Do you hawk to clear the throat?"
"Is there a dropping in the throat?"
"Is the throat dry in the mornings?"
"Are you losing your sense of taste?"
"Do you sleep with the mouth open?"
"Does your nose stop up towards night?"

CATARRH OF THE BRONCHIAL TUBES.

When catarrh of the head and throat is left unchecked it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes and in time attacks the lungs. Speedy and inexpensive cure by the Copeland system.

"Have you a cough?"
"Are you losing flesh?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Have you pain in side?"
"Do you take cold easily?"
"Is your appetite variable?"
"Have you stitches in side?"
"Do you cough until you gag?"
"Are you low-spirited at times?"

"Have you a pain behind breastbone?"
"Do you feel you are growing weaker?"
"Is there a burning pain in the throat?"
"Do you cough worse night and morning?"
"Do you have to sit up at night to get breath?"

CATARRH OF THE KIDNEYS.

Catarrh of the kidneys results either from colds or from overwork of the kidneys in separating from the blood the poisons that have been absorbed from catarrh of other organs. Speedy and inexpensive cure by the Copeland system.

"Do your hands and feet swell?"
"Is this more noticeable in the mornings?"
"Are they cold and clammy?"
"Is there pain in small of back?"
"Is the urine dark and cloudy?"
"Does a deposit form when left standing?"
"Is there a desire to get up at night?"
"Do you see spots floating before the eyes?"
"Are the eyes dull and staring?"
"Is there a bad taste in mouth?"
"Have you pain in top of head?"
"Is your hair getting gray?"
"If so, is it silvery white?"
"Is the skin dry and harsh?"
"Is the hair dry and brittle?"
"Is there nausea after eating?"
"Has the perspiration a bad odor?"
"Is there puffiness under the eyes?"
"Are there dark rings around the eyes?"
"Is the skin pale and dry?"
"Has the skin a waxy look?"
"Do you see unpleasant things while asleep?"
"Have you chilly feelings down the back?"
"Do the joints pain and ache?"
"Do the legs feel too heavy?"

CATARRH OF THE LIVER.

The liver is affected by catarrh through the disease extending from the stomach into the tubes in the liver. Speedy and inexpensive cure by the Copeland system.

"Are you irritable?"
"Are you nervous?"
"Do you get dizzy?"
"Have you no energy?"
"Do you have cold feet?"
"Do you feel miserable?"
"Is your memory poor?"
"Do you get tired easily?"
"Do you have hot flushes?"
"Is your eyesight blurred?"
"Have you pain in the back?"
"Can't you explain where?"
"Is your flesh soft and flabby?"
"Are your spirits low at times?"
"Is there a bloating after eating?"
"Have you pain around the loins?"
"Do you have gurgling in bowels?"
"Do you have rumbling in bowels?"
"Is there throbbing in the stomach?"
"Do you have sense of heat in bowels?"
"Do you suffer from pains in temples?"
"Do you have palpitation of the heart?"
"Is there a general feeling of lassitude?"
"Do these feelings affect your memory?"

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH.

Catarrh of the stomach is usually caused by swallowing poisonous mucus, which drops down from the head and throat at night. Speedy and inexpensive cure by the Copeland system.

"Is there nausea?"
"Are you costive?"
"Is there vomiting?"
"Do you belch up gas?"
"Are you light-headed?"
"Is your tongue coated?"
"Have you water brash?"
"Do you hawk and spit?"
"Is there pain after eating?"
"Are you nervous and weak?"
"Do you have sick headaches?"
"Do you bloat up after eating?"
"Is there disgust for breakfast?"
"Have you distress after eating?"
"Is your throat filled with slime?"
"Do you at times have diarrhoea?"
"Is there rush of blood to the head?"
"Is there constant bad taste in the mouth?"
"Is there gnawing sensation in stomach?"
"Do you feel as if you had lead in stomach?"
"When you get up suddenly are you dizzy?"
"When stomach is empty do you feel faint?"
"Do you belch up material that burns throat?"
"When stomach is full do you feel oppressed?"

CREDIT IS THE BEST SPRING TONIC!

Your blood is all right—it's your house that's out of order. New Mattings—new Furniture—and a new Refrigerator are the things you need—a change of scenery—in the house—is better than medicine at this season of the year. Probably you work for a living—most of us do—you haven't got money enough right now to pay your houserent a year in advance—but that doesn't trouble you in the least—you know that you WILL have it—at the end of the month—when it is due. Let this same principle apply to the furnishing of your house—we don't want the money in advance—pay us a little at the end of the week or at the end of the month—after you have earned it. There's no pleasure or satisfaction in getting things piecemeal.

DON'T BE LIKE THE MAN WHO

Buys a new spring suit—and ruins its appearance by wearing the same old hat and the same old shoes—you need the Matting and Refrigerator NOW—GET THEM NOW—get them all at the same time—get them HERE—where the lowest cash prices of other houses are duplicated—ON CREDIT. We don't know anything about notes—nor about interest—nor we don't want to—your promise to pay is good enough for us.

REFRIGERATORS.

We are first in the field—with the finest and largest assortment of refrigerators to be found in St. Louis. We sold a splendid refrigerator last summer—but we are always looking for something BETTER—and we have found it. This season we have the exclusive control of the Excelsior Refrigerator—its points of superiority need no explanation—they are apparent to the most casual observer. It is cork-lined—and a drain-pipe connects with the ice chamber, thereby maintaining a cold, dry atmosphere within for the preservation of meats, vegetables, etc. Every conceivable size is here—from an ice-box at $2.50 to an elegant refrigerator at $50. The "between sizes" at all prices.

ELEGANT MATTINGS.

In patterns that are as new as the season. If you know us at all—you know that we have never sold any article of house-furnishing that was too cheap to be durable. We maintain this high standard of quality in Mattings as well as in other things. Cotton warp Matting heads the list—it costs a little more than other grades—and it ought to—for it outwears them all. There are miles of it here for you to choose from.

BABY CARRIAGES.

Don't keep the youngster in the house these fine days—nor don't lug him around in your arms—put him in a nice, comfortable carriage and see him grow. It's hardly necessary to say that Heywood Carriages are best—you KNOW they are. There are 200 bran-new patterns here for you to choose from—ask to see the one we sell for $5—others at all prices up to $50.

CARPETS LAID FREE.

We don't charge a penny for the cutting, making and laying—nor for the WASTE in matching figures; and when we say that we sell Brussels Carpets for 50 cents a yard—and Ingrain Carpets for 35 cents a yard—you can see that the expense of making and laying is not added to the price.

SHREWD PEOPLE BUY

Parlor Furniture now—for our prices are lowered to the last notch—better to do this than to carry the stock over into another season. Have you ever seen the Plush or the Tapestry Suits we sell for $22.50? That amount of CASH won't duplicate either one of them in any other store. Lots of other Suits in Silk Damask, Tapestry and Brocatelle—all prices—up to $200.

BEDROOM SUITS.

Seems funny to think that we can sell a solid Oak Bedroom Suit for $13—but we DO—and on credit too. It is well-made—highly polished—and has large glass in dresser. A hundred other suits in all degrees of elegance—some beautifully carved—prices to suit all purses. Other people sell 40-pound hair-mattresses for $12—we sell them for $7—regular $3 qualities woven wire springs—$1.75. We are anxious to show you what true accommodation is—leave the arranging of payments to us—ready to start a load of Furniture out to your house to-morrow morning.

DRINK AND DEATH.

Suicide of a Topeka Barber Who Considered Arrest Disgrace.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 8.—Chas. Orendorff, a barber, committed suicide this morning by taking laudanum. He is a hard drinker, and yesterday, while on one of his periodical sprees, was arrested and lodged in the City Jail.

He felt the disgrace so keenly that as soon as he was released he resolved to take his life. He was discovered by his wife three hours after he had taken the laudanum, but it was too late to save him. He came from Edwards, Mo., a few months ago.

SEVERED THROAT AND RAZOR.

SALINA, Kan., June 8.—The dead body of an unknown man was found two miles west of Brookville this morning and the throat was cut. By his side lay a bloody razor. He was a stranger and supposed to have come from Ness City. He probably committed suicide.

BEGINNING TO COME.

The Advance Shipments of Our Great

AS A MILITARY SCHOOL.

Scheme to Occupy Fort Omaha When Abandoned by Troops.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., June 8.—Ex-Senator Manderson, who was a member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, with leading citizens, are moving to bring about the establishment at old Fort Omaha of a military Academy where cadets may be prepared for West Point. The proposition was laid before Lieut.-Gen. Schofield now on a tour of inspection of the department of the Platte, and he expressed himself highly favorable to the plan. Gen. Manderson said to-day: "Gen. Schofield has frequently urged that the States should maintain preparatory military schools, and that the selections for cadetships at West Point should be made from these schools. In talking with him I suggested that I didn't know a better opportunity to inaugurate this experiment or a better place to establish such a school than Old Fort Omaha when it should be abandoned by the troops. He said he greatly hoped this might be done, and that he would lend all his influence to bring about this result. It would, of course, require legislation, for in the bill providing for the building of Fort Crook it is provided that Fort Omaha, when Fort Crook is occupied, shall be sold under the direction of the secretary of War."

AN INDEPENDENT CHURCH.

Dr. George's Friends to Build a New Place of Worship.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8.—Dr. W. P. George is to be installed as permanent pastor of an independent church, to be established by the faction of the Second Presbyterian Church which has stood by him in the contest. The location of the church has not yet been decided upon, but many subscriptions have been received, ranging from $100 to $500, and the friends of Dr. George claim he will have the largest, richest and most influential congregation in Kansas City.

The new church will be Presbyterian in faith, but will not be recognized by the Presbyteries, synods or General Assembly of that church. The committee was appointed Thursday night.

SEEKERS AFTER PLUMS.

Disgruntled Republican Ward Workers Hold an Indignation Meeting.

Colored Republican voters of the Fifteenth Ward held an indignation meeting last night at Biddle Market and voiced their opinion on Mayor Walbridge, Chief Swingley and Building Commissioner Harry Randall in uncomplimentary terms. Failure to recognize the faithful ward workers who have been working blindly for the ticket year in and out, was the cause of all the soreness. Commissioner Randall it appears, appointed two negroes, but made a worse job of it than if he had appointed none at all. Resolutions were adopted, urging the colored voters to begin sharpening their knives for '96.

National Convention of Sodalists.

The Young Men's Sodality Union, composed of five delegates from each sodality in the city, met at St. Bridget's Hall for the purpose of making preliminary arrangements for the National Convention of Sodalists which convenes in St. Louis. It was decided that the convention hold sessions for three days, commencing Sept. 24, the third day to be given to sight-seeing and a banquet. Over 150 delegates are expected to be present. The Executive Committee will issue invitations in a few days to every Young Men's Catholic organization in the city, inviting them to send delegates to the union.

The following committees have been appointed: Finance—Jno. E. Riley, Edw. P. Hennessy, Allen Butler, Jno. Reardon, Frank Miller, Charles Donahue, Arthur J. Ryan. Entertainment—Joseph P. Hartnett, George F. Mulligan, Jno. J. Cahill, J. J. McKenna, Jno. F. Costello, C. Hammaway, W. A. Jennings, W. L. Lamassey. Hotel—John E. Riley, Allen Butler, Jos. E. Doyle, John Reardon, W. A. McDonald. Hall—Arthur J. Ryan, E. Moriarty, W. J. Fitzgerald. Press—Edw. P. Hennessy, Joseph P. Hartnett, Louis Lamb.

The next meeting will be held at St. Patrick's Hotel, June 11.

Office Men's Excursion.

Members of the Office Men's Club propose to give their annual excursion and outing on Saturday, June 15, at Clifton Terrace, five miles above Alton. Train will leave Union Station at 1:30, returning at 11 p. m. Those wishing tickets will notify the committee—Chas. W. Towers, 601 Union Trust Building; Norfleet Hill, 824 Chestnut street; R. J. Shooler, 2727 Olive street; W. B. Watson, 111 Laclede Building; A. W. Meise, 414 Security Building.

Prostrated by the Heat.

Joseph Schwartz, 14 years old, was prostrated by the heat yesterday afternoon while at work in the St. Louis Paper Box Factory, corner of Elm street and Commercial Alley. He was removed to the home of his sister, Mrs. Ryan, 1227 South Seventh street, where the physician who attended him pronounced his condition not serious.

Klinefelter, and the annual sermon will be in the evening by Rev. D. E. Baer, M. S., of Astoria, Ill., of the United Brethren Church, which organization was the founder of the college. Hon. Henry Waterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal will deliver the annual lecture before the literary society Monday evening on the topic "Money and Morals." The commencement exercises will be held Thursday afternoon on the college campus.

Fayette Commencements.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

FAYETTE, Mo., June 8.—For the past two days every passenger train entering Fayette has brought large numbers of visitors who are here to attend commencement exercises at Central and Howard Payne Colleges.

The art reception at Howard Payne College to-day drew a very large crowd and the artistic work of the young ladies was highly complimented by all. At 2:30 p. m., Miss Anna Golden's class in delsarte gave a beautiful exhibition of grace and posture. Following this was the annual musicale of the vocal and instrumental students. The programme was an exceptionally interesting one. Rev. Dr. James A. Duncan of Kansas City will preach the commencement sermon before the students of Central and Howard Payne Colleges at 10:45 Sunday morning and at 8 p. m. Rev. J. H. Early of St. Louis will preach the sermon before the Epworth League and Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.

DEFIED PARENTS.

Banker Dyer's Son and Miss Pearse Elope and Marry.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, June 8.—Walter Dyer, son of Col. J. L. Dyer, for several years Vice-President of the National Bank of Wichita, and Miss Emma Pearse, also of Wichita, were married at the home of Rev. J. W. Alderman in Kansas City, Kan., this morning. It was the climax of an elopement. Both are well known in Wichita, but the parents of both objected to the marriage. Dyer had been devoted for two years. Miss Pearse came to Kansas City as the guest of Miss Owen a week ago. Mr. Dyer arrived this morning. The bride is 18, the groom 23.

ALTON NEWS.

The closing exercises of the public schools were held in Temple Theater here last night and consisted of some excellent music and an address by Hon. Richard Edwards of Bloomington, Ill. The subject of the address was "Culture and Citizenship." The Aarion Quartette sang the closing piece.

NO NATIVE WINE FOR SALE.

Barred by the Court From Local Option Districts in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 8.—The Supreme Court to-day rendered an important opinion of especial interest to the numerous grape growers in Arkansas. It holds that native wine cannot be sold in local option districts. The Court says that the act of April 3, 1889, is repealed by the act passed by the same Legislature a few days later, and that there is no law authorizing growers of grapes and winemakers to sell in localities where license has been voted down. The decision will affect the sale of native wine in two-thirds of the counties in the State, and is a severe blow to the wine industry of Arkansas, but a great triumph for the advocates of temperance.

THE MISSOURI CHAUTAUQUA.

Initial Exercises of the Assembly at Sedalia Highly Successful.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SEDALIA, Mo., June 8.—The Missouri State Chautauqua Assembly held its initial exercises this afternoon, and will continue until June 19. During the afternoon a royal welcome was extended to Dr. Hurlbut and Prof. C. C. Case. The evening exercises consisted of a concert by the Arion Lady quartette and select readings by George J. D. Currie. There are many visitors who occupy tents. The attendance to-day was large and the indications are that the assembly will be highly successful.

GOSSIP FROM LONDON CITY.

Embarrassing Predicament of the Elderly Lord Sudeley.

MANY AMERICANS ABROAD.

Parnell's Estate Finally Settled Up—An American Dickering for a £50,000 Residence.

LONDON, June 8.—Owing to the Whitsuntide holidays, those who could do so flitted to the country or flew to the seaside, and the town has been comparatively deserted by those who furnish food for the gossip of the millions. But they are now flitting back to London, doubtless refreshed by their trips, and are again plunging into the swirl of metropolitan life.

Some confusion was caused here and elsewhere in regard to a coming breach of promise suit which is sure to attract considerable attention unless it is settled out of court. It was announced during the week in the newspapers that Mrs. Gore, formerly an opera bouffe actress, had brought an action for breach of promise of marraige against Lord Sudeley, and it was asserted that she had retired from the stage upon becoming engaged to His Lordship. It happened that Lord Sudeley is an eminently respectable elderly man, and a married man with grown children. His friends, therefore, were terribly shocked until it was explained that a mistake had been made in the names, and the charming actress is suing Viscount Sudeley, a dashing young man and a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards, and a member of Whites, the Bachelors, the Turf and the Ranelagh Clubs, all very aristocratic institutions. The young viscount is the only son of the Earl of Arran, who sits in the House of Lords. The suit has been discussed in smart circles, as Viscount Sudeley is a well known figure about town. He is 27 years old.

Some curiosity has been aroused here over an advertisement which has just appeared in the newspapers of this city over the signature of a prominent real estate firm. It says.

"A wealthy American wishes to purchase a historical, residential estate, with a 'tudor or Elizabethian mansion, having twenty bed-rooms, five reception rooms and 800 to 1,000 acres of land. Would pay about £50,000."

A representative of the Associated Press questioned the real estate agent as to the identity of this wealthy American. He said that the American referred to was at present in London, but that his client did not wish his identity to be revealed under any circumstances. Careful investigation has thus far failed to identify him.

Mr. Charles L. Bonney, Vice-President of the Chicago General Railway Company, has been collecting data here relating to omnibus and horse-car traffic for the purpose of perfecting a scheme for a better service and reduced fares in Chicago. The principal omnibus company of London carried over 133,000,000 passengers in 1894 at an average fare of 3 1-5 cents, equal to six rides for 20 cents. Each vehicle here, while requiring a driver and a conductor, is limited to twenty-six passengers each and they have to be provided with seats. In spite of this the company paid a dividend last year of 8 per cent. Mr. Bonney said that when he returns to Chicago he will make a proposition to the Municipal authorities of that city for a basis of six fares for 20 cents and he proposes to introduce other innovations.

The United States Ambassador, the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, is to lay the foundation stone of the Memorial Church at Gainsborough in the autumn to John Robinson, one of the founders of independence in England. He was born in 1575 and died in 1625. A large number of leading non-conformists are expected to attend.

Lord Leamington's wedding next week will be a very quiet affair, owing to a death in the family. Over 300 presents, however, have already been received, including a dog cart from the Hon. George Curzon and Miss Curzon. Lord Leamington, it will be rememberd, acted as best man at the recent marriage of Mr. Curzon to Miss Mary Leiter of Washington. He was private secretary to Lord Salisbury while the latter was Premier from 1885 to 1886.

Mrs. Frank Leslie of New York is in the city, and her veteran admirer, the Marquis De Leuville, is again in constant attendance on her. The Marquis intimates that he is once more engaged to be married to Mrs. Leslie.

It is expected that Viscount Gough, the First Secretary of the British Embassy to Washington who, by the recent death of his father, succeeded to the title and family estates at Lough Castle, County Galway and St. Helen's County, Dublin, will soon return to Ireland from Washington.

As cabled yesterday, Mr. Arthur George Van Sittart will succeed Mr. J. H. Sadler Secretary of the British Consul, at Chicago. Mr. Sittart has been in the diplomatic service for twenty years and his transfer from the latter service to the consular is a very rare departure. But promotion in the British diplomatic service is slow and the consular post at Chicago is worth £1,200 yearly.

Mr. Marshall Field, Jr., has taken Earl Russell's beautiful little place at Maidenhead. The earl, whose troubles with his erratic wife have brought him before the public in an unenviable light, has lately been delivering addresses at Newington and other places on marriage morals.

Joseph Hatton, who is shortly to publish a novel dealing with an episode of the French revolution during the days of the convention, has somewhat anticipated its possible success and has used the same story for a play. Negotiations are now pending with several managers for its first production.

There was an animated scene at Waterloo railway station to-day upon the departure of the special train for Southampton with the passengers of the American steamer Paris, who sail for New York on board of her. Among those present were the United States Ambassador, Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, the Secretary of the United States Embassy, Mr. James Roosevelt, Mr. Bayard's private secretary, Mr. Carter, and several prominent Americans. All these gentlemen gathered there to bid farewell to Prof. Andrew D. White.

Senator Redfield Proctor, formerly Secretary of War, and Mrs. Proctor, are also passengers sailing for New York to-day on the steamer Paris.

Dispatches received here from Athens say the excavations at Delphi have resulted in fresh and interesting discoveries, the most remarkable being some high reliefs of great beauty, representing the labors of Hercules.

Mrs. Parnell, widow of the great Irish leader, Charles Stewart Parnell, is in broken health at the seaside. She has decided to destroy all of the late Mr. Parnell's letters. They have been carefully examined and reveal few matters of interest, the principal letters being those exchanged between him and an Irish Archbishop. The Parnell estate is just being wound up and the creditors will ultimately receive ten shillings on the pound. Mr. Parnell's debts amounted to 50,000 pounds.

A great sale of objects in the art enamels, tapestries and bronzes occurred during the past week at the Hotel Drouot in Paris. The articles came from the Spitzer Seilleire, Ducatel, Ayest and other famous collections and realized nearly 200,000 francs. Among the purchasers was the well-known American, Mr. M. H. De Young, the director general of the California Midwinter Exposition, who secured a considerable number for the memorial museum of the Exposition. Among Mr. De Young's purchases are four large busts with pedestals of the Roman emperors. These busts came from the Seilleire collection. The heads are of white marble and the togas of variegated color marbles. He also purchased a beautiful Brussels tapestry, over fifteen feet long, some clocks and other art objects.

At the Odd-Fellows' conference at Swansea, Wales, yesterday, Bro. Kenwirltung of New York said that the order had many difficulties to contend with in the United States, owing to the efforts of the other societies to deprecate the principles of unity. In spite of this, he added, the order was established on a firm footing in the United States.

WILL NOT FIGHT.

John S. Wise Will Have No Duel With Boardman.

NEW YORK, June 8.—John S. Wise, Jr., ex-Congressman from Virginia, made a statement to-day in regard to his altercation with Mr. Boardman before Judge Daly yesterday. After detailing the scenes in the court room, he said:

"It is totally untrue that I used any language about hearing from me again. I am neither pugilist nor duellist, and have not the slightest idea of pursuing the matter further. I feel that I was right throughout. I believe that Mr. Boardman on reflection will say himself that his manner and language was totally unjustifiable, and that I was right in refusing to be friendly until he apologized. If I committed an error, it was in the violent language I used in the hall, but it is easy for one cool and unruffled to see errors.

"I do not think gentlemen in the North any more than in the South permit men to insult them in public, and then come up in private without apology and shake hands."

EITHER ONE OR TWO.

Oregon Short Line and Utah Northern Receivership Case.

SALT LAKE, Utah, June 8.—The Oregon Short Line and Utah Northern receivership case has been argued down to a point where about the only difference between the contending parties seems now to be whether there shall be one or two receivers appointed. The Union Pacific still insists on an associate receiver, while the loan company maintains that such appointment would defeat the whole purpose of the separate receivership because of the brief time which would be given to raise the money to be paid until July 1.

Mr. Storey, in continuing his argument this morning insisted that the American Loan and Trust Company's only purpose in the litigation was to put a man in charge of the Short Line who would guard its interest in relation to other roads and not be on both sides of the same question. The company had only until July 1, in which to raise over $1,400,000 to meet default in interest on the first mortgages. The purpose of the other side was to secure modifications of the order so the loan company would have to go back to Judges Gilbert and Sanborn and cause delay so there would be no time before July 1 to raise the money. He referred to the condition of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company which had shown in six months a loss of $750,000, and under a new receiver had within five months paid the interest and cleared the indebtedness. His success was because he was in close contact with the patrons of the line.

As to the appointment of Mr. Egan, he was a man against whom the Union Pacific could find no fault, and yet they ask for an associate receiver. To appoint an associate receiver it will be a separation in name and not in fact, and would be extremely fair. If the court should find Mr. Egan unsuitable it could remove him or associate another with him. We ask you to take him on trial, and we will abide by the result.

At this point the hearing closed. A discussion in the case is expected on Monday.

A CO-RECEIVER PROBABLE.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., June 8.—There is a growing feeling in Union Pacific circles that Judge Merritt will appoint a co-receiver for the Short line property in addition to John M. Egan, who has been selected as the representative of the American Loan and Trust Company.

At headquarters it was practically conceded that the Short line and Utah Northern would be divorced from the Union Pacific system, and that in all probability Salt Lake would be chosen as headquarters for the Short line. However, with a receiver favorable to the Union Pacific, who may be S. H. Clark, there is shown a disposition to be satisfied, in view of the fact that the appointment of Mr. Clark or some other fair-minded man would go far toward preserving the property of both the Short line and Union Pacific.

THE HARRINGTON MURDER.

Story of a Witness Who Saw the Probable Assassin.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—A witness has been found who saw a man at the door of Miss Harrington's flat at 12:30 p. m. on the day she was murdered. The witness is a 12-year-old boy residing in the flat below the scene of the tragedy. The man's back was turned to the street, and the boy did not see his face, so that he can give no description. There is every reason to believe this man, who was in the act of ringing when observed, is the murderer, but the police have paid no attention to the lad as a witness, not even interviewing him.

At the Coroner's inquest, which was begun to-day, the private correspondence of Miss Harrington was produced in court, but threw no light on the tragedy, nor did the letters prove as sensational as the detectives had intimated. The writing on several notes was identified by Frank M. Buck as that of his father, Senator L. M. Buck, who died as a result of an accident a few days ago. The notes were addressed to "My Dear Nell," and were signed "Nell," one being signed "Ever your Darling Nell." The only letter produced significant of improper relations between the two was dated Chicago and written on a letter head of Porter Bros. The penmanship was not positively identified as that of Buck. Frank Buck, when asked to explain the familiar way in which his father addressed Miss Harrington, frankly stated that it was because of his great affection for her.

SHIP IN DISTRESS.

The English Vessel Earl Burgess Is Ashore Off Uruguay.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 8.—A private dispatch received to-day reports the British ship Earl Burgess, from Swansea for San Francisco, ashore at English Bank, Uruguay. Assistance has been sent to the vessel.

Capt. J. M. Coffell is in command of the Earl Burgess. She is a 1,221-ton vessel, and was built in England in 1855.

"BRUDDER" HAWKINS' VIEWS

The Camp Meeting Exhorter Discusses Woman Suffrage.

The colored camp meeting at old Sportsman's Park had an almost exclusively white congregation last night. It was quite a unique spectacle to see a corps of three negro ministers holding services before a congregation of fifty white people, two-thirds of them of the fair sex, four colored men and two colored women. The white folks listened with attention, and helped out on the singing.

Elder Hawkins recognized his weak position. He said he knew he could not talk to them as he would to his own people. He was afraid to start a hymn thinking they would not be able to join in the praise. He started:

Come Thou fount of every blessing,
Tune our hearts to sing thy praise.

He was doubtless gratified when the white folks joined in at the first note, and in no spirit of levity, but with unexpected earnestness. The effect of the peculiar swelling intonation of the few colored folks' voices mingled with the smother tones of the white women, was not at all displeasing.

Encouraged by the success of the singing Elder Hawkins undertook to say a few words, not as a sermon, but in the way of mapping out his plans for the future. The few words grew into many and he made quite a talk.

"Mr. Barnum is got de most of our people to-night," he began. "Dere is three things the negro will go to, one is a show, de second is a baptizing, and de third is a funeral. De laws of de church isn't strong enough ter keep 'em away. Dey'll go to er show if dey is turned out de church an' has to come back de next time de do' is opened. Den der is Catholicism dat's a ruinin' de country."

At this there were several amens, in which a number of white boys in front joined with mock enthusiasm. The elder then drifted on to the subject of lovely woman. "Woman am comin' to de front Some of you don't believe in woman's suffrage. Well, it's comin'. It's de Lord's work. God's pullin' de blanket off. Read your Bibles an' see. De woman is stealin' on you. Ain't dey clerks, an' bookkeepers, an' hotel keepers, an' lawyers, an' doctors already? Dey is doin' everything er man does. When woman has de suffrage your divorce laws will be gone world without end. Dey'll be deader than mackeral in de kit. Why, de fust one that narated it around dat de Lord was risen was a women. You men want to keep de woman down. Dey must obey you, you say. Dey has no mo' right to obey you dan you has to obey them. Dere is more of dem dan dey is of you, an' if you wants to down em you'll have to fight 'em. Den, when de women is in power you'll see the wheel within a wheel. You say when a woman votes you'll lead 'em your way. Well, you'd better get ready to do leadin'. When de woman is in de saddle, your saloons will have to close up. It'll be God's country, an' I hope to see de day when de President, an' de Governors, an' policemen will be all God's children, an' every juryman will have to be a Christian."

MERCHANTS,
CLERKS AND SALESMEN,
RESPECTABLE FAMILIES,

Possessing pride and dignity, momentarily embarrassed, desiring to avoid publicity and regular loan companies with their compound rates of interest, can obtain confidential loans in any amount from us at rates never to exceed regular banking charges, namely, 8 per cent, simple interest, per annum, and can, if preferred by the customer, secure same on pianos, household furniture, etc., etc., without being removed, on terms of repayment consistent with their circumstances.

We desire to attract those whose social position would be jeopardized by the indelicacy of publicity endangered by loan concerns or professional money lenders.

Employes, both ladies and gentlemen, of reputable firms and corporations can obtain spot cash from us without giving mortgages of any kind.

You can come to us with all confiding sincerity and we will attend to your wants without anyone being the wiser and relieve your being under obligations to friends. Call or address Merchants' Credit Co., rooms 810 and 811, Security Building.

JOLLY GROCERS AT CREVE COEUR.

Fourteenth Annual Outing of the Wholesale Jobbers and Brokers.

COMIC ATHLETIC EVENTS.

Each Picnicker Got an Order of Sandwiches, Cigars, Plug Tobacco and Liquid Refreshments.

At 8 o'clock Saturday morning the wholesale grocers and canned goods brokers of St. Louis and their employes embarked on a special Missouri Pacific train for Upper Creve Coeur Lake. There were eleven coaches in the train and about 800 "stags" in the party. The "Grocers' picnic" is the jolliest outing of the year and the fourteenth annual not only proved the rule, but rather accentuated it. There were represented at the picnic, the heads of firms which in the aggregate do a business annually of $25,000,000, yet the uninformed onlooker would have had great difficulty in picking out the employer from the employed.

Arrived on the grounds the first rush was made to the liquid refreshment bureau, where Chairman Gid Carmichael had prepared a liberal allowance of red lemonade and—other things. The second rush was toward the solid refreshment department where each "stag" was provided with a ham or cheese sandwich by Chairman John L. Beecher and assistants. Then Henry Harms of the "Smokers' Friend Committee," gave every man in the crowd, three cigars, a plug of tobacco and a package of cigarettes. Then the picnic began. A blast of the bugle brought the crowd to the racing grounds and Adrian De Yong of the Amusement Committee began the sports.

Many of the events were of a highly amusing character, as may be guessed from their designations in the official programme designed and edited by E. T. Haase, chairman of the Press and Printing Committee.

The events, prizes and the winners were as follows:

EVENT NO. 1.

Grocers' regular street buyers' wooden shoe race; 100 yards. (Grocers exclusively.) "Hooray for the Tschermans!" Prizes: Gold watch chain—winner, A. Miller; pair diamond link cuff buttons—winner, Aug. Kohler; fancy silver tea set—winner, W. J. Barclay; fine opera glass—winner, L. F. Honig; fancy scarf pin—winner Warren Goddard; fine umbrella—winner, Renick Corbet.

EVENT NO. 2.

Brokers' "Pitching the Dollar." "Talk about a Silver Argument on the Stump!" Here's it—16 to 1. "The brokes go broke." Prizes: A "way-up" onyx clock—winner, E. Helmer; A very fancy silver tea set—winner, D. J. Hancock; a dandy onyx table—winner, J. B. Albach; a fancy water set—winner, C. R. Hopkins; a fine carving set—winner, H. S. Parker.

THIRD EVENT.

Grocers' regular house buyers and grocers' regular street buyers. One grand guessing tournament. Nails, barley, "niggertoes," beans, dried herring, caramels, etc., in the jar. "How many it is was it?" Prizes: One fat cash prize, $100 in silver—winner, J. A. Monig; fine diamond pin—winner, L. J. Peck; a fancy locket—winner, Harry Smith; fancy salad set—winner, Aug. Steinmeyer; nice pair sleeve buttons—winner, J. A. Miller.

NUMBER FOUR.

Free-for-all, 100-yard handicap. This is a fair and square race, Fair Grounds rules governing. Any jockey caught pulling his horse will be ruled off forver and anon, anon forever—Prizes: Fine diamond scarf pin, winner, F. C. Wiseman; fancy watch chain, winner, Wallace Smith; beautiful pair of cuff buttons, winner, J. Hannigan; fine mantel clock, winner, John Harrington; nice pair opera glasses, winner, E. N. Hartmann; fine pair shoes, winner, C. E. Fuchs; walking "stahf" and "umbrehell," winner, J. Senucks.

NUMBER FIVE.

11TH ARTILLERY.

Hittin' the can—Captains, Dave Nicholson and H. H. Kraft. A score of hitters on each side, 3 hits apiece, mit pistols. This will be a novel event. Fruit cans, a stump, a solid backstop, and regular army revolvers. Prize, "Two cases of bubbles," won by Capt. Kraft's side.

12TH BATTLE.

Tug of war—Twelve gladiators on each side. Captains, Niese First and W. T. Gould. These two warriors are evenly matched and make a splendid combination—same weight, same height, same nationality and same capacity. Trophy, a case of wine, won by Capt. Gould's side.

The day was perfect as to weather and not the slightest happening of an unpleasant nature occurred to mar the pleasure. Just previous to the awarding of the prizes, the officers, directors, chairmen of committees and invited guests, assembled in the dancing pavilion on invitation of President H. W. Gildehaus. Toasts, pledged in the best extra dry, were responded to in a happy manner by Messrs. W. C. Stith, general freight agent, Missouri Pacific Railway; E. G. Scudder of the Scudder-Gale Grocer Co., L. J. Peck of the Goddard, Peck Grocer Co., Max Bodenheimer of Bodenheimer, Landau & Co., Samuel H. Jackson, editor of Interstate Grocer, C. H. Edwards, editor of St. Louis Grocer, F. H. Beimes, Alkire Grocer Co. and Ed T. Haase of the Haase & Sons Fish Co.

The prizes were awarded by President Gildehaus and the result of the vote for directors for two years, the balloting for which had taken place on the train was announced as follows: H. F. Mardorf, T. S. Maxwell, Adrian De Yong, Theo. S. Jones, A. B. Winkelmeyer and Herbert S. Elder.

Resolutions of thanks to the Missouri Pacific and the Kansas & Colorado Railway for courtesies extended, were passed. The crowd headed by the band then marched to the train for home, arriving at the Union Station at 7:35 p. m., tired, but neither hungry nor thirsty and so full of good feeling that they woke up the sleepy policemen in the Midway with their cheers.

MUSIC TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

The National Organization Will Meet Here in July.

A convention of great interest to musicians and music-lovers will be held in St. Louis during the first week of July. The Music Teachers' National Association will meet in this city for the first time, although it is the seventeenth annual convention of this body. Much had previously been urged against St. Louis as a place of meeting. It was held that it was insupportably hot and that the general public was not sufficiently fond of high-class music in this section. This has been amply disproved during the past few years. Consequently, when the association voted to hold the convention in St. Louis during the present year, the resident committeemen, Messrs. Kroeger, Epstein, Kunkel and Waldauer, exerted themselves to make the convention a genuine success. The best pianists, organists, vocalists, lecturers and string instrumentalists will appear at the convention. Much of great value to teachers and pupils will be included in the exercises, while the general public will derive real enjoyment from the recitals and concerts.

DELUGED WITH WATER.

Fire Department Does Big Damage at Mellon's Spring Bed Factory.

The five-story building at the southeast corner of Eleventh and Carr streets occupied by the Peter H. Mellon Manufacturing Co. caught fire at 5:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon from some solder furnaces on the third floor. A damage of $6,000 was done to the stock in the building, which consists of wire springs and beds and $1,000 to the building. The loss is fully covered by insurance. Two alarms for the blaze were turned in by the fire department and, although the fire only amounted at first to a small blaze, the entire building was deluged with water even after the fire had been extinguished. This caused a much larger damage to the stock and building.

SALVATION ARMY CAMP.

Negotiations Under Way for a Big West End Meeting.

The Salvation Army is picking out a site for a monster camp meeting in the West End. Negotiations are going on quietly so that neighbors may not interfere before negotiations are closed. The site will be selected Saturday.

MUST WORK TILL FOUR.

Government Clerks Cannot Get Off Earlier on Saturday.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—It has been the custom for several years in the Government departments to close during the warm season at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoons, instead of at 4. This will be done no longer. Mr. Olney, as one of the parting acts of his office, has discovered that there is no legal justification for doing so. But the innovation is due to Secretary Morton, who is made unpopular in Washington whatever he may gain in the estimation of the country at large. He works as a rule to 5 o'clock in the evening, and then takes his work home. He only quits the department when there is a general strike of messengers, clerks and electric fans to prevent him working when he wants to. During the recent hot spell an average of half a dozen times a day some chief or head of bureau would come in and hint that it was very hot, and that the ladies up-stairs would appreciate it if they could get off at 3 o'clock. Finally the Secretary's patience became exhausted and he remarked: "According to the census there were over twenty-two million people in 1890, who were struggling for a living in this country. Over four million of them are women, and I warrant they do not get off at 3 o'clock, not one in a thousand. They average about one-fourth the wages the clerks in this department get, and they and the others have to pay the taxes which keep this department going. If the ladies have got too delicate to work six hours and a half a day, I will go out and bring in some people who work ten hours a day on an average, and who will undoubtedly be glad to try the change."

When the matter came up in the Cabinet, Secretary Morton raised the point that the law required seven hours' work from all clerks, and as they begin at 9 o'clock they cannot be legally allowed to quit before 4 on a week day.

Attorney-General Olney looked up the law, reported that Secretary Morton was right, and the Cabinet decided that allowing clerks to leave at 3 must stop. There are over 20,000 angry clerks in Washington in consequence and Congress will be asked to change the law.

Banquet to Mr. D. Crawford.

Monday evening the large banquet hall of the Mercantile Club will see as merry a reunion as ever gathered there. An elaborate farewell dinner will be tendered to Mr. Dougal Crawford on the eve of his departure for Europe, by a host of his friends. A number of toasts will be given, which will blend most happily the interests of business, native and adopted land and speed the parting guest on his way. Following are the banquet-givers: William Anderson, George Augustine, Rev. M. Burnham, D. D., George Cousland, James M. Crawford, John F. Crawford, J. W. Dick, J. C. Dodds, Charles Duncan, David Eiseman, Joseph Franklin, John Gentles, Charles Gregory, D. M. Houser, Col. C. H. Jones, C. W. Knapp, M. J. Lowenstein, Wm. I. McArthur, J. H. McCluny, Wm. McCully, Ross McDonald, John B. McKay, Milton McRae, William F. Mills, Peter Nicholson, Alexander Penny, Rev. Wm. Porteous, D. D., Dr. Emil Preetorius, William Walker, George M. Wright, W. T. Blaine.

For the French Fete.

The committee having in charge preparations for the French fete met Friday evening. Some most talented vocalists have been secured for the musical programme, among them Miss Eugenia Dussuchal, Miss Josie Ladwig and Miss Ernestine Miltenberger. The official fete begins at 4 o'clock p. m., but there will be music in the garden during the whole of the afternoon. Several large balloons decorated with American and and French flags will be sent up. The contract for the fire works will be let this week. The pyrotechnic display, it is estimated, will cost not less than $800.

Public Library Meeting.

The Board of Directors of the Public Library at its regular monthly meeting yesterday, which was also the annual meeting of that body, considered the annual report. A deputation of the Ashland School requested the establishment of a branch library there. The Librarian's report showed that the book expenditures for the month were greater than the salaries, which are usually much the larger. Vacations were granted all the library assistants, and the matter of establishing branch libraries was laid over for more comprehensive consideration.

Lecture of Rev. M. B. Curry.

A delightful entertainment will be given in Entertainment Hall of the Exposition Building next Tuesday night. The Amateur Band of the Christian Brothers' College and a number of the city's best musicians have volunteered to furnish the musical part of the programme, the feature of which will be Rev. M. B. Curry's lecture on "Ireland in Song and Story."

Madison School Picnic.

The Madison School picnic will take place on June 11 by boat to Montesano Springs. Aeronaut Prof. S. Barsen and wife will make a balloon ascension and parachute drop on the grounds.

APPOINTMENTS ARE PENDING

The Office-Seekers and the Regulars Kept Close Tab on the Governor's Movements During His Stay.

Gov. Stone may not have been glad when he stepped on the Missouri Pacific train for Jefferson City last night, but if he wasn't it was because he enjoys hard work. For two whole days, to say nothing of nights, among St. Louis politicians sizes up with sawing wood any time.

From the time the Governor arrived Thursday night and boldly proclaimed that he had come to find some good men to fill offices, he hunted down and rounded up with an eagerness that nothing like a desire for office stimulates. When he got down from breakfast in the morning a crowd was waiting for him. When he managed to break away a scout would report, and all but a few regulars, who haunted the rotunda from the time he got up until he went to bed, would disperse. At dinner and supper time they would assemble again, and when he was known to have left the hotel off they would go hunting for him at likely places—all but the regulars. These were a curious feature. No one ever saw them speak to the Governor. Not one of them had the remotest chance to get an office and not one could help anybody else. But they took more interest in the Governor's movements; were more friendly with all the candidates; knew more people by their first names, and had more information to impart than anybody.

The pressure wasn't as great on the Governor Saturday as it had been. In some way the impression got abroad that it was to be a day of consultation with personal friends, and the crowd kept away. When the Governor came down about 9 o'clock he met Mr. J. W. Farris, County Committeeman from Lebanon, who had come to St. Louis to talk about the State silver convention. They went to the Governor's room, and had a consultation. Then the Governor went over to see Insurance Commissioner Waddell. They took dinner together, and then the tip went out in the hotel lobby that there was no use waiting—"he" wasn't going to be around until supper time. Mr. Farris met the Governor again after supper. State Treasurer Stephens called around, and at 8 o'clock the lobby was as clear as if there wasn't a man in St. Louis who wanted an office. The chief attraction had departed.

Before leaving Governor Stone said that some time would elapse before the appointment of the Election Commissioners. He added that it was not certain that he would name the Police Commissioners Monday, but that she probably do so wthin a few days.

It was pretty generally believed Saturday night that all the appointments had been practically decided upon. No doubt was expressed as to the selection of Col. James Bannerman and Dr. Otto E. Forster as the Police Commissioners. These appointments are considered settled, and the other applicants for the places gave up early in the day. Everybody admitted that they were good selections. Thad C. Harris, who had been urged for one of the places, dropped around the Laclede during the afternoon. "I haven't seen the Governor since he has been here," he remarked, "and I'm not going to trouble him." His possible selection as Associate Election Commissioner was suggested to him by a bystander. He laughed and said he didn't know anything about it. The Governor kew him pretty well, and if he wanted to recognize him he would. Harris, it was pretty well understood, would be taken care of. Most of the Governor's friends urged him, and Gov. Stone himself is known to have a warm personal regard for him. It is thought that the Associate Election Commissionership would fit him.

Coal Oil Inspector Bronaugh felt pretty certain that he was going to hold down the office for two years more, and the people who are supposed to know are confident that he will. In fact, unless everybody who ought to be able to make good guesses is mistaken the appointment of Col. Bannerman and Dr. Forster as Police Commissioners, Bronaugh for Coal Oil Inspector and Higgins as Election Commissioner are settled, with the chances all in favor of Thad Harris as Associate Election Commissioner.

Some way the Labor Commissionership has escaped. Lee Meriwether, who was Commissioner under Gov. Francis, was reported to have said that he didn't want the place and wouldn't have it under any circumstances. He said yesterday afternoon that he had said nothing of the kind. He did say that he was not in the habit of crossing a bridge before he came to it, and he was not going to refuse anything before he knew it was going to be offered him. Perhaps Mr. Meriwether will be Labor Commissioner a second time. He says he has done pretty well in his law and is taking in all the cases he can, but he wouldn't admit that he would not serve the State as Labor Commissioner, nor would he admit, either, that he wanted to. He was like a man on Easy street, and wasn't worrying much one way or the other.

Col. Bannerman said yesterday afternoon that he hadn't seen Gov. Stone for a long time until Friday night, and that he was in no sense an applicant for the police commissionership. "You had better be careful," he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "or you may be mistaken. I don't know anything about it."

Dr. Forster has been as reticent as Col. Bannerman. Both of them were conspicuous by their absence from the Laclede lobby, and in each case it will be about as clear a case of the office seeking the man as usually happens in politics. The Police Commissioners will be the first appointments made, and the others, it is said, may be held off.

In connection with the labor commissionership it is suggested that there is a vacancy in the chief clerkship of that office, which pays $1,800 a year, and that in making the appointment of the head of the bureau this may be taken into consideration. There was some gossip among the quid nuncs about transferring Mr. C. J. Connolly, now Factory Inspector, to the chief clerkship, but this was looked upon as little better than gossip. The chief clerkship has been overlooked, and it is something of a plum these times, too. The chief clerk is appointed by the Laebr Commissioner.

ANACONDA MINING CO.

The First Step in Its Reorganization Taken at Butte.

SALT LAKE, Utah, June 8.—A special to the Herald from Butte, Mont., says: The first step in the reorganization of the big Anaconda Mining Company was taken today in the filing of articles of incorporation of the Anaconda Copper Company, with a capital stock of $30,000,000, divided into 300,000 shares of $100 each. The object of the reorganization is to place the stock of the company on the market.

Police Briefs.

Sam Higgins was held up and robbed at the Levee and Locust street last night. Arthur Lahey was arrested at the Dispensary, where he went to have a wound dressed. He is charged with the crime, but claims he was injured in a fight at Sixth and Morgan streets.

Three young men jumped into a buggy belonging to Wm. Zeist at Broadway and Hickory street at 10 o'clock last night and drove off. Zeist lives at 2800 Menard street.

Detectives Scully and Kelly raided a crap game at 1415 Wash street last night and captured eight players and all the paraphernalia.

Whitelaw Reid's Mother May Die.

CEDARVILLE, O., June 8.—The aged mother of Whitelaw Reid, of the New York Tribune, is suffering from an illness from which she cannot survive. Mr. Reid, who is expected to arrive in New York to-day from a European tour, has been wired, apprising him of her condition.

ANNEXATIONIST THURSTON.

The Hawaiian Statesman Seeks Peace and South Sea Civilization.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—The steamer Monawi arrived this afternoon, bringing the following advices from Honolulu, dated June 1:

William R. Castle has been appointed Hawaiian Minister at Washington in place of L. A. Thurston. He will not leave for Washington until August 1. Mr. Castle was one of the commissioners sent to Washington to arrange for annexation as soon as the monarchy was overthrown.

The following dispatch was sent from Honolulu under date of May 2:

"The friends of Thurston are indignant, because they say he has been betrayed by a press agent in Washington. He permitted that agent to read his correspondence from Honolulu for the purpose of making himself familiar with the situation here, and instructed him to publish nothing which reflect upon the Government, as it might reflect upon his official position. Thurston's friends say the agent did not publish anything taken from the correspondence reflecting upon Cleveland, but he went immediately to Mr. Gresham and informed him that he had read at the Hawaiian legation letters sent to Thurston and furnished Gresham with the substance of them."

Minister Thurston was seen in regard to the foregoing, and admitted that it was substantially correct. He declined to go into details, saying he had made a report to his Government, which would be given to the press in a short time. This report would cover everything relating to his recall.

The following is the text of Minister Hatch's letter to Mr. Willis in reply to Mr. Gresham:

DEPARTMENT FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Honolulu, May 3, 1895.

Referring to our interview of the 30th ult., in which you intimated that the President of the United States would be pleased if the Hawaiian Minister at Washington should be recalled, for personal reasons, and upon which occasion you read to me a dispatch from the Secretary of State to yourself on the subject dated February 21, but which had been sent to Japan by mistake, I have the honor to inform you that Mr. Thurston is now in Hawaii and will not return to the post of Hawaiian Minister at Washington. I regret extremely that the presence in Washington of the late Minister is not agreeable and that the matters referred to by the Secretary of State should have been considered of sufficient gravity to call for the action taken.

Attorney Smith stated in relation to Secretary Gresham's letter to Mr. Willis of May 17 regarding the deportation of J. Cranstoun, that the statement in the letter that the only explanation made of the reason for deporting Mr. Cranstoun was that it was "in the exercise of the arbitrary authority conferred by martial law" is not correct, for, in addition to that reply to Mr. Willis, and in further reply to his inquiry as to the reasons of the course pursued, he stated to Mr. Willis that Mr. Cranstoun had been arrested and charged with conspiracy to overthrow the Government; that Cranstoun, with others, had been engaged in a plot to use dynamite; that though no charge had been made in court, the charge of conspiracy had been made and entered in the police records at the time of the arrest. Upon Mr. Willis' protesting against the proceedings and asking by what authority the action was taken, Mr. Smith replied as set forth in his letter, that "it was in the exercise of the arbitrary power conferred by martial law." Summary proceedings under the circumstances were deemed justifiable.

H. L. Verlye, the French Commissioner at this place, died on the 23d inst. The American League was addressed on the 29th inst. by Ministers Thurston and Hatch, Attorney-General Smith and W. N. Armstrong, who all spoke strongly in favor of annexation. Thurston closed his remarks by stating: "To summarize, I am an annexationist because I believe that a greater progress can be achieved under this than any other system of government; the people of Hawaii will secure peace, the establishment of Western civilization and material prosperity."

Mr. Castle is well remembered here as one of the commissioners who started for Washington as soon as the monarchy had been overthrown in the fruitless attempt to secure annexation. He has a wide acquaintance in Congressional circles made on that visit. He is a native of the islands, born of missionary stock. He is a lawyer by profession and a large owner of real estate. Besides that he is one of the principal owners of the Oahu Railroad, which runs from Honolulu to Pearl Harbor, the naval station granted to the United States by Kalakaua.

ABILLE'S VICTIM.

Arrival at New York of Edward Parker Deacon's Divorced Wife.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The divorced wife of Edward Parker Deacon arrived to-night from Paris on the French Line steamer La Touraine. Every effort to conceal her identity was made, the French Line officials either not knowing who she was or else aiding in the concealment. She came in under the name of Mme. Mittler, accompanied by another and the real Mme. Mittler, the lady to whom she fled after the tragedy in which Henri Abille was killed by Mr. Deacon.

Mme. Mittler has been Mrs. Deacon's firm friend all through her troubles. The party took supper in the Grand Union Hotel across the street from the depot and left for Boston on the 11 o'clock express. They left directions that their baggage be forwarded to the Hotel Vendome, Boston.

FILIBUSTERING EXPEDITION.

Confirmation of the Report That It Left Key West.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 8.—The Citizens' special from Key West says: The report of a filibustering expedition leaving here Wednesday night is confirmed. It left on the British schooner Mary Jane, and was towed to Cuba by the tugboat George W. Childs, which was in waiting for her outside. About 300 heavily armed men went from here, including Generals Roloff and Sanchez, and about 200 from Tampa, which latter the schooner had aboard when she put in here. The tug Childs was purchased by the Cubans, and has two small cannon aboard for defense.

The Citizens' Tampa, Fla., special says: General depression is noticeable over the report that a Spanish warship is patroling the east Florida coast.

Knocked Down and Robbed.

About 12:30 o'clock this morning Albert Ruckley, a baker, residing at 4959 Delmar avenue, was knocked down and robbed of a pocketbook containing $4.50 by Frank Atchenson and William Kelly.

The robbery took place on Third street, near Clark avenue, and the two thieves were running away, when Officer Doetz gave chase and caught them both. Atchenson is 20 years old and Kelly only 16. The pair were taken to the Four Courts, and warrants for highway robbery will be sworn out Monday.

Diamond Ear-Rings for $4.50.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Bridget Welch of 807 Walnut street turned over to the police a pair of diamond ear-rings which she said she bought a short time before for $4.50 from two unknown young men.

Later in the afternoon Patrick Holden was arrested charged with being one of the men who made the sale. He is being held pending an investigation. The ear-rings which are supposed to be stolen are at the Four Courts awaiting an owner.

A Traitor Shot.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A special from Panama says: It is reported that the traitor Maldonado has been shot by order of Gen. Bowen.

Plot to Overthrow Crespo.

CARACAS, Venezuela, June 8.—The feeling that trouble is not far off is growing steadily. Documents found by the secret police, it is reported, implicate high officials in a plot to overthrow Crespo.

McNulta and Nelson Morris.

PEORIA, Ill., June 8.—Fleischmann & Co., of Cincinnati, have notified Receiver McNulta that they will receive no more yeast from the Riverdale Distillery after July 1, and the receiver in turn has notified Nelson Morris to have all his cattle out by that time.

HIS WIFE WAS WITH ANOTHER.

Reason Why P. M. N. Baldwin Slew Andrew Yeoman.

THE HUSBAND'S SAD RETURN

On Approaching His Wife's Room He Heard Her Speaking in Endearing Terms.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 8.—The Gordon-Brown tragedy at Louisville several weeks ago was almost exactly duplicated here this morning, the only difference is that in the tragedy here the erring wife escaped the bullet her husband fired at her after he had mortally wounded her companion. The actors were P. M. N. Baldwin, his wife, and Andrew Yeoman.

Mr. Baldwin left home Friday afternoon to visit his orange grove. He intended to be away over night and so informed his wife. During the night Baldwin became ill and decided to return to Jacksonville. He reached his home at 4 o'clock this morning. On approaching his wife's room he heard her addressing some one in endearing terms. The door was locked, but he burst in and found his wife and Andrew Yeoman together. Baldwin had drawn his pistol as he entered the room and immediately began firing at the man who usurped his place.

The first bullet struck Yeoman in the back while Mrs. Baldwin's arms were still around him. It entered to the left of the column, about the middle, and even with the lower point of the shoulder-blade. A second bullet struck Yeoman in the muscles of the left arm and a third made a flesh wound in the right thigh. Mrs. Baldwin screamed for mercy, but the husband deliberately fired at her. The bullet missed her, and she rolled off the bed and hid underneath by the side of her mortally wounded companion. With the remark: "You are not worth killing," Baldwin made his wife crawl from under the bed, and without allowing her to dress, ordered her to go to the window and call for the neighbors. This she did, and soon a dozen persons were in the room.

Among those who came was Lieut. Minor of the police force and to him Mr. Baldwin surrendered. What aggravated Yeoman's offense is the fact that Baldwin has been his best friend. Yeoman is a young man and for a year has been practically supported by Baldwin. The former came here about a year ago without friends or money. Baldwin took a fancy to him, and having means, took Yeoman to his home, where the latter has since lived. Mrs. Baldwin is a handsome woman of 35. She was a Miss Barber before her marriage, and her family is prominent in Nassau County, Fla. In spite of the position in which she was found she denies that there was any undue intimacy between herself and Yeoman, she says Yeoman was one of the family, and she treated him as such. Baldwin is 50 years old and wealthy. He came here twelve years ago. His father lives in Cleveland, O., and is a millionaire. He is a nephew of ex-United States Senator Payne of Ohio. Baldwin and his father are largely interested in lead mines in Springfield, Mo. Baldwin was released on a bond for $1,500 this afternoon.

Doctors say that Yeoman cannot live through the night. The wound near the spine has caused paralysis and he can not speak.

AGAINST ITS CHARTER.

Tontine Savings Association in the Meshes of the Law.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 8.—In the case of the Tontine Savings Association the complaint was filed in court by the State alleging that the association is insolvent, that it is doing business not authorized by the charter; that it has ceased to exercise its corporate franchises and that it has property which should be preserved by a receiver in charge.

From the complaint it appears that the principal place of business is Minneapolis, while there is a branch office in Chicago, where the association has been doing a large business.

The association issued 12,002 bonds in which they promised to pay to the holders forty years from date the sum of $1,000, the holders to pay $2 a month and $10 when the bonds were purchased. The forfeiture period for the payment of the dues was ten days. The association has pretended to have a captial of $10,000 while really it had little or no capital. While the principal office was in Minneapolis it is alleged that the principal business in carrying out the swindling and gamblin scheme was carried on in Chicago, where a large number of bonds were sold to people supposing the association to be in good standing and their transactions regular. The association is in reality a gambling scheme and has been so argued by the Postoffice Department which, in April, forbade it the mails.

A part of the business has been loaning money on real estate mortgages to provide for the payment of the bonds, but the association is not doing any loaning business and is wasting its resources in extravagant salaries and offices.

COLOMBIA'S BOAST.

Claim That It Ranks Third Among Gold-Producing Countries.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright 1895 by Press Pub. Co.)

COLON, Colombia, June 8.—The local press claims that the Republic of Colombia ranks third among all the gold-producing countries.

The government contemplates splendid revenues from the exportation of this metal. Foreign capitalists own a majority of the mines.

HARMON'S APPOINTMENT.

It Was Made to Strengthen the Cause of Sound Money.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Morning Journal's Washington special says Harmon was chosen by Cleveland to strengthen the cause of "sound money" in the West and especially in Ohio, where the free silver men under Allen W. Thurman, are moulding public sentiment. The move is intended to supplement the campaign opened by Secretary Carlisle in Kentucky against silver.

Japan and Coreans.

TOKIO, Japan, June 8.—A cable to the Herald says: Japan's attitude toward Russia in respect to Corea is this, that she is willing to withdraw her troops, but expects the powers interested to guarantee the absolute independence of the Hermit Kingdom.

Utah Unrepresented.

SALT LAKE, Utah, June 8.—There will be no representative from Utah at the Memphis silver convention. The question was discussed to-day at a meeting of the committee of the Bimetallic Union, and Bartine and Rawlings, who were urged to go, could not leave on account of important business in the West.

Morning.

From the Pall Mall Budget.

Dawn in the East, and chill dew falling—
Tears of the new-born day;
Dew on the lawn, and blackbirds calling,
Music and mild mid-May.
The lilac, see, wins back the color
Lost on the field of night;
See, the spent stars grow dimmer, duller.
Look forth, my life's delight.

Open your window, lean above me,
Rose, my white rose, my song!
Leave your white nest, love, if you love me—
Night is so lonely, long.
Day is our own, and day's a-breaking;
Sweet sleepy eyes of gray,
You shall not chide an early waking,
When night grows kind as day!

BRUTAL FORCE.

The Cruel Evictions of Striking Miners in West Virginia.

WELCH, W. Va., June 8.—Striking miners in the Pocahontas region of Virginia are being evicted from the houses they occupy in large numbers, and the excitement there has been intense. The officers chop their way through the barricaded doors and remove the furniture to the street.

One woman, a Hungarian, who fought to prevent her furniture being removed, was struck with a hatchet by a constable and seriously injured.

To-day five men acting as agents for W. G. Baldwin, the Norfolk & Western Railway detective, were arrested at Pocahontas for beating and trying to compel by force some of the strikers to go to work. It is thought that serious results may be the outcome.

SCALED A BOARD FENCE.

Tom McManus Escapes From Officer McCormick at the Four Courts.

Officer Robert McCormick saw Tom McManus, alias Frank Adams, 18 years old, breaking into the grocery store of Timothy O'Brien, Thirteenth and Spruce streets, at 11:30 o'clock last night. Timothy O'Brien is the boy's uncle. Officer McCormick arrested McManus and walked him to the Four Courts.

At the door of the station McManus broke away and ran. Officer McCormick threw his club at him, but it flew wide of its mark and struck one Elliott, a passerby, and knocked him down. The officer gave chase after McManus, but fell down and barked his shins. McManus escaped by scaling a high board fence between Market and Walnut streets.

FATAL BULLETS.

Two Shot in the South Carolina Labor Troubles.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 8.—The labor troubles in Berkley County are becoming serious. Rioting has broken out at the Bulwer mines and the Sheriff has his hands full. His posse of fifteen men were attacked yesterday by the strikers and two of the latter were fatally shot.

DOOMED STAMP STEALERS.

Postoffice Inspector Gould and Postmaster Ridgely Positive.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 8.—Postoffice Inspector Gould and Postmaster Ridgeley and party returned this morning from New York, where they fully identified Joseph H. Killoran, Charles Allen and Harry Russell as the men whom they suspected of having robbed the postoffice here of $8,000 in stamps at noon April 3.

KILLED ONE ANOTHER.

The Murderous Encounter of Kentucky Brothers-in-Law.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 8.—A special to the Courier-Journal from Corbin, Ky., says: At Keavy, in Laurel County, eight miles northwest of here, T. D. Moore, Postmaster, and Tip Stern, Assistant Postmaster, had a fight to-day in which both were instantly killed, both being shot near the heart. Sterm was jealous of Moore, which was the cause of the trouble. They were brothers-in-law.

TWO STUDENTS SHOT.

Work of an Impudent Negro on a Princeton Sidewalk.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 8.—Two students of Princeton College, Gerry Cochran, '98, and Fred Ohl, '98, were shot to-night in front of Anderson's restaurant by a negro named Jackson. Three shots were fired, all taking effect. Cochren's injuries are not serious, but Ohl is in a bad condition.

The trouble originated in the negro blocking the sidewalk and the students attempting to pass. One ball took effect in Cochran's wrist and another in the chin. Ohl was struck in the abdomen and seriously injured.

The negro had a bad reputation in the town and the feeling among the students has been aroused by his murderous attack. The town officials were not slow to arrest Jackson and convey him to a place of safety.

A RESTRAINING ORDER.

Against the Officers of the Louisiana Electric Light Co.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 8.—Application was filed in the United States Court yesterday by the American Loan and Trust Company of Boston, and the papers were served to-day asking the appointment of a receiver of the Louisiana Electric Light and Power Company, and that the President and Directors of said company, namely, Joseph Simon, Maurice Hart, Samuel J. Hart, E. L. Bemiss, A. Woods, E. J. Hawthorne of New Orleans, R. T. McDonald of Ft. Wayne, Ind., be restrained from further participation in the management of the affairs of said company. Petition further alleges that R. T. McDonald and Maurice Hart unloaded $480,000 stock of the worthless New Orleans Power Company on the Louisiana Light Company, for which the latter company received no benefits whatever.

Judge Pardee issued a restraining order directed against the officers of the Louisiana Electric Light Company enjoining them from any disposition of the property and commanding them to appear in court June 13 to show cause why the receivers prayed for should not be appointed.

HARVEY-HORR DEBATE.

Referee Gage and Taylor Have Agreed on a Plan.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 8.—Lyman J. Gage, referee for Roswell G. Horr, and Howard S. Taylor, referee for Mr. W. H. Harvey, have practically agreed upon the essential points in the plans for the silver discussion to be held by those gentlemen, and the papers were mailed to-day to Mr. Horr at New York, for his signature. The time is not definitely fixed, but the contest will begin about July 10. The plan provides for discussing a chapter of Coin's Financial School at each session, said session being three hours in length and to continue daily unless otherwise agreed. There is nothing of the old-fashioned debate in the plan. There will be no speeches, but the contestants will face each other sitting, and when one affirms a proposition the other will cross-examine by questions, all to be taken down by a stenographer, and published daily in the papers, and afterwards put in book form for general distribution at cost.

A BLACK BEAST.

Miss Allen's Assaulter Caught and in Danger of Lynching.

M'ALPINE, Fla., June 8.—News reached here to-day that a negro attempted criminal assault upon a Miss Allen in Lafayette County Thursday night. Members of the family rushed to her aid and the negro was captured before he could escape from doom and was bound, but he broke away during the night.

He was again captured last night near Mayo and this morning at 7 o'clock Mayo was all excitement. A large crowd of citizens had gathered and the negro was to be lynched at noon sharp. No further details are obtainable.

Hope for Mrs. Hughson.

MUSKEGON, Mich., June 8.—In the trial of Mrs. Henry Hughson, charged with poisoning her second husband, Nathan Douglass, to-day, Prof. V. C. Vaughn of Michigan University, in his expert testimony exploded the theory that the arsenic found in him came from the embalming fluid.

HE VILLIFIED VACCINATION.

The Steamer New York Held in Quarantine by One Man.

MADE GLUE FOR A LIVING.

Defiance to the Doctor and a Fierce Appeal to All the Steerage Passengers.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A middle-aged man in the steerage held up the American Liner New York to-day for almost an hour in Quarantine. He gave his name as C. E. Ellis, and said he made glue for a living. The trouble which culminated in an open row began after the New York left Southampton. The ship's doctor gleaned him from other immigrants as a subject worthy of vaccination.

"What are you going to do?" asked he.

"Going to vaccinate you," was the reply.

"Oh, no," responded the glue man. "Not me, I don't think."

Later the doctor started to jab the immigrants and the man with side whiskers arose in his wrath and called him "Dentist." He turned to the immigrants and told them to stick to their rights. He recounted the horrors of virus and that he as an American citizen had defied the surgeon to vaccinate him with the poisoned lancet. But the others were mainly immigrants who had never had any rights and were coming here to get them. They were a little appalled by the regalia of the ship's surgeon and, frowning on the words of Ellis, subjected themselves to vaccine.

When the New York reached Quarantine to-day Deputy Health Officer Sanborn went aboard.

"You must be vaccinated," said the doctor to the man of glue, "or you will be taken to Hoffman Island and held for six days."

"Well, I won't be either," said the man with the side whiskers, "I ain't going to be vaccinated and I ain't going to Hoffman Island."

"Yes you are," said Dr. Sanborn, and the seamen began rigging a whip and tackle to swing him aboard the Quarantine tug. The man said he would be taken from the steamer at the peril of everybody in sight. He said he would sue; that he knew his rights and he had his way. The ship's officers refused to put him aboard the health tug and Dr. Sanborn, wishing to make an issue refused to put him aboard on his own authority.

So the steamer after being held for nearly an hour, while all hands parleyed with the glue man, who stuck to his rights, proceeded to her pier. When the gangplank was laid ashore the glue man walked unconcernedly to the pier. He was immediately held up by an immigration inspector who demanded his health certificate. He hadn't any, so, protesting again on his rights, he was led away to Ellis Island, and when the sun went down it was on his wrath. Some of the inspectors say he lives in New York, but another declares the man is going to write the vaccine outrage to the London Times.

DOGS NEVER GO MAD.

Supt. Hankinson Is Willing to Play Tag With Any of Them.

NEW YORK, June 8.—"Mad dog? Nonsense, there never was an unmolested dog that went mad. Hydrophobia from a dog's bite? Not a bit of truth in it."

This bold statement, coming after the dreadful death of John Cooper of White Plains, is pretty certain not to pass unchallenged, but it is made by Superintendent Charles Hankinson of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"Dogs don't go mad," he went on to say, "It's a popular fallacy that they do. A dog gets overheated as a human being would and runs along the street looking for some quiet place to lie down and rest. The cry of mad dog goes up. People run at him from all directions. A crowd pursues him with stones and sticks. The dog makes frantic efforts to escape. Finally he is driven into a corner. He is then in a state of terror. He feels that he is surrounded by enemies who seek his life. He makes a fight for his existence. In doing so he bites one or more of his tormentors. Then the policeman comes along and shoots the dog. Now, if they let that dog alone, no one would have been bitten and after getting the rest he needed he would have been perfectly harmless.

"One of the most eminent specialists in hydrophobia in this city told me recently that a big hearty fellow came to him one day and wanted an injection to prevent death from dog bite. There was nothing the matter with the man and the doctor refused to humor him. He called a third time. His fears were beginning to tell on his health and at last the doctor gave it to him. He injected some water into the man's body. He believing it to be the regular injection went away satisfied. He never returned, and is as well to-day as he ever was.

"Why, in twenty years' experience here we have had any number of mothers visit us with stories of mad dogs. We have talked each of them into believing that the dog was not mad, and we have never heard of a single death in any of these cases. I am not afraid of any so-called mad dog, nor would I be alarmed in the least if one bit me. There are vicious dogs as there are vicious men, and such animals should be killed, but our men will pick up any alleged mad dog and put him in a basket or bag to be brought to these rooms, if they are not any more afraid than I am of hydrophobia."

THURMAN ANSWERED.

Chairman Smalley Replies to the Manifesto to Democrats.

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—M. A. Smalley of Upper Sandusky, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, has written a reply to Hon. A. W. Thurman's manifesto to Ohio Democrats. Mr. Smalley says he thinks that inasmuch as Mr. Thurman came within 137,000 votes of carrying the State for the Democrats last fall, the only duty left for him to perform is to drop back into the ranks. Mr. Smalley says there has been no demand for an early convention. Neither does he know of any other reason why he should not confer with Senator Brice, Governor Campbell, Larry Neal and hosts of other level-headed Democrats about matters affecting the prosperity of the Democratic party.

SELF-STARVATION.

A Pennsylvania Woman Who Has Eaten Nothing in Seven Weeks.

READING, Pa., June 8.—Mrs. Lene Bridenbaugh of Gibraltar, this county, is starving to death. The woman has eaten nothing in seven weeks. When she first refused food, she weighed about 130 pounds. She is now but a skeleton and weighs scarcely twenty pounds.

BROKE ALL RECORDS.

The Average Time of the Steamship Northwest 19 1-20 Miles an Hour.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 8.—The steamship Northwest arrived at Sault Ste. Marie at 6:30 o'clock this evening. She broke all records on her trip down Lake Michigan, making 327 miles in 17 hours and 10 minutes. The average was 19 1-20 miles an hour.

Cappels vs. Valley Parks.

This afternoon at Sportsman's Park the Cappels and the Valley Parks will play. The teams are composed of the following players:

Cappels—Lally 3b, Malone 2b, Furey 1b, Lynch r. f., Fahey s. s., O'Connell c. f., Fossill or Rawlings p., Geraghety or McBride c.

Valley Park—Griffin 2b, Wartine s. s., Kleiber c., Myers c. f., Winters 3b, Leahy p., Kreymeyer r. f., McLean 1b, Sturgeon or Young l. f.

MAY SHOW THE PEOPLE IN MARS.

The Great Glass of the Yerkes Telescope Finished.

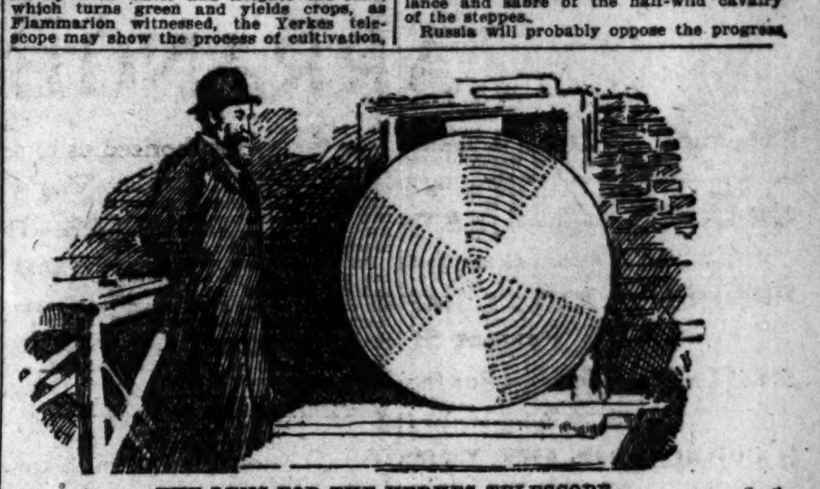
Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

We are likely during the present summer to learn more about Mars than astronomers during all their history of their science have discovered up to the present time about that planet and its people. It required the 26-inch telescope of the United States Naval Observatory to discover the satellites of Mars. Then the Lick telescope, with its 36-inch glass, was built and immediately the three strange signal lights on Mars were discovered.

Now the great 40-inch lens—the hugest telescope lens ever made—which Alvan E. Clark has been working on for more than a year at Cambridge, Mass., for the Yerkes telescope, is completed and will be shipped to its destination. The big telescope at the Naval Observatory had been unable to bring out the signal lights of Mars, as the telescopes before that time had failed to note the satellites, and the Yerkes telescope will be so much bigger than the Lick, already the largest in the world, that astonishing discoveries may be made as soon as it is set up.

Who knows but that, looking through the great 40-inch glass of this huge instrument, astronomers will be able to make out definitely the system of signals which the Martians are believed to be using in an effort to communicate with the inhabitants of earth? Even the great canal system of Mars as is now suspected by more than one, may turn out to be a gigantic semaphore.

Upon the other hand, when these canals fill up with water and irrigate the land, which turns green and yields crops, as Flammarion witnessed, the Yerkes telescope may show the process of cultivation, here noting where a field has been cut and there where a fire has ravaged. The strange lights in a triangle may no longer be mysterious and puzzling to astronomers, while the black dots and dashes on the white polar caps of the planet may be deciphered. Railroads, water works, ships and whole cities existing on the surface of Mars may come out under this huge telescope, the glass of which has just been photographed in the workshop of Mr. Clark.



THE LENS FOR THE YERKES TELESCOPE.

The lens of the Yerkes telescope, now at Cambridge, when the glass came from Paris in the rough, and before a stroke of work had been done upon it to fashion it into its present delicate and beautiful shape, cost $40,000.

It was at the last opposition of Mars that the observations made through the Lick telescope disclosed the strange lights which so excited the scientific world. The lights have since disappeared in the Mount Hamilton instrument.

But so much greater is the power of the new Yerkes instrument that it is believed it will at once bring these lights, if they still exists on Mars, into view, though the planet is many millions of miles further from the earth now than at the time of their first observation. With Mars swinging closer to the earth during the advance of this year, and the greater familiarity with the instrument which the astronomers must gain through constant use, the outlook for important Martian discoveries is exciting widespread discussion.

The lens will soon be shipped from Cambridge to the shores of Lake Geneva, in Wisconsin, where the observatory is to be situated. It must not be supposed that it will be bundled into a freight car like a barrel of oil, perhaps to be lost in transit and searched for by a "tracer."

The great lens, representing a fortune in itself, will have its own palace car, which will be specially chartered for the trip. It will be transported from the workshop of Mr. Clark and lifted on board with the utmost care. Mr. Clark and a body of his skilled workmen, besides several astronomers, will accompany the glass, keeping constant watch over it from one end of the journey to the other.

Even in its palace car the great lens, which may shed more light upon the science of astronomy than all the telescopes that have ever been built, will not be left to itself upon the cushioned floor. It will be poised and balanced so as to receive as little jar as possible, and it will be turned from one position to another from time to time during the trip, thereby avoiding polarization of the molecules of glass from the motion of the train.

The telescope for which this magnificent product of science and skill is intended was the gift of Charles T. Yerkes to the Chicago University, made at the time when the announcements of the startling observations of the Lick telescope on Mars were first exciting the scientific world. But it is now admitted upon all hands that the Yerkes instrument, from the satisfactory tests that have been made and its greater size, will completely eclipse the Lick instrument in focal range and power, and the first results of its being turned on Mars when the planet is in opposition will be anxiously awaited.

Mars. A Phantasy.

My dear love she is on Mars,
Far away among the stars,
Though her mortal members molder underneath the sullen sea;
Yet her spirit is awake,
And doth daily journeys take
Round the planet's broad horizon, seeking silently for me.

She is happy in her quest,
For there come at her behest
Pleasant dreams of blessed union with the one she still adores;
And my love, she knoweth not
That on earth must be my lot
Till my soul the sin it cherishes most earnestly abhors.

Though I love my love alway,
It is not for me to say
When the fates will let me join her in the lovely planet Mars;
For in evil I was born,
And the Martian spirits scorn
Sinful souls that seek their planet from the seething lower stars.

Yet in hope I live and strive,
That some day I may arrive
At the holiness that ruleth in that orb so far away;
Seeing that my love doth know
Nothing of the sin and woe
That encompass me and keep me on this sordid earth to-day.

Declared a Draw.

DENVER, Colo., June 8.—Geo. Hall and "Frenchy" Osborn fought fifteen rounds at Coliseum Hall to-night. Hall weighed 120 pounds and Osborn 127. "Frenchy" had the best of it in most of the rounds, but as both were on their feet at the end of the fifteenth round, according to previous agreement, the fight was declared a draw.

WHY JAPAN SHOULD FEAR.

Russia's Hordes of Savage Horses and Riders Could Eat Her Up.

Eighteen millions of Russian horses are ready to swoop down upon Japan. Even without their semi-savage riders they could lay that country waste in a short time. But with ferocious Cossacks, who form the principal horse soldiers of the Russian Army on their backs, there is no limit to the destructive force involved. In order to accomplish this devastation, however, the eighteen millions of Russian horses must be landed in Japan, and that is a military achievement of vast difficulty. The military power of Russia is mainly a power of cavalry and not of infantry. She relies upon raids, not on campaigns. When an enormous cavalry force is directed upon a pastoral or agricultural country, the inhabitants have little chance of successful resistance. They are first raided, and then absorbed by the great white Czar, who is forced to annex such fertile and bounteous lands as he can lay his hands upon.

But in mountainous regions where cavalry action is hampered, Russia has always been at a disadvantage. Witness the successful struggle of the independent tribes of the Caucasus under the leadership of the Schamyl, or Samuel, with foot soldiers. The Russian infantry regiments are mere bodies of ignorant slaves, drilled by the lash and not permitted to have any of the feelings and aspirations of intelligent beings. Few of the rank and file can read or write, and the desire for promotion is unknown. The infantry is a mechanical fighting machine and is driven into battle at the point of the lance and sabre of the half-wild cavalry of the steppes.

Russia will probably oppose the progress of the Japanese nation and attempt to restrict the extension of the wonderful civilization that has sprung up on the ruins of the ancient empire of the Shoguns. The world does not perceive the true causes of that unexampled advance and the extraordinary military capacity of the Japanese. It is generally supposed that the success of the Mikado's arms in the war with China was due to the adoption of Western methods of warfare and legislation. The fact is overlooked that for many centuries Japan has been preparing for such an advance.

The Russian is a man of the fifteenth century—the Japanese a man of the nineteenth. Russia is an autocracy— a one-man power—conducted upon the principle of savage life in which the common people are practically slaves. Japan is a constitutional empire. It has passed through precisely the same phases that Europe has—progressing from tribal association to feudalism, and from feudalism to political liberty.

The Shogun, or general-in-chief of the Japanese armies, seized the reins in 1192, just as successful generals did in Europe, and supported his usurpation by establishing a baronial system of landed gentry, who eventually succeeded in making themselves virtually independent, as did the English barons when they forced King John to sign the Magna Charta. These barons, or daimios, maintained numbers of retainers, bound to give their lords military service, and represented by the order of the Samurai or "men of two swords," who formed the feudal aristocracy of Japan. Under this feudal system the military caste became imbued with chivalry. Its members were trained to look upon their lives as of no value as compared to their honor. It was their duty to die, if necessary, in defense of their lords. This state is admirably illustrated in the ancient romance of the self-sacrifice of the forty-seven men of the double swords, written by Temenaga Shunsui, and still the most popular of all ancient Japanese historical tales.

Such military training rendered the introduction of improved methods of warfare easy. In fact, it was nothing more than the ordinary change that has taken place in all armies consequent upon the improvement of weapons, whereby the old Brown Bess was supplanted by the breech-loading rifle, and the tactics of close, bodily fighting exchanged for the modern system of independent yet concerted action.

The Chinese, on the contrary, preferring the ploughshare to the sword, remained practically in the bygone centuries in which they, to a great extent, resemble the Russians. Both have yet to pass through the feudal state to constitutional liberty. The Japanese private soldier is in no sense a serf. Nearly every Japanese, of however low a grade in society, can read and write his own language and is conversant with the history of his country. He is likewise imbued with a deep sense of patriotism and loyalty, and has pride in being a native of Dai-Nipon, the land of the rising sun, typified in the national floral emblem, the yellow chrysanthemum. Every encouragement is given to education in Japan; every obstacle is offered to it in Russia.

In China, education is free, indeed, but it is fossilized. Any man can become a scholar by application, but he can learn nothing new. The writings of Con-Fu-Tze (Confucious), though containing the germs of philosophy, are not quite up-to-date." They are the foundation, but not the superstructure of knowledge, as knowledge is understood to-day. The Chinaman, therefore, however learned, has not advanced beyond the rudiment.

If Russia, or China, or both, should succeed in limiting the progress of Japan, civilization in that race will be arrested for ages. If, on the contrary, Japan succeeds in preserving the leading position she has so gallantly earned, civilization will flow over the Mongolian world and that jealous and exclusive race will wheel into the march of progress alongside of the Aryan race that has hitherto so far distanced it.

Japan has been frequently called the "Great Britain of the Pacific." The Empire of Japan is an island realm, consisting, like Great Britain and Ireland, of three mainlands, two of them connected by an isthmus, as are England and Scotland, and called by the name of Honshu, and another named Kyushu, separated by a strait or arm of the sea as Ireland is separated from England. Shikoku, a smaller island, answering to the Isle of Man, lies between Kyushu and Honshu, and various small islands connect Japan with Corea, as the Channel Islands connect England with France. To the northward lies the Archipelago of Cutile, the principal island of which is Yezo, answering to the Orkney and Shetland Islands in the north of Scotland.

This conformation has forced Japan into maritime life just as England was obliged to take to the sea. It has made the people hardy and daring, and has caused her to take an active part in coast defense and naval matters. Her expedition to Formosa in 1874, contrary to China's objections, and her Corean policy all bear resemblance to the course of national conduct which England has pursued for many years. And now her invasion of China points finally to the same desire for annexation that caused Great Britain to overrun India and to colonize America. The lack of home territory is the moving power in each case. Islands must colonize or starve, and if nothing arrests Japan, she may extend her dominion over the Asiatic world and her ships may bear a flag on which, like the flag of England, "The sun never sets!"

ANOTHER LONG MARK MAN WON.

Forest Park Road Race Captured by J. C. Weidner.

HAMILTON GOT FIRST TIME.

The Post-Dispatch Diamond Medal Won by the Fast Man From Denver, a Team Mate of Jack Coburn.

Fifteen thousand people saw the fifth annual Forest Park road race and W. W. Hamilton of the Denver wheelmen, win the Post-Dispatch diamond time medal yesterday over the new course in and around the park. It was an ideal day and society turned out to see what is now the classic cycling event of St. Louis and to applaud J. C. Weidner, who won the first place from the seven-minute mark.

The race was advertised to start at 4 o'clock, and the men were sent off to the second. Long before that time, however, immense crowds had gathered and were pressing against the ropes, which had been stretched along the finish for 600 feet to enable the riders to have a clear space. Back of those on foot and awheel were rigs of all descriptions, in which stood some of the fairest devotees of cycling, late converts, who were yet too new in the art to venture into such a crowd on wheels.

Shortly before the race began the space near the start was swarming with people on bicycles and afoot. Then came the sound of a trumpet and from the southern part of the road was seen Co. D, the Drummond Guards, marching up with fixed bayonets. The soldier boys paraded to the Blair monument and then Capt. Holtcamp detailed squads to guard the course. He had fifty men in line, and these were scattered along the entire stretch and they did their duty well. The boys endured the hot sun and guarded the lines so well that no intruder dared cross the road, for the watchful eye of the militiamen was on them all.

A large part of the crowd saw the race from the interior of the park and while these could not see the finish, the riders passed around often enough for them to see the relative positions.

The course was as follows: Starting near the Blair monument, west under the Wabash bridge past the Sylvan Lake and the police station, following the road that passes by the old restaurant, turning south over the Hill road, up "Nigger" hill and continuing up to the Clayton road; at this point east on the road that passes down to the drinking fountain, and at the drinking fountain to the right, continuing until Clayton road is reached; over the Clayton road to King's highway and north on King's highway to Blair monument. This course was covered five times, making the distance twenty miles.

When the roll was called seventy-seven out of the eighty-nine entries responded to their names. This was a larger proportion of starters than in any previous race and speaks well for the handicapping of Mr. W. M. Rosborough that all should have been so well satisfied with their marks.

As the hands of the watch pointed to 4 Starter Perrett of Chicago sent the limit men speeding on their twenty-mile ride. These included C. A. Newman, Frank Bergin, Alex Fox and W. B. Hood. They were allowed ten minutes over the scratch men, and as they began their long ride the crowd sent up a cheer, and it took the good work of the vigilant Drummond Guards to keep the enthusiasts back. Then Chief Clerk Emory lined up P. E. Barth, W. W. Rankin, Wm. Voges and Albert Ernst, the nine-minute men, and they were turned loose after the limit men.

Then in regular order came H. C. Kreidler, Charles Noel, E. L. Clifford, H. Rebenschied, Jr., C. C. Weaver, Frank Bosworth, J. F. Barsaloux, L. M. Byrnes and E. H. McCready, 8 minutes; Roy Dunn, W. L. Miller, Bud Bersch, W. Biedeman, G. W. Parker, Jr., A. Y. Ellison, G. J. Ellwanger, and H. G. Tatum, 7½ minutes; W. M. Bollman, Charles Bohn, D. T. Geraghty, J. C. Weidener, who was destined to win, F. H. Nagel, D. G. Crofton, H. C. Crow, Fred Harris and James T. Little, 7 minutes; H. Nulsen, S. A. Van Hofen, E. C. Dann, Ben Clegg and Walter Hitchings, 6½ minutes; J. J. Becherer, Gus Loeffel, C. G. Nash, Ernest Stade, C. L. Knower, R. H. Laing and Lou Coburn, 6 minutes; L. M. Rumsey, Jr., Clement R. Kirby, Ed Goedde, C. A. Magge and Ed S. Wills, 5½ minutes; W. G. Corfe, J. D. Kelly, Arthur Wood, J. C. Spillman, George Hellmich, H. McLaughlin, D. C. Porter, G. E. Twig and E. A. Kreider, 5 minutes; A. A. Rowe, Ed Guenther, Alex Laing, Horace Rumsey and T. W. Coburn, 4 minutes; Wm. Wicke and E. Howard, 3 minutes; R. E. Miller and Herman Kohl, 2 minutes; Frank Wing and G. A. Maxwell, 1¼ minutes; A. G. Harding, E. A. Grath, Tracy Holmes and W. W. Hamilton, the subsequent time winner, scratched.

Of these starters two were winners of previous races. Carl Ellers carried off the honors in 1893 and Horace Rumsey showed first across the tape in 1894. This time Ellers got twenty-fourth place and Rumsey did not finish.

As soon as the scratch men were sent away the officials retired to a temporary stand at the finish and speculation began as to whom the prizes would fall to. Scorers and checkers kept account of the men as they passed and the friends of each contestant would note with pleasure as the riders would fly by, if they had gained a point or two. Across from the officials' stand was the electrical timer's tent and in it sat Johnny Bowman, who called the numbers with a sonorous voice into a phonograph.

Hardly had the scratch men passed the tape when C. A. Newman, a limit man, was seen coming around the bend in the road. He was riding well and was closely followed by the other long handicap men, with the exception of Frank Bergin, who had dropped back to eleventh place. Weidner showed what he was made of in the first lap. He was sent off in twenty-ninth place and had passed enough men to put him in the thirteenth position on the first time around. Bud Bersch had also pulled up well from nineteenth to fourteenth place and many others scored from one to two points.

Jas. D. Kelly did not finish in the first. As he made the turn by the Blair statue he collided with a spectator and was thrown violently to the ground. He was taken to the dressing tent and a doctor sent for, as the young man was bleeding at the mouth profusely. Six other men also dropped out in this lap, including Bert Harding.

On the second lap Newman was still leading, and Weidner had moved up to fifth place. Lou Coburn had gained many points also, and was twelfth, having passed fifteen men in the four miles. Frank Bergin had dropped to thirtieth, and was virtually out of the race, as was shown afterward, when he finish fiftieth. H. C. Kreidler had moved up next to the leader, a place he kept until the end. Rumsey, last year's winner, quit with Charles Maggis of Pittsburg on this lap.

The most radical changes were noted on the third time round. Weidner had taken command and was closely followed by H. C. Kreidler. Ed Kreidler, the latter's brother, had wheeled up from sixtieth place at the start into fourteenth, and Ernest Stade was behind him, having passed fifteen men. Newman dropped back to fourth, though Hood still held his position as third man. Bob Laing had gained 24 points and was riding strong in tenth place on this lap. Many of the long shots weakened and were falling back little by little.

In the fourth lap the scratch men began to climb up on the leaders. Grath, Hamilton and Holmes started seventy points behind the limit men and in this round they were thirty-eighth, thirty-ninth and fortieth. E. A. Kreidler had moved up four more pegs, Bob Laing had passed five competitors, and Lou Coburn had showed his rear tire to three more men. Gus Loeffel had also thrown dust on five men and Alex Laing had made a wonderful spurt, clearing a space between him and twelve riders who had led him in the previous lap.

H. C. Crow had a bad fall as he passed the tape, which delayed him for some time, but he pluckily continued and only lost two points, although he was without the prize limit.

When the bugler of the Drummond Guards sent up his shrill blasts for the final there were but fifty-six of seventy-seven starters left in the race, and it was now much easier to pick the winner than in the beginning, for Weidner was looking as fresh as a daisy when he heard the bugle sound for the last lap.

All eyes were turned toward the last corner the men had to pass and presently a man was seen to come sprinting down the smooth road between the file of soldiers. He was so doubled up that no one could tell who he was, but the number, 31, on the front of his machine told that Weidner had won the day. H. C. Kreidler was close behind him, and next came Lou Coburn, Bob Laing and his brother Alex, who had passed in all fifty-seven men in the twenty miles. Hamilton of Denver came in twentieth, and Holmes of Chicago twenty-first, winning the first and second time prizes, as well as the last two place prizes. Ed Grath of the Pastime Athletic Club was in twenty-fifth place, but he won the third time prize, in 54:31.

The place prize winners and the clubs to which they belong with the handicaps and actual riding are as follows:

The St. Louis Cycling Club won the silver cup offered to the club, whose members scored the most points. The Cycling Club scored 101 and the Pastimes 75.

W. W. Hamilton, who won the Post-Dispatch diamond time medal, is a member of the Denver Wheelmen and is also a member of the Syracuse team. He is 25 years of age and has already made a name for himself, having won the time and first place prizes in the Decoration Day road race at Denver in 1894 from scratch with ninety-two entries. He rode the 25-mile course in 1:35:00 in a driving rainstorm. He rides in the rear seat of the Syracuse quadruplet right behind Jack Coburn and these, with O'Connor and Terrill, paced Dirnberger in his record-breaking rides at Fountain Ferry last month.

J. C. Weidner, the first place winner, is scarcely known in cycling. He is 22 years of age and began riding only last year. Like Mulkey and Rumsey, this was the first road race in which he ever rode. He does not belong to any club.

The first road race was in 1891 and it was won by the late R. M. Milford, a member of the St. Louis Cycling Club. Carl Ellers carried the trophy into the Pastime Club in 1892, and Carroll Mulkey turned the trick in 1893. The Pastimes were again victorious in 1894, when young Horace Rumsey almost coasted in from the limit mark.

For the last four years the Post-Dispatch has put up the medal for the time prize, and the diamond medal this year exceeded all others in point of beauty and value. Next year the Post-Dispatch will again offer the first time medal, and it will surpass that of this year and be so valuable that this prize alone will be worth the efforts of the riders without any others.

THE LEAGUE IS CAPABLE.

Antagonistic Organizations Will Find It Hard to Fight.

The League of American Wheelmen, as an organization, has done much good in the interests of cycling and good roads, in the course of its different administrations. Mistakes have been made, but they were perpetrated in the line of what was deemed duty, and are excusable. Personal and local troubles have been taken to heart by the aggrieved, and attempts made to injure the organization as a whole on this account, but have been signal failures, as for instance, the organization of the "Knights of the Wheel," some two or three years ago. This body was the outgrowth of a sectional fight, but never amounted to very much. Its membership ran up to 150 or 200, and then practically disbanded.

Now comes the report of the organization of the "American League." What it proposes to do is already taken care of by the L. A. W., and is managed as well, if not better than the "American" can hope of doing. What is to be done for cycling must be done immediately, for the sport has broken away from its swaddling clothes of infancy, and assumed mammoth proportions, and must be dealt with by men of experience, besides having the benefits of drilled organization, all of which are found in the League of American Wheelmen.

L. A. W. REMOVALS.

Executive Committee Extends the Time to July 1.

Secretary Butler has revised the membership roll of the L. A. W. and finds that the total present membership is 200 greater than it was at this time last year. More new members have been admitted than ever before, and there is a good balance in the Treasury. By a vote of the National Executive Committee the renewal season has been extended to July 1 for this year only, and it is to be hoped that the 185 members who have not sent in their dollar to date will attend to it at once.

The new road book is in press and will be out July 1. It will be sent free to all members. In view of the impending Heckel anti-bicycle bill it behooves all wheelmen to enroll themselves under the banner of the great organization which has from first to last fought and defeated all contrary legislation.

CLUB BIRTHDAY.

The South Side Will Celebrate Their Anniversary Wednesday.

A large crowd promises to be present at the South Side's third anniversary supper, which will take place at Shoenlan's Grove Wednesday evening, June 12. The members are requested to assemble at the club rooms by 7:20 p. m., to ride to the grove in a body.

At the monthly meeting held last Tuesday four new members were admitted, and preparations are being made to send a strong delegation to the State meet.

After the supper on Wednesday evening the contemplated club picnic at Meramec Highlands, June 16, will be discussed and final arrangements made to insure its success.

AN ELDERLY CONVERT.

Mrs. Edwards of Kirkwood Announces Her Intention of Riding.

One of the latest converts to cycling is Mrs. Edwards, one of the most popular and well-known elderly ladies of Kirkwood, Mo. Mrs. Edwards is a grandmother and refuses to disclose her age, but her enthusiasm is as great as any of the younger ladies. She announced to Mr. Joseph Franklin that she would shortly mount a wheel, and that gentleman expressed a desire to act as her escort. Mrs. Edwards' reply was that he could not lead her through byways and out-of-the-way lanes for she intended to ride through the principal streets of the town.

St. Louis County people are anxiously looking forward to see their favorite of the sex spinning along the roads.

Two Classes in Scotland.

In consequence of the decision of the Scottish Amateur Athletic Association with regard to the effect of the Scottish Cyclists' Union two class scheme on flat racing, a circular has been issued by several sports-holding clubs, including Celtic Rangers and Clydesdale Harriers, calling a meeting to consider the advisability of forming an athletic association in opposition to the present governing body.—American Wheelman.

Wheel Meets in Prospect.

Cycling tournaments in this district that have been announced for the near future are as follows: June 11, Hot Springs, Ark.; June 12, Taylor, Tex.; June 14, Springfield, Mo.; June 20, Kansas City, Mo.; July 3 and 4, Shelbina, Mo.

Syracuse Wins the First Time Prize.

We did it last year with "Van Wagoner" and we did it this year with "Hamilton;" we'll try and do it next year, too. It's awful easy to win if you ride a Syracuse. J. C. Weidner, who finished first in the race, showed his good sense. He had his choice of three wheels for first prize, and, of course, took a crimson rim. Keep your eye on Weidner and his crimson rim in the future.

A. F. Shapleigh Hardware Co. are exclusive agents for the "Syracuse."

THE STATE MEET.

Next Fixture in Cycling Will be Held at Shelbina.

Now that the Forest Park Road Race has gone into history there is a general inclination on the part of local cyclists to pitch in and boom the tenth annual State meet at Shelbina on July 3 and 4. The L. A. W. members will doubtless be glad to know that all arrangements have been completed to make the success of the meet an assured fact. The annual gatherings of the Missouri Division have become an important factor in cycling circles and are always accompanied by the greatest gayety. The combined events will attract hundreds of racing men and visiting wheelmen from all parts of the State. The Racing Committee has received assurances of the attendance of all the crack riders and the entry list will be the largest on record. The Shelbina Cycling Club, under whose auspices the meet is to be held, has lived up to the promise to furnish a big prize list. In each of the Class A races $50 prizes are up as firsts, and seconds and thirds are in proportion. In the four Class B events the first prizes are three $100 high grade bicycles and an $80 diamond stud. The second prizes are mostly diamonds or costly silverware.

Special attention will be given to make the annual parade the feature of the meet, and to that end the Parade Committee will award a handsome silver water service to the best-appearing club. The parade is expected to move promptly at 9 a. m., July 4, and the league club will have the right of line in the order of their seniority. There will be great rivalry between the clubs for the prize and if any of the local clubs wish to win it they will have to hustle.

Chairman Thompson writes that they hope to have the official programme out this week sure. It will be profusely illustrated with photo-engravings of Shelbina's race tracks and views of the city. The entertainments will be everything that can be desired and the merchants are all taking a lively interest in the success of the meet. The programme on the evening of July 3 will consist of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, address of welcome and response and music by the mandolin club. A good brass band has been engaged for the parade and races, and they will also give a concert at the Fair Grounds tracks, commencing at 1 o'clock on July 4.

A rate of one fare for the round trip has been secured and special chair cars will be provided by the Burlington route.

At the business meeting of the division, which will be held on the morning of July 4, the annual reports of the officers will be read and nominations will then be made for the officers to serve next year. It is, therefore, very important that every member of the division be present. Chairman Thompson is working hard to make the meet eclipse all previous ones and he deserves great credit for his efforts in that direction.

In addition to the meet the usual Fourth of July festivities will be observed, the business houses and private dwellings will be decorated and Shelbina will look her prettiest in extending a cordial welcome to the cycling visitors.

SUNDAY RACING.

An Outlaw Meeting Will Be Given at Belleville June 23.

In spite of the very stringent L. A. W. rule against Sunday racing a local club has again arranged to give a meeting of this sort at Belleville on June 23. Last year this experiment was tried at St. Charles and only the pleading of the local officers saved the participants from the black list. L. A. W. members are warned not to compete at this meeting, as the severest penalty will doubtless be imposed, which will bar them from all the tracks in America.

Sterling Cycling Club.

The Sterling Cycling Club, after a short rest, is again at the front with a trip to Waterloo, Ill., on hand for to-day. Capt. John J. Rung will be in charge.

CYCLING CHAT.

Willi Brown has been called East by the death of a relative.

L. A. W. renewal season closes June 30.

Ten members attended the Century's run to the county line last Sunday. Wills, Cochran, Johnson and Hollander each rolled off a century.

If it comes to road riding C. C. Hildebrand can make the best of them hustle, as is evidenced by his ride to the county line and back before dinner last Sunday.

E. E. Anderson is training on the Galesburg track, and has secured the services of a fast trotter to act as pacemaker.

All the Chicago visitors will stay in town Monday and on Tuesday will start for Chicago on their wheels, with the intention of breaking C. M. Fairchild's record of 36 hours.

The quarterly meeting of the Missouri Division Board of Officers was held at Chief Consul Holin's residence last night, and the reports showed the affairs of the division to be in good shape. A committee was appointed to confer with the City Council relative to defeating the Heckel ordinance.

The intended removal of the Cycling Club will be a big help to the club, which has long wished for more room to accommodate the constantly increasing membership. At the last meeting three new members were admitted, Ed Fitzwilliams, M. R. Bowman and H. R. Mardorf.

Much speculation is indulged in as to the outcome of the Pastimes' troubles, and it is to be hoped that the club will again open its doors. The Associated Cycling Clubs are willing to let bygones be bygones, and none of them have as yet made any advances to the P. A. C. members to desert the trembling organization.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen can obtain printed information and membership blanks by sending name and address to the cycling editor of the Post-Dispatch. Entry blanks for the State Division meet can also be had on application.

Syracuse Wins the First Time Prize.

We did it last year with "Van Wagoner" and we did it this year with "Hamilton;" we'll try and do it next year, too. It's awful easy to win if you ride a Syracuse. J. C. Weidner, who finished first in the race, showed his good sense. He had his choice of three wheels for first prize, and, of course, took a crimson rim. Keep your eye on Weidner and his crimson rim in the future.

Cricket.

Fine weather favored the cricket match at Forest Park yesterday afternoon, and a good crowd were entertained with some very interesting play. Mr. Grimbly's side came off easy victors, the excellent batting of A. E. Winsor and F. W. Ratcliff doing the trick, coupled with the bowling of C. W. Irish. For the losers Oscar Tolley distinguished himself both with bat and ball. Full score and analysis:

MUST HAVE USED A FLY.

The Fish Pierce Caught Flew Away With the Line.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

DOLGEVILLE, N. Y., June 8.—Frank Pierce, a tinsmith living here, while fishing this week was surprised to see a fish take the fly and sail up into the air with it. He was so dazed that he allowed the fish to sail away with fifty feet of line before he commenced hauling it down. He finally secured the fish. It is about 5 inches long and has the body and fins of a trout. The skin is like a trout, but is not spotted, and the belly is white. The head is shaped like a bullhead, but has no horny protuberances. The eyes are set close together in the top of the head, not more than a sixteenth of an inch apart. Just back of the gills are a pair of widespread wings an inch and three-quarters long. The web of the wings is like that of an ordinary fin, but much higher and more delicate. The creature will be preserved in alcohol.

M'LAUGHLIN'S FATE.

Men He Sent to Prison Will Soon Be His Comrades.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Unless ex-Police Inspector William McLaughlin secures a new trial he must go to Sing Sing and stand the jibes of the hundreds of convicts sent there through his instrumentality. A jury of his peers found him guilty at midnight Friday of extortion.

The Inspector reeled like a stricken man when he heard the verdict, and it is thought the burden of his shame will crush him to his grave.

He is now incarcerated in the Tombs, where he will remain until further developments. His counsel has served notice that on June 1s he will move for a new trial.

The maximum penalty for extortion is three years.

Lessons in Soldier Life.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., June 8.—Lieut. Chandler of the Sixteenth United States Infantry, commanding the military department of Arkansas University, returned with his command of 260 cadets to-day, the cadets marching from camp six miles north through a heavy rain, which wet to the skin. They had been in camp one week taking lessons in soldier life. The young cadets were put through regular army discipline.

A STREAM OF LEAD.

Like Water Out of a Garden Hose From Inventor Maxim's Gun.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Hiram S. Maxim has invented a machine gun that can be carried around by a soldier, set up as is a photograph camera and fired 600 times a minute. The muzzle can be moved like a garden hose and made to direct a stream of lead on any point. It is claimed that the stand makes it more accurate than any gun held to the shoulder.

The little Government steamer Ordnance to-day took a cargo of experts and newspaper men to the proving grounds at Sandy Hook, where an official test of the new gun was made. It has the same principle as the Maxim rapid fire guns used for naval and artillery purposes, but it is a smaller edition making it practicable for infantry use. Its caliber is .308. It has a range of 3,200 yards and sends a bullet at a velocity of 1,830 feet a second. A bullet from it will go through forty inches of oak. It looked something like a brass telescope with a pistol, but instead of a peep-hole, the whole set on a tripod.

James Huber, expert for the Maxim-Nordenfeldt Gun Company, handled the gun. It is fed with cartridges from a sort of cartridge belt made of canvas, holding 100 shells. The gun weighs 25 pounds. With the entire equipment, leather knapsack, duplicate mechanism, etc., it weighs forty-five pounds. The knapsack looks like a dress suit case. First Mr. Huber fired fifty shots. This occupied five and four-fifths seconds. The bullets flew through the air 150 feet apart, and there was a continuous stream of empty shells from an aperture under the barrel. Expert Huber hung it over his shoulder in marching order. At a word from Capt. Heath he was supposed to sight an enemy ahead, and immediately began to take out the gun. He put it together, unpacked his cartridges and fired his first shot 58 seconds after the alarm was given. For a third test the interior mechanism was supposed to get out of order and Mr. Huber had to replace it with a duplicate set. Between the last shot with old mechanism and the first with the new the time was 26 2-5 seconds. Each soldier is expected to carry an extra gun barrel, and the fourth test was changing gun barrels in action. The time between the last shot with the old barrel and the first with the new was 1 min., 18 2-5 seconds. Then there were experiments with the extraction of defective cartridges and with firing with blank cartridges.

BECKWITH RELEASED.

State Department Notified That Mexico Has Turned Him Loose.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—The Department of State is in receipt of a dispatch dated May 22, from Frank W. Roberts, United States Consul at Nogales, Mex., saying that Fred Beckwith, an American citizen who was imprisoned at Arispe, Mexico, last January, and was being held without trial, had been released.

IN DEFIANCE OF PUBLIC OPINION.

National Committeemen Object to a Silver Convention.

THEIR ANSWERS VERBATIM.

A Comparative Few Recognize the Real Significance of the Demand From Illinois.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—These are the telegraphic answers of Democratic National Committeemen in response to the inquiry sent them:

"Illinois Democratic Silver Convention demands national convention to consider money question. Please telegraph what you think of it."

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 6.—I do not expect or intend to call a meeting of the Democratic National Committee until next winter when it will meet for the purpose of fixing the time and place for holding the Democratic National Convention of 1896, unless I shall be requested to do so by the requisite number of members of the committee. I do not believe there is any necessity for a convention at this time; on the contrary I am of the opinion that to call one now would be harmful to the business interests of the country and prejudicial to the welfare of the Democratic party.

WILLIAM F. HARRITY,
Chairman National Democratic Committee.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 6.—National Committeeman Rose says his views were expressed in the resolutions enunciated by the recent Memphis convention and that he stands squarely on that gold standard platform. The free silver people, he declares would bankrupt the Government in half an hour if they got a bill through Congress permitting them to try their wild schemes.

DENVER, Colo., June 6.—The demand of the Illinois Democracy is a proper one. Let us define our position, appeal to the country and win or lose like men. If we are Democrats we are for the gold and silver coinage of the constitution. If, as a party, we are to be made followers of Sherman by President Cleveland, the sooner we officially apprise the people of the fact the better for us all. Bond issues and Wall street syndicates may be congenial to Eastern Democracy. They find no room in Western soil. The Illinois convention has done a great and noble work, let a national convention continue it.

C. S. THOMAS,
National Committeeman.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 6.—The action of the Democratic convention of Illinois on the silver question should be gratifying to every Democrat who wants to see the principles of the party vindicated. It should blaze the way for similar action in other States and possibly to the call of a national convention. I favor the free coinage of silver independently in this country at the ratio of 16 to 1. If we wait for the consent of England to change our system we will never have anything but the gold standard, and the great masses of our people will be hewers of wood and drawers of water. The rich are growing richer and the poor poorer and a moneyed aristocracy will be established to keep pace with the titular aristocracy of England. We are already drifting into dangerous lines by the concentration of wealth and the exactions of the money power. Genuine bimetallism is the safest remedy and even the opponents of free coinage admit that if an international agreement could be reached mankind would be vastly benefited and the world would experience an era of unprecedented prosperity. Since this is rendered impossible, the British administration authoritatively announcing that it will not even consider the abandonment of the gold standard, it is manifestly the duty of our country to paddle our own canoe, as we did when we won our independence from England. The Tories were then preaching the same doctrine as the Tories to-day and endeavoring to demonstrate the fact that this country could not act independently of England. We did it then, and can do it now. The effect is at least worth striving for, and I will co-operate with any movement that looks to the redemption of the Democratic pledge, guaranteeing the coinage of both gold and silver without discrimination, and if a national Democratic convention is deemed necessary to emphasize this convention, I should as a member of the National Committee vote accordingly.

CLARKE HOWELL,
National Committeeman.

BATH, Me., June 6.—I fully indorse the action of the Illinois Democratic Convention on the silver question, but believing that the national Democratic convention next year will undoubtedly take some action, I do not think an extra convention now is necessary.

ARTHUR SEWALL,
National Committeeman.

HELENA, Mont., June 6.—I am heartily in favor of the Democratic National Committee calling a National Convention to consider the money question.

A. J. DAVIDSON,
National Commiitteeman.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 6.—I am opposed to calling a National Convention to consider the money question, as suggested by the convention. I am not in favor of Mexicanizing this country. Men who are ought to join their political fortunes with Peffer and Weaver.

L. CASTOR,
National Committeeman.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., June 6.—If this is a government of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, and if the Democracy is to stand or fall with that principle, as it ought, then the action of the Illinois Democracy was right.

H. B. FERGUSON,
National Committeeman.

GRAFTON, N. D., June 6.—William C. Leistikow, the national committeeman, is in Europe, but is in favor of free coinage at 16 to 1.

J. DUNN,
Private Secretary.

SALT LAKE, Utah, June 6.—I am in favor of remonetizing silver at 16 to 1 if it can be done by international agreement.

A. MERRITT,
National Committeeman.

TACOMA, Wash., June 6.—A national convention at this time to consider the money question, is, in my opinion, unnecessary.

HUGH C. WALLACE,
National Committeeman.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 6.—I am opposed to free coinage of silver at 16 to 1. The national Democratic convention when assembled in 1896 should formulate the platform. The Democracy is much divided on the financial question, and the acts of unauthorized bodies will not tend to conciliate or cement the party.

JOHN G. PRATHER,
National Committeeman.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 6.—Why should the party hold a national convention on the silver question? It should certainly adhere to the platform of its last national convention until another is held. If the party is to sink out of sight it might go on with these conventions, which represent fiat money. If, however, it wishes to keep pace with the world on exchange and do business on a common-sense basis, it must express itself in national assembly at the proper time. That is when it places a presidential candidate in the field and states its principles in a party platform. I believe this platform will speak in no uncertain sound for gold and silver so long as they can be kept at a parity.

E. D. M'KEE,
National Committeeman.

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 6.—A tree should be known by its fruits, and an assemblage of that character would be considered by a South Dakota Democrat as made up of agitators with Populistic tendencies. Yet it has its significance. The next Democratic National Convention would more than likely have been held in Chicago, but it is now doubtful. The action of the convention makes it possible and extremely probable for the Democracy to elect the next President, and his name will be Cleveland. It blasts the hopes, desires and expectations of all Illinois candidates for the presidency in 1896.

JAMES M. WOODS,
National Committeeman.

DAVENPORT, Io., June 6.—The declaration of the Illinois silverites will be the talk of the day, but in my opinion the policy of the Democratic party will not be in that direction. The platform of 1892 stands until another convention is held, and any departure from that in the way of cheap money would be a mistake. I see no reason why the National Committee should call a convention this year to consider the money question.

J. J. RICHARDSON,
National Committeeman.

MONTICELLO, Fla., June 7.—I have not favored a National Convention till next year, but will give the question careful consideration when I see the reasons urged in its favor. I favor the restoration to the people of the constitutional money taken from them by the demonetization of silver in 1873 by either method suggested in the last Democratic National platform. I shall continue to support free coinage as well as gold as money of redemption on whatever ratio is regarded as just and wise by a majority of Congress.

SAMUEL PASCO,
National Committeeman.

MADISON, Ind., June 7.—I am opposed to calling a National Convention to consider the money question. I stand squarely with Mr. Cleveland on the silver question.

SIMON P. SHEERIN,
National Committeeman.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7.—The proposal for the holding of a Democratic National Convention to consider the money question is not worth serious consideration. The holding of such a convention would be unprecedented and wholly uncalled for. The platform of the Democratic party must remain the one adopted at Chicago in 1892 until the next National Convention is held in 1896. No occasion exists for anticipating the declarations to be made by that convention whether as to silver or any other subject.

JOSIAH QUINCY,
National Committeeman for Massachusetts.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 7.—So far as I know the National Committee is not likely to pay any attention to the demand. I think it a brazen piece of impudence. It seems to me unwise, to say the least, for the Illinois Democracy to atempt to forestall the free action of the next National Convention.

MICHAEL DORAN,
National Committeeman.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 7.—I am opposed to a National Convention to consider the financial question. I think the proper time to consider it will be when the National Convention is called in 1896. I am opposed to the ratio of 16 to 1, but am in favor of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, both to be of equal value, intrinsic and exchangeable, to be adjusted through and by international agreement.

O. T. HOLT,
National Committeeman.

CUMBERLAND, Md., June 7.—I object to calling a National Convention to consider the money question. I oppose the free and unlimited coinage of silver and believe in the gold standard. I favor both metals, silver only as subsidiary until an international agreement can satisfactorily adjust the ratio between gold and silver.

JOHN SHERIDAN,
National Commiteeman for West Virginia.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 7.—From the evidence before me I do not believe the Illinois silver convention fairly represents the sentiment of the Democratic party in that State. Even if it were so, however, the situation is changing daily in America and Europe, and the effort to pledge the party organization eighteen months before the election would be to put us on the defensive a year sooner than our adversaries. I consider it eminently unwise.

BASIL B. GORDON,
National Committeeman for Virginia.

FOR TUESDAY NEXT.

The Wickes-Nelson Wedding Is Now Set.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8.—The wedding of Miss Nannie Nelson and Mr. T. H. Wickes, the son of Vice-President Wickes of the Pullman company, which is now announced to take place at the Nelson home, 909 Locust street, June 11, has caused a renewal of the excited gossip caused by the actions of the young people in St. Louis in April. Those who know the family have declared that under no circumstances would it take place. Those who know the young man and who know how often he has been at the Nelson home have said that it was merely a matter of time.

MISS NANNIE NELSON.

Mrs. Nelson, it is said, has given her consent, but Mr. Nelson has not. He leaves now for Old Mexico to be gone some time, thus showing by his absence his refusal to countenance the marriage.

The St. Louis escapade has caused considerable feeling here among the Nelsons, and the Kansas City lady who interfered in St. Louis, but the young lady has all the time been determined that she shall have her way.

Miss Minnie Nelson is a beautiful blonde, about 21 years old. She has been reared under those advantageous conditions which always accompany wealth and a favorite child. She has been indulged in almost everything, even in this marriage. She attended Mrs. Cairns' school for a time in St. Louis. The remainder of her schooling has been gained in the public schools of this city.

She has always been very popular socially. Her mother entertained lavishly for her, and she was a participant in nearly all of the prominent social charity affairs, such as dances, kirmesses, etc., and in October, 1893, was honored by being selected as queen of the Priests of Pallas ball. That night she swept across the canvased floor of the "den" escorted by the High Priest, two pages and four flower girls. She led the grand march.

She has known Mr. Wicks for several years, having met him while visiting Florence Wickes at the Wickes Chicago home. Young Wickes has also been a frequent visitor in Kansas City. Since he followed his sweetheart here from St. Louis in April he has been unremitting in his attentions and in pressing his suit.

The marriage will be private. Who the officiating minister will be and where the couple will spend their honeymoon is not known.

IN FAVOR OF FREE COINAGE.

Sir Charles Gibson an Unalterable Advocate of the 16 to 1 Ratio.

FOR A NATIONAL CONFERENCE

He Sees No Reason Why Silver Men Should Not Meet to Discuss Issues Whenever They Choose.

Sir Charles Gibson, the wel-known attorney and politician, was interviewed on the currency question by a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday afternoon. Mr. Gibson favors the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, and State, National and international conferences. The interview was as follows:

"What will be the effect of the declaration of the Springfield convention?"

"I think it will crystallize the opposition to the gold standard. Underlying that question is another and deeper one. The West has become more Western, and Illinois very properly assumes the lead. While the currency question may be considered national in one sense, the East is in favor of gold only, the South is against it, and the great question is what will the West do? In politics, as in everything else, the man of conviction acts and is likely to succeed. There seems to be a vigor and determination and set purpose in those men that will not be thwarted. I suppose, of course, that the regular national Democratic Committee will call the national convention next summer in due form, and that the main object of the Illinoisans is to enlighten and combine all those who are opposed to a gold standard so they will present a solid front in the convention. If they hold a majority the gold Democrats will have to submit or bolt the party. If the gold men obtain a majority the silverites will submit because their contest would be hopeless with a majority of their own party against them."

"Are you in favor of a national silver conference?"

"I see no reason why all silver men, or all Democrats for that matter, should not meet for the purpose of discussing and conferring wherever and whenever, and as often as they choose. And, again, the gold men have already held, practically speaking, a national convention at Memphis for the avowed purpose of educating the people up to the gold standard. This convention was attended by the Secretary of the Treasury, and he avowed before the country, the position held by Mr. Cleveland and their reasons in support of it. Why should not the other side be allowed to meet and discuss the matter as much as they please and present their side to the people? I am in favor of an international conference as well."

"What do you think of the sentiment of the people of Missouri?"

"They are overwhelmingly in favor of free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1."

"What were your views on the repeal of the Sherman act?"

"While that was under consideration in the summer of 1893 I wrote a friend in the Senate that I was opposed to its unconditional repeal because I did not believe it would settle the curency question. I was as anxious as anyone to have that question finally disposed of, but it seemed to me the repeal would open and agitate instead of soothe and settle the minds of the people. That prophecy has now become history. I believed it was to the interest of the gold men themselves, and certainly to all bondholders to seek some just arrangement rather than to attempt to crush out silver. I believed that silver was too bulky for large transactions and suggested therefore as a compromise that gold should be the only legal tender for debts of $1,000 and over, and gold and silver for debts under that amount, with free coinage of silver of course. This would make all bonds payable in gold. It would satisfy Europe and make those bonds more securely gold than any electoral victory at the polls. I did not believe there was any natural parity between gold and silver or any other two metals. This is the only measure in the nature of a compromise that I have ever heard of. If there be no compromise a controversy between the two metals is irrepressible. Whatever may be the effect on the business of the country, it is bound to go on till silver is remonetized. 'Bimetallism' and 'sound money' are glitering generalities. The people now mean business. Whether they win or lose they will send their representatives to Washington with clear and emphatic instructions one way or another on this question. No doubt the Republican National Convention next summer will proclaim bimetallism with the loudest clangor, but that will no longer deceive anybody. The Democratic party will insist on 16 to 1. The financial question has passed beyond the circle of the rich. It has become a great national political question, and for the gold men themselves it is no longer what would be the best currency, but what is the best settlement can be made with the political element of the country. From a political standpoint I think it would be the true policy of the Democratic party to qualify unlimited free coinage at 16 to 1 by making gold only a legal tender for debts over $1,000 and upwards. That would satisfy all the bondholders and eliminate them and their tremendous influence from the approaching conflict. At the same time free coinage and legal tender for all debts under $1,000 would fully employ all the silver we have or will acquire. Such a measure would tend strongly to divide the enemy and strengthen the Democracy."

"Do you favor an international silver conference?"

"Well, we talk of ours as the greatest government and the richest and greatest people on earth, but the gold men wish to persuade us that we are so heavily in debt abroad that we dare not express our views for fear of arousing our creditors, and that if all obligations were presented for payment we would be bankrupt. If all our obligations were sent back here there would be two sides to the suffering. Europe would get about 33 cents on the dollar for its bonds, which is the price at which many of them were bought during the war, and this country would get out of debt and become once more independent. Europe would suffer more than we."

"Would a national silver conference be premature at this time in your opinion?"

"The only matter that strikes me is that the issues of the campaign can hardly be closed until it is seen what the Republicans do next winter. At the same time it is only a year until the nominating convention meets and that is not too long a time for widespread and national elements to discuss a question that presents so many phases, and which is to a great extent new to the people. It has never before been the main issue in a national campaign and I think its time for the Democrats to meet and confer among themselves as to what is the best course for the party to take. If it is to divide both political parties, as it probably will, there is no reason why the opponents of a single gold standard should not begin to form ranks."

"What do you think of Secretary Carlisle's flop?"

"I like Carlisle and I am sorry for him. He's resting his financial pyramid on its apex."

"Mr. Gibson, you spent the last two winters in Washington, I believe. What conclusion did you come to there on the currency question?"

"The administration are all gold men. Mr. Cleveland has drawn the line on gold and requires all his appointees to march up to it. A very large majority of Democrats are out with the President. Most of them have nothing to do with him and do not go about the White House. The Republicans, instead of being grateful to Mr. Cleveland for what he has done for the currency policy they advocate, were almost unanimously endeavoring by all kinds of maneuvering and party trickery to injure the administration. This left the administration with as small a following as any President the United States has ever had. The Republicans were willing to use Cleveland and his power for their own benefit, but that is all. He was between two fires."

"What conclusion did you reach with regard to the political situation resulting from the recent State elections?"

"Immediately after the elections in November last the Republicans believed—they triumphantly proclaimed—that their return to power in '96 was assured, and nearly all the Democrats felt the same way. For myself, I had seen too many flopovers in national elections to take that view of it. Mr. Pulitzer published an editorial in the World stating that '95 was by no means '96. During the winter a great change came over nearly all the politicians in Washington. Shortly after January 1, and commencing with Carey of Wyoming, first one gold Senator and then another was laid on the shelf and silver men put in their places until the Democrats began to feel that the Republican victory was melting away, and that if the currency question was to be the sole issue in '96 the elections in November last were a decidedly Republican defeat."

"Could we change at once to a free silver basis without injury to the business of the country?"

"I am not one of those who believe the country will go to the bow-wows whether the change is made or not. It will take time to coin the silver and the matter will naturally adjust itself."

Mr. Gibson believes Morton is the logical nominee of the Republican party in 1896. He says the fact that he carried New York State by 150,000 majority will give him tremendous prestige, and besides he is immensely wealthy and could and would spend a million dollars to be elected President. Harrison will make a strong fight for the nomination.

"What do you think the Democrats will do in '96?"

"The old Benton and Jackson maxim was this: Union, harmony, self-denial. Everything for the cause and nothing for men. Gen. Schofield is by odds the strongest Democrat before the people. But the Democrats will arrange their family affairs first, agree upon the principles on which they will go before the people and then select the man who is most likely to lead them on to victory. They will select a man who will not consider himself greater than the party and who is heart and soul with the party."

To Raise Revenue.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—It is believed to be the purpose of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle in their annual message and report respectively to outline a revenue bill which will be intended to meet the deficiencies without touching the tariff. It is thought that Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Carlisle will propose to the next Congress that it impose $1 additional tax on beer, place a duty on tea, also an internal revenue tax upon cosmetics and proprietary medicines, checks and other business paper.

POLITICAL FAIRY TALE.

How Disgruntled Councilmen Were Going to Get Even With the Mayor.

A rumor was circulated yesterday that disgruntled Councilmen were going to play even with the Mayor by abolishing the offices filled on April 16, and thus get rid of the incumbents, and creating other offices with the same duties under different names. It was said that Councilman Clark admitted the scheme had been discussed, and something might come of it.

A Post-Dispatch reporter was unable to find any of the members who discussed the matter. On the contrary the members who were alleged to have a grievance and would reasonably be supposed to be in on the play, had never heard anything about it, and laughed at the scheme as ridiculous. As a matter of fact it could not be accomplished. The charter gives the Municipal Assembly no direct power to abolish any office, but such a scheme might be worked under two sections. Section 32 gives the Assembly the power of a three-fourths vote to transfer and distribute in part or in whole the duties of any office, and provides that in the event of the entire powers and duties being so transferred the compensation of the holder shall cease and he shall no longer be the officer thereof. Section 45 provides that the Assembly shall have the power by a two-thirds vote to create new offices which may be deemed necessary.

To transfer the duties of any officer would require ten votes of the thirteen in the Council, and twenty-one of the twenty-eight in the House, and there not any such number of malcontents. It would be necessary to create the new offices first, otherwise there would be a hiatus during which important offices would not be filled, and this could not well be done under the charter because such new offices could not be "deemed necessary" under the charter as long as the present ones existed.

Mr. Hagan, who makes no secret of the fact that he is dissatisfied, explained the situation when he said: "There is nothing in it. The time to act was when the appointments were up for confirmation. If the opposition was not strong enough to reject them how could they carry out such a scheme as that? There would be nothing to accomplish by it. For my part I am done with the whole business. After the appointments were confirmed I quit kicking. It is too late now."

Mr. Norton said he had never heard of such a scheme and did not believe any such plan had been discussed, as it was evident it could not be carried out. Mr. Gast who has been more outspoken than any one in the Council, said he and the Mayor were at peace. No one could be found who had heard of the scheme.

Messrs. Nagel, Ferris, Kotany, Ives and Keyes have supported the Mayor throughout, and since the combine was broken by Mr. Heckel he has done so likewise. The impossibility of getting ten votes to carry such a revolutionary measure through the Council is therefore apparent, to say nothing of the twenty-one votes necessary in the House of Delegates.

MISSOURI DEMOCRATS DEMAND A CONVENTION.

The State Press and the People Are Making Themselves Heard Upon the Question.

Action of the State Committee Comes In for Warm Criticism on All Sides.

Declarations Which Are Unequivocal and Cannot Be Put Aside.

The voice of the people is rising in protest against the decision of the Missouri Democratic Central Committee to not call a convention to pronounce upon the silver question. Not only are the people voicing their sentiments individually, but the press, the rural press, which is closer to the people than any committee can hope to be, is demanding action and denouncing the decision already reached.

VOICE OF THE STATE PRESS.

Condemns the State Committee for Not Calling a Convention.

From the Farmington Times.

The action of the State Democratic Committee, which met in St. Louis last Saturday, in ignoring the demand made by caucus action, the chairmen of county committees and the press, and refusing to call a convention, makes it necessary for the people to act if they would be heard and have their views indelibly engrafted in the policy of the party. It may not only be necessary that the county committees should pronounce in favor of a convention and free silver, but that they call mass meetings of the party in their respective counties, that there may be no doubt left upon which the State Committee can hang a refusal to act. That committee is dominated by the gold influence and its policy to hold back as much as possible any organized expression of the masses of the party in favor of free silver, while the gold monometallists are holding in prominent commercial centers alleged "honest money" conventions, addressed by letter and speech by the President and members of the Cabinet, and sending out tracts and other literature to quiet the apprehensions of the people and confuse them with sophistries and complicated tables of statistics. Let the people be as vigilant and alert as are the gold conspirators, whose soft purring and cat-like tread has enabled them to rob the debtor classes of their oldest and best standard of money value, and determine by united effort to restore silver to its rightful place as a money of final redemption.

From the Clarksville Sentinel.

That 75 per cent of the Democratic newspapers and 90 per cent of the Democratic voters of Missouri demand a convention made no difference to a committee composed of millionaires, the representatives of great corporate wealth and the servants of railroads and national banks instructed to do the will of their employers. * * * For a long time the people have had no confidence in and no respect for this committee, and its recent conduct will only intensify public contempt for it as a whole. Let the people ignore this committee, let the convention be called by the people acting through their county committees, and let it when assembled adopt a platform upon which all silver men can stand, and so start the work of reorganization in Missouri that the Democracy may be in condition to successfully fight the battle of 1896. The fact that the committee, or a majority of it, has been false to the masses and traitors to Democratic principles will amount to but little if the people are only true to themselves.

From the Boonville Democrat.

Conformably to long-established usage, the Democrats of Missouri temporarily committed to their servants the keys of their convention hall. Desiring to meet in that hall, their servants have locked them out; and the question now is whether the rightful owners will stay out at the bidding of their Bosses or find some means of entering.

From the Lamar Democrat.

The Democrats of Cedar County will hold a free coinage convention at Stockton Saturday, June 15. They demand an early State convention for the purpose of declaring the position of the party on the question.

From the Ashland Bugle.

The action of the committee is sharply criticised here.

From the Butler Times.

The State Democratic Committee met at St. Louis Saturday, and by a vote of 10 to 5 refused to call a silver convention for the State. In the meantime the counties are moving right along one after another declaring for free silver and State convention.

From the Richmond Democrat.

J. B. Thomas, Democratic State Central Committeeman from this district, should lose no time in resigning the position he holds, as he no longer represents the wishes of the mass of the party in the district. He knows the great majority of the party favor a State convention to give an expression on the silver question, and he knows it was his duty to reflect the wish of the majority.

From the Lebanon Rustic.

The Democrats of Missouri will hold a State convention. Mr. Maffitt's committee to the contrary notwithstanding.

From the Tipton Times.

The Democratic State Committee by a vote of 10 to 5 refused to call a convention to take action on the silver question, and in consequence the two are being censured without measure for resisting the will of the people. They will at least discover in what esteem they are held by their party associates.

From the Madison County Democrat.

What the Democratic party in Missouri needs just now, more than anything else, is a Chairman of the State Democratic Central Committee who is not wrapped up in and does not pay more attention to horse racing than the needs of Democracy.

From the Scott County Newsboy.

Wonder if any of our Democratic State Committee would know a good thing if they should meet it in the road? The member of that body who dons his war paint and declares that the people of the great State shall have an opportunity to express themselves on the financial question, in convention assembled, will be appreciated. Down with the Francis-Maffitt-Cobb-Republic combine. Let the people have a say.

From the Howard County Advertiser.

The silver question cannot be side-tracked by any ten men in Missouri, and when the people do rise up to smite their wicked servants for refusing to heed the demands for a convention, there will be more little one-horse corporation lawyers and 2x4 bankers tumbling off the fence than was ever seen before. One thing is certain. No matter how much Francis, Maffitt & Co. hate silver they carry an awful sight of brass. The time has come for the people to take the matter into their own hands and thrust Wall street agents aside.

From the Boonville Advertiser.

A majority of the State Central Committee is controlled by influences that cannot be indorsed at the polls, and if the people take this matter into their own hands—which they are very likely to do—there are some little pig-headed politicians who will get the worst political flaying they ever experienced in all their lives.

From the Springfield Democrat.

The St. Louis Republic has struck a new lead in its defense of the Democratic State Committee, which, like all its leads, leads nowhere and to nothing. The defense it is making now is that the politicians—the disappointed, disgruntled politicians—have got up a crusade for a convention in order to put the committee in a hole. They want to punish the committee, it says, and kill their rivals by destroying the party. How has the committee made itself offensive to the politicians? If it has confined itself to the performance of its legitimate duties it has nothing to do with the politicians. If it has gone outside its duties, as the Republic implies, it deserves to be punished.

From the Johnson County Star.

The members of the Democratic Central Committee are the servants of the party, and it matters not what may be their individual views upon this subject, it is their duty to represent the will of the majority.

From the Pleasant Hill Gazette.

The Democratic County Committee of Jackson has resolved in favor of free silver and a State Convention. We might suppose that Tarsney could hear that.

From the Monroe County Appeal.

By a vote of 10 to 5 the State Central Committee decided not to call a State Convention for the purpose of giving Missouri Democracy a chance to express themselves on the silver question. But, just the same, the convention will be held, and the Francis committee will be given a back seat. We believe in giving the people a chance now. The politicians have had the running of things long enough.

From the Franklin County Observer.

The action of the Democratic State Central Committee in refusing to call a State Convention to discuss the financial questions meets with general disapproval among the press and politicians of the State.

From the Marshall Democrat.

The St. Louis Republic is grieved because everybody is denouncing the Democratic State Central Committee. If the grain-pit members of that thoroughly discredited body would have the good sense to resign no tears would be shed by any but Republicans.

From the Richmond Democrat.

The Democrats want a State Convention and they ought to have one. The party wants its position on the silver question clearly defined. It wants to repudiate the "straddle."

From the Miami News.

The State Democratic Committee in refusing to call a convention when instructed to do so by so large a majority of the Democratic voters of the State, assumed an unwarranted authority. It may be possible that the Democrats of Missouri will mildly submit to such arbitrary conduct on the part of their servants, but if they do we will be sadly mistaken.

CALL A CONVENTION.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A few people and several papers of monopolistic tendencies are doing all possible to prevent the calling of a convention in Missouri this summer to define the attitude of the party on the silver question. Such people and papers, as a rule, declare that they are friendly to silver, but do not see the need of and are opposed to a convention. It has been customary for some time for people who, really, in their hearts are gold monometallists, but who are afraid to say so, to hide behind the declaration that while they are very anxious indeed for the free coinage of silver, they are afraid the ratio of 16 to 1 would be unsafe. But this subterfuge is worn out, this hiding board has been shot full of holes and it is well known now by every one that those behind it are gold bugs. I am much inclined to believe that the anti-convention men are in the same boat.

The gist of the argument which these people use against the convention is the question, "Why should we have a convention?" They put this question quite often with the air of a small boy who has definitely settled a question, but the question is easily answered. I shall answer. For several reasons.

In the first place, while our present platform is good enough for all who want to understand it, there are really some who pretend to believe it is not a straight-out silver platform. There are some who significantly call attention to the fact that the words 16 to 1 do not occur in it. They go on to remind us that the platform provides that if the coinage of silver at one ratio proves to be bad it can be changed. They say that Mr. Bland was scared at Kansas City and compromised. They charge that one-third of the delegates at Kansas City favored the minority report of the Resolutions Committee, which was drafted by Francis, and that perhaps another third would do so now. A State Senator, who, it is fair to presume, ought to have known better, expressed his opinion of the platform to me the night after the convention, that it was like the negro's coon trap, "sot to ketch 'em comin' an a gwine."

I can understand the platform to be a straight silver platform. So can all other good Democrats who want to. But if there are some who will not understand it as it was meant, let us meet again and make one they can understand. Let us have another convention, and if Mr. Bland will act as Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, I will guarantee there will be nothing to scare him. I will venture to assert that the gold bugs will not have strength to have an adjournment at 2 a. m., as they did at Kansas City, even if they do count all who were sleepy at that hour. Let us meet again and use the words 16 to 1 if they want it so. Let us meet again and adopt a plank without any provision in case the present ratio should prove unsatisfactory. It will not prove unsatisfactory. The ratio of 16 to 1 is no experiment; it will not prove bad; then why make provision for any such case? Let us meet again and make a short, clear, ringing declaration that no one can even pretend to misunderstand. This should be done.

Again. Quite often a prominent Missourian goes to Washington to see President Cleveland or to New York to consummate a bond deal of some sort, and has himself interviewed, in the course of which he usually says "Oh, that silver craze is about dead. The people of my State are busy with their crops and are not losing any sleep over silver." Of all things, to be misrepresented is the most humiliating. Let us have a convention and prove to the world that about 99 out of 100 of our people are in favor of silver, and then, perhaps, this interview business will be closed out and even New York will know just how we stand.

In the second place we should have a convention because it would provoke discussion. While the people generally understand the general principles of the silver question there are many who have much to learn about it. There is no danger of discussing the financial question too much. I am in favor of any measure which will provoke discussion. A call for a convention will do this.

In the third place we should have a convention because it is our duty to support Illinois. In union there is strength, and unless Missouri unites with Illinois and her other sisters, the Eastern plutocrats will never be made to feel her power. If we call a convention, thereby following the example of Illinois, other Western States will be encouraged to follow us. Unfortunately Missouri was not first to call a convention, but let her be second.

Every Western and Southern State should declare for silver now, so that the country may know what to expect. The West and South should give the East the ultimatum, so that some of the socalled Democrats of the East would have time to look about for a new home.

Fourth. We should have a convention, because the people want it. This reason is last, but in nowise least. Some are very anxious to preserve harmony in the party. They were anxious to preserve harmony in the party a year or two ago, when the tariff discussion was right where the silver question is now. They succeeded in their laudable harmony enterprise to the extent that they kept free traders and high protective tariff men in the same party. When the party legislated what was the result? If we keep gold bugs and free silver men in the same party, when that party goes to legislate, will the result be different? It is useless to attempt to harmonize good and bad or right and wrong, because they are diametrically opposed to each other. For the same reason it is useless to attempt to harmonize gold bugs and free silver men. The majority of the Democratic party is in the South and West, and it is in favor of free silver. The majority should rule.

I do not advise a division of the party, but that the lines should be drawn differently. The majority should make a square declaration. If such declaration should be for the immediate coinage of silver at 16 to 1 (and there is hardly a shadow of a doubt but that it would) some of the gold bugs might leave. Of course, we would be sorry to see them go, but we would not be frightened by their threats to secede, because we would know that we would gain two new recruits from the Western end of the Republican party for each loss in the East. Within the last few weeks I have been in Lincoln, Pike, Ralls, St. Charles, Warren, Montgomery, Audrain and Boone Counties, and I have found that nine-tenths of the Democrats are in favor of 16 to 1, and only now and then have I found one opposed to a convention. A few do not care to have a convention, but very few, indeed, are opposed to it. Nearly all the Republicans, too, are in favor of 16 to 1, and many of them declare they will vote with that party which makes a straight declaration for silver. A prominent Republican editor said to me about a week ago: "I have been a Republican all my life, but if the Democrats declare for 16 to 1 I will vote that ticket straight. Fellow-Democrats, is not this significant?

Then go on, Chairman Farris, with your convention. The committee would not do the will of the people, then let the people act for themselves. I think we should make a platform with three planks.

1. We declare for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1.
2. We declare in favor of an amendment to the Constitution which would make an income tax law constitutional.
3. We declare for a Western man for President.

Yours very truly,
EDWARD EUGENE CAMPBELL.
Chain of Rocks, Mo., June 4.

BLIND AND IN LOVE.

Had Walter Comstock Been Old Enough He Would Have Married Susie Jones.

Walter M. Comstock and Susie Jones are both blind and in love. The blindness is a physical defect which has not prevented them from discovering that both are good to look upon. Walter, a lad of 19 years, is not at all bad looking, and Susie can lay claim to being more than fair of face and form. She has a fresh, fair skin, raven hair and a handsome figure.

For six years Miss Jones has been an inmate of the Missouri School for the blind, Nineteenth and Morgan street, and Walter Comstock has been at the same institution for two years. Both graduated last Thursday, Walter in the art of broom-making and Susie in the higher branches of learning. Walter's stepfather came down from Cooper County to lay in a stock of supplies and set him up in the broom-making business. The young man evidently thought that being set up in business was a qualification for getting married, so Thursday night during the confusion incident upon the concert he and Susie fixed up a scheme to apply at the Recorder's office for a license to get married. Miss Susie, who is 25 was all right and would have passed, but Walter stammered over the extra years he was going to add to his bona fide age, and gave himself away. The license was refused.

It is not very far from the Court-house to Nineteenth and Morgan street, and the news that two blind people had applied for a license reached the school even before they had time to return. The young man was afraid to face the music and left the young lady at the door, while he hastened off to the depot to meet his stepfather and go home with him. In fact the stepfather knew nothing of his son's predicament until he was informed by Dr. Sibley, the Superintendent of the school, who rushed down to the depot to see the father before he departed.

The young lady was closely questioned, and owned up frankly to the charge. She said that she and Walter had been in love with each other for three months, that they intended to be married here and then go their respective ways, he to Cooper County and she to Butler, in Bates County, until the broom shop was in operation, when the would-be husband had promised to claim his willing bride.

Now they have been rudely torn asunder, although neither seemed to suffer badly from the disappointment. But they could not see each other's charms, and this may account for it.

A Miner's Fatal Burns.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

COULTERVILLE, Ill., June 8.—In an accident in the Coulterville coal mine, Felix East was preparing a shot, when it went off, burning him fatally. Robert Green was slightly burned.

CROKER'S LONDON HOUSE.

Formerly the Home of the Duke of Wellington.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, June 1.—The spacious house which Richard Croker has rented for the London season must naturally rank henceforth among the historic residences of the capital. The house is pointed out to sightseers from all quarters of the globe as the erstwhile home of the great Duke of Wellington. London boasts a society which undertakes the duty of placing commemorative tablets on houses with which any notable man in politics, literature or art has been prominently associated. An irreverent Englishman suggest that when in due time Mr. Croker has been gathered to his fathers, a tablet may be placed on No. 9 Palace Gate with some such inscription as this:

"Richard Croker resided here during the summer of 1895 while he transferred the Tammany boodle to the British bookmaker."

The house and its surroundings are marked by an elegance and exclusiveness which must appeal strongly to the eclectic tastes of Mr. Croker. If he were anxious to patronize mere fashionable society and to throw himself into the giddy whirl of London frivolity he might have pitched his wigwam in Belgrave or Mayfair, but Kensington, while being select in a social sense has always possessed a special attraction for the elite of the artistic and literary world, and the vicinity of Palace Gate bears in an especial manner the hall mark of culture. Immediately opposite No. 9 stands the mansion of Sir John Millais, baronet, England's greatest living portrait painter; a few doors down, Herbert Spencer resides when in London; around the corner is Henry James' London house, while several prominent members of the British Civil Service, retired Viceroys and other congenial spirits are well in the neighborhood.

Palace Gate is a broad, quiet thoroughfare leading to Kensington Gardens, and it derives it first name from Kensington Palace, which is close by. Its houses were built by Cubitt, London's most noted architect of the Victorian era, and they are of a large, substantial pattern, faced with stone. Their rent unfurnished would be about $3,000 per year, but, as Mr. Croker has taken the house furnished it must cost him between $150 and $200 a week. Mr. Croker's house is the property of a Mr. De Stein, a wealthy member of a financial firm, who is now abroad on account of his health.

HOLD ON TO YOUR RUBBISH.

You Are Liable to Arrest if You Litter the Sidewalks.

After to-day don't throw your banana and orange peelings on the sidewalks; if you do you are liable to arrest and fine. If you are given a handbill or circular, don't throw it on the street after you have read it; it is against the law, and the law will be enforced. If you are a merchant, lawyer, agent or in any other business, instruct your porter not to sweep the dirt into the street or he or both of you may be pulled.

The city officials have united with the commercial bodies in a clean streets crusade, and the ordinances on the subject, so long a dead letter, will be rigidly enforced. To give the citizens fair warning and full information on the law, copies of the following circular will be distributed profusely to-morrow:

The attention of all citizens is called to the following provisions of city ordinance in reference to throwing dirt or rubbish upon the streets, and they are earnestly requested to co-operate with the city authorities in rigid enforcement of them upon all offenders.

Rev. Ord., Sec. 374. Makes it the duty of owners, agents or occupiers to keep sidewalks and gutters in front of their property clean, as well as all private alleys adjoining their premises, and to remove snow from sidewalks into the carriageway.

Rev. Ord., Sec. 375. Forbids the deposit of rubbish of any kind or any dirty water upon any street, alley or public or private property.

Rev. Ord., Sec. 33. Forbids throwing upon any sidewalk or cross walk any part of fruit or vegetable substance, which, when stepped upon by any person is liable to cause him or her to slip or fall.

Rev. Ord., Sec. 642. Makes it unlawful to throw any kind of wire or any kind of advertising matter upon the public highway; or to distribute any kind of advertising matter so that it shall litter the streets or sidewalks; or to paint or cause to be painted any kind of advertising matter, sign or signs on any sidewalk; or to sweep or cause to be swept from any store, office or warehouse, manufactory, hotel, or any other building occupied in whole or in part for business, any refuse or dirt from the floors of said establishments or any of them onto the streets or sidewalks of the City of St. Louis.

Rev. ord., sec. 427. Requires that every cart, wagon or vehicle used to transport manure, garbage, swill, ashes or other loose material shall be fitted with a tight box with sides and ends not less than twenty-four inches high so that no portion of the manure or loose material shall be scattered upon the streets.

Ord. 16,168. Requires that all boxes or beds of wagons used for the removal of earth shall not exceed six feet long, three feet wide and twenty-one inches deep, and shall not be filled above water measure or a uniform level across its top, under penalty of a fine of from five to fifteen dollars to be levied upon the contractor or contractors owning or employing the wagons.

Every one violating any of the above named city ordinances is guilty of a misdemeanor and is subject to arrest and fine, and a careful observance of them by all will not only save much unnecessary annoyance, but contribute greatly to the cleanliness of the streets and to the good name of our city. Respectfully,

THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON STREET CLEANING.

The circular will be read at roll-call at all the stations to-day, and patrolmen will be specially instructed to see that the ordinances are observed, and to arrest all who violate them. Chief Harrigan means business, and Mayor Walbridge is pledged to the commercial bodies to remit no fines imposed on those convicted of violating any of these street ordinances.

OPPOSES CARLISLE'S VIEWS.

Why Gen. Hardin May Not Be Kentucky's Next Governor.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 8.—It leaked out here to-night that a secret meeting of the Eastern Kentucky Democrats was held at Winchester last night to bring out a sound money candidate for Governor in place of Gen. P. Wat Hardin, who was considered invincible in the mountains of Kentucky, but whose free silver ideas do not meet with favor in that section. The meeting decided to send a committee to Louisville, one to Covington and Newport, and one to Lexington to see the leading Democrats at each place and try to arrange a coalition between the sound money Democrats of the cities and the sound money Democrats of the mountains. Judge J. D. Black of Barboursville and Hon. S. H. Stone of Middlesboro are mentioned as the probable choice of this coalition.

The committee that came here to-day consulted with several leading Democrats and the project meets with much favor. Although it is only sixteen days until the Democratic State Convention meets in Louisville, the gentlemen who are at the head of this movement believe they will be able to arrange matters so that their man will receive between 250 and 300 votes on the first ballot. They say that Hardin's advocacy of free silver has virtually killed him in Eastern Kentucky, as the Democrats will not support a man opposed to Secretary Carlisle's financial views.

LONDON THEATRICALS.

Elenora Duse Said to Be Dying of Consumption.

LONDON, June 8.—The principal event of the week, so far as the theater is concerned, has been the apearance on the London boards of the two great emotional actresses, Sarah Bernhardt and Elenora Duse, the latter appearing only four times a week. It is rumored that she is suffering from consumption, and that her permanent retirement from the stage is only a matter of a very short time.

Next week London theater-goers will have the opportunity of contrasting the widely different methods of these two great artists in the same parts. Mme. Bernhardt is to present a French version and Signora Duse an Italian adaptation of "Heimat," which in both instances has been rechristened "Madga."

There has been no novelty presented during the week at the opera. M. Maurel and M. Vignas have been added to the already strong company and the former will make his reappearance on Monday in "Falstaff."

Great interest is taken here in Adelina Patti's first appearance of the season, next week. Seats are already fetching £3.

Carmencita, in spite of the fact that a prominent theatrical paper declares that there is not a dancer on the stage to whom she could not give points, and who "kept the Hudson in a blaze for five years," has not been successful in London. She has recently been giving a series of matinees at St. James' Hall, and has varied her usual entertainments by singing Spanish songs, accompanied by a quartette of native players.

Francis Wilson is in the city, and, with the prestige of the friendship of President Cleveland he may gain favor here through the United States Ambassador, to whom the popular actor has a letter of introduction.

The honor which has been conferred upon Sir Henry Irving by his knighthood has drawn much comment from all classes of people. The general feeling is one of satisfaction. Cissie Loftus has since her return to the Palace been crowding that theater. Among her new impersonations is that of Ada Rehan in "Twelfth Night" and May Yohe and Hayden Coffin.

As already cabled Mrs. Patrick Campbell has not added to her reputation by her appearance at the Haymarket Theater in "Fedora." The critics have been busily employed in informing the management that Miss Olga Nethersole would have been much more acceptable in the role created by Sarah Bernhardt, and that Mrs. Campbell should return to the cast of "The Notorious Mrs. Smith."

Arthur Bouchier will undertake the management of the Royalty Theater early in September, and will then produce a new play by Mr. Zangwill. He is said to have secured other plays by Sardou and Ralph Lumley. The house is to be partially rebuilt and wholly refurnished and redecorated.

There is a disposition on the part of some of the London managers to return to the ancient English stage fashion of the interlude. At the Trafalgar Theater Fannie Wentworth has introduced a new sketch between the first and second acts of "Baron Glosh," and the revival of the custom has been most unfavorably received.

Since the Strauss Orchestra had the honor of appearing before her majesty at Windsor Castle the audiences at the Imperial Institute, where the orchestra is nightly appearing, have largely increased.

TIN-CUP BANQUET.

St. Louis School of Fine Arts Student Enjoy Their Annual Feast.

The one event looked forward to with greater glee than any other by the students of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, is the "Tin Cup Banquet," with which the school term closes. It came off last night with all the fun and frolic attendant upon this annual reunion.

About 100 ladies and gentlemen and ten little folks from the juvenile class sat down to a sumptuous repast served in the largest class room. The banquet hall was charmingly and artistically decorated with flowers and bunting in pink and white, the colors of the school. The most unique part of the table service were the tin cups, one of which was placed beside each plate with two straws to sip lemonade. Every year these tin cups are inscribed with the names of those who drink from them. The inscription, which is made in solemn silence, is preceded by the rollicking tin cup song.

Some of these cups are a dozen years old, and over their rusty sides are engraved such names as those of F. Bardwell, Grace Patton, M. Morrow, Heberer, Guthers, Mrs. McMonnies, Georgiana Fry, and others prominent in the art world.

During the progress of the banquet a delightful programme, full of humor, was rendered by the members of the class. Miss Irwin Hayward presented "Trilby" as conceived by herself, a most humorous parody. A crude stage had been erected at one end of the hall. It represented the studio of the three painters. The most notable feature of its interior decoration was a pen and ink sketch of Trilby's foot. It was the largest foot that could be conceived, yet perfect in outline, and was drawn by Charles Ward Rhodes, Prof. Ives' clever young assistant.

A piano solo by Mr. George Vieh and a speech by Mr. Paul Cornoyer, were followed by the gem of the evening, a vaudeville, composed of four numbers. The dramatic entertainment closed with the tin cup song and inscription ceremony, and was followed by a dance, which kept the young artists together until midnight.

LABOR MEN AFTER LARRY.

The Chief's Strike Talk at Washington Develops Strong Criticism.

Members of the local Trades and Labor Assembly are after Chief Harrigan's scalp. The root of enmity is a talk the Mayor gave at the recent gathering of Chiefs of Police at Washington, D. C. The fact that the Pinkertons were members of the gathering is an aggravating circumstance.

Chief Harrigan referring to the Pullman strike is alleged to have said:

"Take the lawless strike movement at the beginning and crush it; that is the only way to deal with strike lawlessness. Men have a right to quit work, and that is all the right they have. What cost Chicago millions did not cost St. Louis $1,000."

The labor men did not like this and used it as the basis of denunciatory resolutions at a meeting held in Walhalla Hall, Friday night. The conclusion of the resolution was a request that Chief Harrigan resign.

Major Harrigan does not contemplate resigning. When seen by a Post-Dispatch reporter Saturday he said: "A Chief of Police views all events from one standpoint, that of public order. It is his business to see that it is maintained. I recognize the right of any man to quit work and will protect him in that. I further maintain that when a man has quit work I cannot in my position allow unlawful or unpeaceable attempts on his part to keep others from obtaining the employment he has given up. I cannot recognize a disturbance of public order as a means of settling differences between employers. We did nothing unfair or arbitrary here in St. Louis. But what it took Chicago millions of dollars to bring about did not cost us $1. I will not take cognizance of criticism on a public officer for doing his duty by the law."

STILL UNCOLLECTED.

Judgments for the Wichita Board of Trade on a Land Deal.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

WICHITA, Kan., June 8.—The Board of Trade has failed to realize on the $12,362 judgment recently rendered in its favor in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, and against Lord & Thomas of Chicago, and steps are being taken to force payment. In August, 1888, Lord & Thomas agreed to sell a large block of property valued at $125,000, which had been turned over to the Wichita Board of Trade by citizens for use as bonuses to bring large manufacturing interests here, for a commission of $25,000. The Board of Trade advanced them $10,000 on their commission. The firm never disposed of the property, but kept the $10,000. After years of litigation the recent decision in favor of the Board of Trade resulted, and now that body is making a vigorous effort to collect the amount of the judgment.

What a Well-known Lady Says
Who Took
BLACK TONIC.

I have been a sufferer for years with kidney trouble and chronic inflammation of the bladder. I had severe pains in my back. My kidneys seemed at times inactive and at other times would flow freely. I had two cold spots over my kidneys which annoyed me very much. I have also for ten years been subject to malaria, of which I never was able to get anything to entirely cure me of. I was troubled with chronic pleurisy, with a constant pain in the region of the heart. I was afflicted with all the troubles peculiar to women in its most aggravated form. I ached all over and felt tired. Sometimes my limbs almost refused to hold my weight. I felt drowsy, and you might say void of all interest in life. After taking a few bottles of BLACK TONIC I find my kidneys are entirely free from pain, and that sluggish, cold feeling has left them, and I now feel better than I have felt for years, and that languid feeling is no more, and instead I feel active and work all day and am not tired. When night comes I feel fresh and have some courage. I will cheerfully recommend BLACK TONIC, for I believe it will cure any case of kidney trouble, and as a blood purifier I believe it has no equal. I will certainly recommend BLACK TONIC to all my suffering friends. Respectfully,

SALLIE REYNOLDS, 1215 Chambers st.

You will see by the enclosed I have made an effort to write you a testimonial. I have not done you justice, for words cannot describe the gratitude and the change of my feelings. Any change you wish to make or any addition you can, make them, for you cannot overestimate my sentiments. I will close, wishing you success and a prosperous year. SALLIE REYNOLDS.

P. S.—Please send me two more bottles BLACK TONIC, as I do not want to be without it in the house.

Price $2. Three bottles for $5.

Each dose is worth more than the price of three bottles. If your druggist does not keep it or for further information call at office of JUNE WEATHER IN ST. LOUIS.

Signal Service Officer Frankenfield Forecasts It.

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Before entering upon a discussion of the probable weather conditions for the month of June in St. Louis, it is necessary to remind the reader that what is said below can in no sense be considered as an actual forecast of coming weather, but simply a statement of average conditions for the past twenty-four or more years for the month of June, upon which can be based an intelligent and fairly accurate idea as to the conditions which will prevail during the present month.

First, as to the temperature: During no June in the history of the Weather Bureau has the mean temperature been below 71 or above 79 degrees. Therefore, it is safe to assume that the mean temperature for the present month will not vary more than four degrees from the normal, which is 75 degrees. The highest temperature in any June during the past fifty-nine pears was 102 degrees, on June 29 and 30, 1870, while the lowest temperature during the same period was 43 degrees on June 6, 1838, and June 5, 1839. Temperatures above 100 degrees in June are decidedly abnormal, and it is reasonable to expect that they will not occur in any given June.

Days with temperatures above 90 degrees are quite frequent, and at least five such days may be expected in any June, with at least one day above 95 degrees. Days with temperatures below 50 degrees are comparatively frequent during the first ten days of the month, but from present indications there will be none during this month.

No frosts have been recorded in the Weather Bureau records in St. Louis during the past twenty-four years.

To summarize, it may be stated that twenty-five days may be expected with mean temperatures above 68 degrees, and twelve days with mean temperature between 77 and 90 degrees.

Second, as to the precipitation: The average rainfall for the month of June, as determined from the records of fifty-six years observations is 5.13 inches, and the average number of rainy days, that is, of days with a measurable amount of rainfall, is twelve. The amount of rainfall to be expected cannot be estimated within any reasonable degree of correctness on account of the very wide differences between the different years. The greatest rainfall for any June was 17.07 inches in 1848, and the least 0.41 inch in 1864. From these figures it is very easy to perceive that no intelligent estimate can be made.

There can be noticed, however, a sort of tendency to what may be defined as an "evening up" of the amounts of rainfall in different periods of years. For instance, the normal rainfall for June for fifty-six years as given above is 5.13 inches, while the normal for the past twenty-four years is 5.03 inches, or a difference of less than 2 per cent, showing that however much the figures for different months may vary, a normal readjustment may be expected within a reasonable number of years.

The writer has been requested to express his opinion as to the prospect of an unusually warm summer this year, but he must confess his inability to offer a reasonable one. It is true that there is a tendency toward a normal readjustment of temperature as well as of precipitation, and within shorter limits of time, but not always within one year. During the past twenty-four years six cold winters were followed by summers warmer than the average, and four warm winters by summers cooler than the average. Three cool summers followed cold winters, and three warm summers followed warm winters. During the remaining eight years normal conditions obtained in either the summer or winter. One of the two coldest winters, that of 1880-81, was followed by the warmest summer, but the summer of 1894, which was also abnormally warm, was preceded by the abnormally warm winter of 1893-94. The warm summer of 1889 was also preceded by a warm winter. It will be seen therefore that no definite idea can be obtained in advance as to the weather for any given season. It is probable that the mean summer temperature will not be below 74 degrees nor above 81 degrees, and that on about twenty-five of the days the temperature will be above 90 degrees and above 95 degrees on about eight days.

The past winter was one of the two coldest on record, and advocates of the theory that warm summers always follow cold winters will have ample opportunity to verify their belief. The chances of a record-breaking summer are, however, against them.

SOCIETY BELLES OF POTOSI, MO.

Seven Charming Representatives of Beauty and Refinement.

Special Correspondence Sunday Post-Dispatch.

POTOSI, Mo., June 5.—The flourishing Missouri city of Potosi has a great many things to be proud of and a great many blessings to be thankful for, but especially are thanks and pride both due for the beauty and charm of its women. The progress of civilization, culture and refinement of race is inevitably indicated in the prevailing type of feminine beauty, and there is no section of imperial Missouri, in the opinion of all good Potosians, that can surpass this place when it comes to a fair comparison of the good looks, grace and bearing of the society girls. It is, consequently, with the most comfortable feeling of security in making this claim that the accompanying group of seven of the most popular belles of Potosi society is herewith submitted to the study of an admiring public. The young ladies whose pictures are here given are of the best families of Potosi, and there are young society men here who are more than willing to go into the lists against all comers in upholding their loyal adherence to the colors of each and every one of the seven fair women who now stand as the representatives of the beauty of this section of their State.

Miss Jeanette Headlee, whose picture appears in the above group, is a charming brunette, the daughter of Mr. J. B. Headlee of this place. She is a highly accomplished young lady, especially in music and art, and to much natural talent adds the power of these acquired attractions, making her one of the leading figures among the society girls of Potosi.

Miss Becca Casey is a dainty blonde, with soulful blue eyes and dazzling complexion. She possesses a most winning manner, is a conversationalist of rare tact, and sensibly fond of the pleasures of society. As a result of her charms of person and manner Miss Casey has a host of admirers.

Miss Ava Watkins, who is a particularly handsome brunette, stately and imposing, is the daughter of Mr. L. A. Watkins, a commercial traveler for the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. of St. Louis. The family have a charming home here, and the daughter, Miss Ava, is extremely popular in Potosi society.

Miss Mattie Davidson is the daughter of Postmaster Benjamin Davidson of this place. She is a beautiful brunette, vivacious and magnetic, and quite fond of society. One especial feature of Miss Davidson's attractiveness is her grace of bearing, and this, with the additional charm of classic features and rich complexion, renders her a fitting representative of local beauty.

Miss Myrtle Wood is the daughter of ex-Mayor W. N. Wood of Potosi, and a member of one of our oldest and best known families. She is of the blonde type of beauty, of delicate features, and very winning in conversation.

Miss Lottie Smith is a dark-haired and dark-eyed young lady, whose brunette beauty is fittingly accentuated and emphasized by a graceful enthusiasm of manner that sits well upon her. She is the daughter of Mr. J. L. Smith, traveling salesman for the Wear-Boogher Dry Goods Co. of St. Louis and is very popular here.

Miss Mattie Horsen is the daughter of Mrs. W. D. Horsen, for many years proprietress of the Hotel Austin in this city. Miss Horsen is fair, with blue eyes and light hair, and is one of the favorites of local society.

SLAIN WHILE PLOUGHING.

The Cold-Blooded Assassination of an Arkansas Farmer.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., June 8.—Meagre particulars of a cold-blooded assassination which was committed last Thursday in Montgomery County, thirty miles west of here, reached this city to-day. James Redwine, a well-to-do and highly-respectable farmer of that county, was shot down while ploughing in his field. The shot was fired from ambush.

The bloody deed was witnessed by Redwine's wife, who was in the field with him, but she did not see the assassin, who was hidden in the brush. The killing was the result, it is supposed, of a dispute over some land. A neighbor of the Redwines named Jim Kenzie is suspected of the murder.

FREEZING OUT THE KATY.

Texas Lines Cancel All Freight Tariff Agreements With It.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 8.—At a meeting of freight traffic managers of the Southern Pacific, Houston & Texas Central, International & Great Northern, Santa Fe, San Antonio & Aransas Pass and Houston, East & West Texas, held here to-day to discuss the demoralized condition of interstate freight rates to Texas, an agreement was signed and a note sent to Traffic Manager Miller of the M., K. & T. in St. Louis, cancelling all tariffs and divisions on interstate business north and south-bound, effective June 10.

This freeze-out of the Katy was brought about by that road's alleged reckless cutting of rates and breach of faith in the Southwestern Traffic Association agreements, which the other lines claim has caused all the troubles and serious reductions in revenue of other lines. The Katy was not represented at the conference.

CHAMPION BULL FIGHTER.

Mazzantini of Spain to Revive the Gory Sport in Mexico.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

CITY OF MEXICO, Mexico, June 8.—The gory spectacle of bull fighting is soon to have a great revival in this city, a contract having been closed with the celebrated Spanish matador, Louis Mazzantini, for a series of exhibitions. Mazzantini is the greatest bull fighter in the world, and has never before visited Mexico. All of the bulls will be imported from Spain, and will be of the most vicious breed obtainable.

Ex-President Harrison Home.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 8.—Benjamin Harrison was one of the first men to step off the Pennsylvania limited when it arrived at the Union Station this afternoon. He was met by Secretary Tibbett with the family carriage, and was driven home after exchanging greetings with numerous friends at the station. Mr. Harrison looked unusually well, and said he had enjoyed his trip and was feeling strong and hearty.

SUMMER AMUSEMENTS.

Where We May Go to Find Solace During the Hot Weather.

The attraction at the Cave this week will be "Planquette's romantic comic opera, "Chimes of Normandy." The cast is exceptionally strong. Frank Deshon, who will assume the role of Gaspard, a miser, has already shown unusual ability in the portrayal of that character. Wm. Pruette should make a hit as Henri, Marquis de Corneville, as should Toma Hanlon as Serpolite, the good-for-nothing. Ava Palmer-Walker appears as Germaine, the lost Marchioness, Jerome Sykes as "The Bailli," Ed Metcalfe will be the Registrar, George Kunkel, the Assessor and Wm. Steiger the Notary.

The full cast is herewith appended:

Serpolette, the good-for-nothing	Toma Hanlon
Germaine, the lost Marchioness	Ava Palmer-Walker
Gertrude	Minnie Bridges
Jeane	Minnie Bridges
Manette	Jessie Woods
Suzanne (village maidens)	Corine Burton
Henri, Marquis of Cornville	William Pruette
Jean Grenichent, a fisherman	George Lyding
Gaspard, a miser	Frank Deshon
The Bailli	Jerome Sykes
Registrar	Ed Metcalfe
Assessor	George Kunkel
Notary	Wm. Steiger

Alex. Spencer, musical director.
Kirtland Calhoun, stage manager.

Up on the Roof Garden.

These are days when the amusement-seeker desires coolness above everything else. The best talent available cannot entertain an audience if the temperature is traveling around the 80 or 90 mark in the auditorium. This is one of the reasons why people are going to the Union Trust Roof Garden and Casino.

There will be an entirely new change of bill for the week commencing to-morrow evening at this resort, and while there will be no Ganthony on the programme there will be some entertaining features. The principal feature will be George H. Adams, the whilom circus clown, who, with his family will present for the first time a new act in connection with the vaudeville stage. It will be very much like a scene from one of the Hanlon Brothers' productions, and will be perfect down to the smallest detail. Ford and Francis, in an operatic sketch entitled "Tryst," will be another of the principal attractions. George Melville, the circus clown juggler, formerly with the "Black Crook" company, and Daniel Mason, a German dialect comedian, are among the new comers. The Midgleys will remain another week. The La Rose Brothers, in a new act, will be seen for another week, as will also May Welsh and Ray Aldrich, the boy soprano.

Lincoln Elwood, the female impersonator, who was compelled to cancel his engagement last week on account of a severe cold, will appear Sunday night positively and all of next week.

A performance will be given to-night and every Sunday night, in which some of the features of last week will be seen and some of those to be presented for the ensuing week. The Saturday matinee for ladies and children yesterday, at popular prices, was a success, and the management have decided to give one every Saturday during the season. Next week Conatanz and Ida, the equilibrists, will appear for a brief engagement. The following week Wm. Jerome, the parody writer, will appear. On June 30 Mrs. Lydia Yeamans Titus is coming.

Hal Reid's New Play.

Hal Reid, whom every one knows in St. Louis, just produced a play from his own pen at the People's Theater in New York, which bids fair to put this erratic chap well on his feet.

The piece is called Logan's Luck," and one critic suggests that it should have been called "Logan's Bad Luck," owing to the number of misadventures into which the hero tumbles, but that is neither here nor there. It is a story of Arkansas life, melodramatic in form and of the kind which makes the gods go wild. All of the New York papers spoke kindly of it, and predict its success.

Reid plays the role of the hero, Tom Logan, and his wife, Bertha Belle Westbrook, the soubrette role. Both of them were complimented on their work.

Melba Concert Tour.

Melba recently began her engagement at Covent Garden, London, and as was the case in New York last winter, has conquered the town by her marvelous vocalization. Amid all the galaxy of artists engaged for the London season, Melba reigns supreme and has no rival in her art. She will return to America in the autumn, and at the head of a fine company of fine artists with a complete orchestra will make an extended concert tour, under the management of Charles A. Ellis. The programmes will include an act of opera in costume. In the spring of '96 the company will go to the Pacific coast and thence to Australia, Melba's home, where she has not been heard since superb singing made her famous.

Bill at Havlin's.

There will be an entire change of bill in both drama and vaudeville at Havlin's this week, commencing at the matinee to-day. The stock company will present the sterling melodrama, "The Golden Giant Mine," and Horace Vinton, Eda Clayton, Maurice Brennan and a new soubrette, Leona Bland, in the leading roles. Special scenery has been prepared and an enjoyable rendition is promised. The vaudeville is all new, and will include Kitty Clayton, who but recently finished an engagement on the Union Trust Roof Garden; Howard and Bland in a character sketch; Scott Lawrence in his whistling solos; the well known American serenaders in a choice selection of classical and popular melodies and Jos. F. Hirtz in songs and imitations of celebrated actors.

NEW THINGS IN SUMMER WEAR.

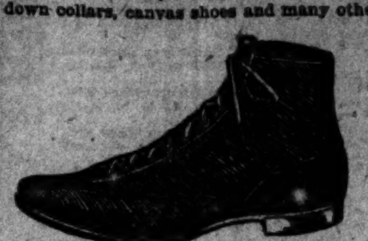
The Very Latest in Comfortable Outing Clothes.

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

The heated term has arrived and everybody is yearning to be away from the town—at the seashore, among the woods or in the mountains, where the air is fresh and pure and possibly cool.

AN IDEAL BICYCLING COSTUME.

But when one yearns for the country and the open air, one also feels a need for appropriate clothing. The garments of winter or even the early spring have become as oppressive as the dust laden air of the city. Flannels, delicately tinted shirts with turned down collars, canvas shoes and many other such pleasant things, present themselves to the mind.

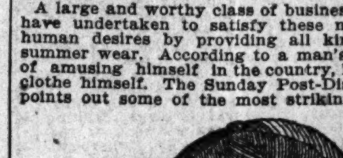


STRONG BICYCLING SHOE.

It is useless to say that it does not matter what you wear in the country. The average man does not want to be ridiculous or unsightly in his summer clothes. One outing shirt is becoming and another unbecoming. The certainty that you wear the becoming thing will add surely to your comfort.

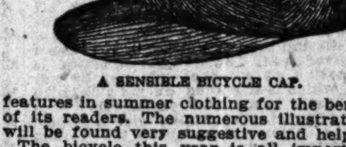
LIGHT BICYCLING SHOE.

A large and worthy class of business men have undertaken to satisfy these natural human desires by providing all kinds of summer wear. According to a man's ideas of amusing himself in the country, he can clothe himself. The Sunday Post-Dispatch points out some of the most striking new features in summer clothing for the benefit of its readers. The numerous illustrations will be found very suggestive and helpful.



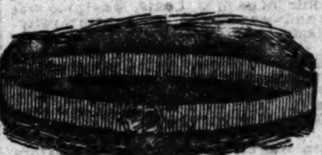
A SENSIBLE BICYCLE CAP.

The bicycle this year is all important. The costume to be worn when riding it is, therefore, one of the first things to be considered.



A VERY SMART BELT.

The cyclist's jacket should be tight-fitting, and the material may be of almost any sort that will not collect dust and exhibit travel-stains too conspicuously. The latter also applies to the knee breeches. The breches are neither skin-tight nor noticeably baggy.



FOR VIOLENT EXERCISE.

With a light undershirt next to the skin the rider will necessarily be guided as to what he shall wear outside of that by weather conditions. A medium-weight sweater will serve as a guarantee against catching a cold after profuse perspiratien.

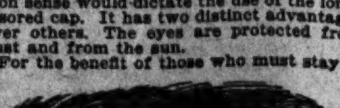
A GOLFING SUIT.

As to the footwear, there are two kinds which may properly be worn—the ordinary Bal and the Oxford. For light riding the latter is preferable, but where a lengthy journey over dusty roads is anticipated the Bal is the most desirable. It is more substantially made, and an accumulation of dust in the shoe is rendered nearly impossible. In color these may be either black or dark brown.

THE CORRUGATED SOLE TENNIS SHOE.

In the matter of caps there is much variety. It would seem, however, that common sense would dictate the use of the long-visored cap. It has two distinct advantages over others. The eyes are protected from dust and from the sun.

For the benefit of those who must stay in the city and swelter a creative genius has invented and put on the market the trousers shield for bicycle riders. It is made of canvas or duck in shades and varieties that will match almost any business suit. It is claimed that the trousers are not wrinkled by the wearing of the guard, and at the same time are thoroughly protected.



THE YACHTSMAN'S CINCH BELT.

The golfing outfits now shown by the swell haberdashers and clothing houses are really gorgeous affairs. Golf being a fashionable game, the appropriate clothing is apt to be expensive.

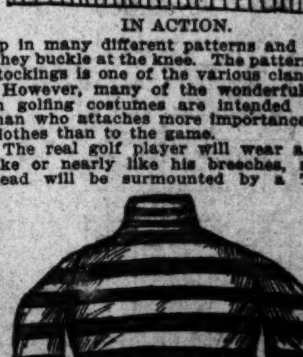
THE CORRECT TENNIS SUIT.

The breeches are of Scotch cheviot, made up in many different patterns and shades. They buckle at the knee. The pattern of the stockings is one of the various clan plaids.

IN ACTION.

However, many of the wonderful things in golfing costumes are intended for the man who attaches more importance to the clothes than to the game.

The real golf player will wear a jacket like or nearly like his breeches, and his head will be surmounted by a Tam o' Shanter of the most approved style. Being thus fitted out, his fancy may be free in the matter of shoes, so long as they are stoutly built and as nearly water-tight as can be.



A KNITTED TENNIS SHIRT.

In the matter of golfing irons, there have been vast improvements. There are at least a dozen different styles and shapes of irons each peculiarly adapted to a particular kind of blow, designed to produce a varying result in each instance.

These irons are fitted with sticks of hickory of various lengths and diameters, to suit the individual tastes of players.

For the benefit of those learning to play golf there has been made what is called a captive golf ball. It is simply an ordinary golf ball to which is fastened a light but tough string, the length of which may vary from 25 to 100 feet. With his iron the beginner may go behind the barn or in some other secluded but roomy place and practice driving a ball in the various directions and to various distances.

The dealer in outing costumes is constantly providing new things for the tennis player.

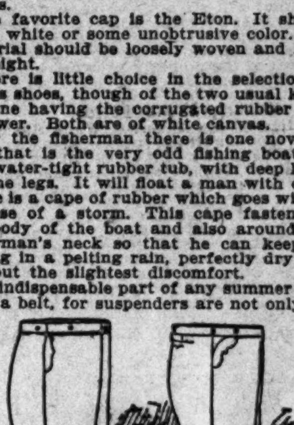
The proper dress for a man consists of white duck or flannel trousers, with a striped knit shirt, which may be of two colors.

The favorite cap is the Eton. It should be of white or some unobtrusive color. The material should be loosely woven and light in weight.

There is little choice in the selection of tennis shoes, though of the two usual kinds the one having the corrugated rubber sole is newer. Both are of white canvas.

For the fisherman there is one novelty, and that is the very odd fishing boat. It is a water-tight rubber tub, with deep holes for the legs. It will float a man with ease. There is a cape of rubber which goes with it in case of a storm. This cape fastens to the body of the boat and also around the fisherman's neck so that he can keep on fishing in a pelting rain, perfectly dry and without the slightest discomfort.

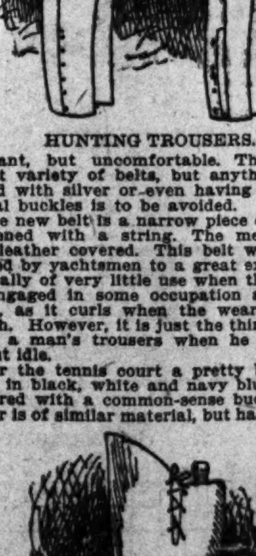
An indispensable part of any summer outfit is a belt, for suspenders are not only inelegant, but uncomfortable. There is a great variety of belts, but anything decorated with silver or even having elaborate metal buckles is to be avoided.



HUNTING TROUSERS.

One new belt is a narrow piece of leather fastened with a string. The metal rings are leather covered. This belt will be affected by yachtsmen to a great extent, but is really of very little use when the wearer is engaged in some occupation about the boat, as it curls when the wearer stoops much. However, it is just the thing to support a man's trousers when he is lolling about idle.

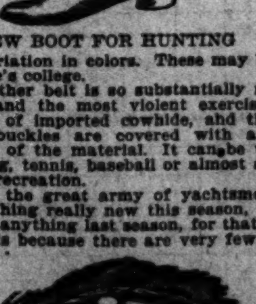
For the tennis court a pretty belt is of silk, in black, white and navy blue, and is secured with a common-sense buckle. Another is of similar material, but has a greater variation in colors. These may be those of one's college.



A NEW BOOT FOR HUNTING

Another belt is so substantially made as to stand the most violent exercise. It is made of imported cowhide, and the rings and buckles are covered with a lighter grade of the material. It can be used for rowing, tennis, baseball or almost any outdoor recreation.

For the great army of yachtsmen there is nothing really new this season, nor was there anything last season, for that matter. This is because there are very few yachtsmen who are not members of clubs, and the by-laws of these organizations require that the club uniform shall be worn. As each club has a distinct uniform it would take a dozen pages of the Post-Dispatch to illustrate them.



THE ETON CAP.

At any rate, the unattached yachtsmen will wear this summer with very little variation what they wore last year, that is, anything at all, and as little as possible of it while washing down decks, polishing brass, repairing rigging, etc., and at other times white duck low shoes and trousers, with a colored shirt and a cap of navy blue, which will harmonize with a blue sack coat, either single or double-breasted. There is a yachtsman's belt, made of white duck, from which the clasps may be removed while it is being washed.

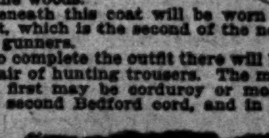
COMMON-SENSE BICYCLING SHIRT.

For the man who intends to take his gun with him to the country there are two or more new things. One of them is a canvas coat, which is also available as a bag for small game, such as birds, duck, squirrels, etc.

The garment looks like a lot of pockets sewed together rather than a coat. One can hardly put a hand anywhere on it without touching a receptacle for something or other. The large pockets, the mouths of which are to be seen at the front edge and side seam, are for game, while the others can be used for matches, cigars, or any of the countless things—not forgetting the flask—which the huntsman needs for a day in the woods.

Beneath this coat will be worn the shell vest, which is the second of the new things for gunners.

To complete the outfit there will be needed a pair of hunting trousers. The material in the first may be corduroy or moleskin, in the second Bedford cord, and in the third horsehide. The breeches button over the ankles.



A TENNIS BELT.

One style of hunting knee boots is in tan-colored grain leather, laced over the instep and at the sides of the tops. Certainly this will not do where there is marshy ground or wading to be done. Other boots which reach to and are fastened at the hips, are used for that purpose. They are made of rubber.

Three styles of hunting caps are in demand this season. One has a long visor before and behind and the other two are made so that they can be turned down over the ears and back of the head.

Fancy, swell garter buckles in gold and silver; late designs. Engraving free. Bolland, Seventh and Locust.

The Sweet Odor of Almonds

rlean, pure and pungent, pleases the nostrils as the cork comes from a jar of Mme. Cale's celebrated Almond Blossom Complexion Cream. For years and ages, women have sought a safe and certain preservative of the complexion. The sun in summer and the heat of stoves and steam in winter make Nature's work too hard for her. The dust that is always in the air grinds itself into the sensitive skin. Soap and water are not enough to get it out and to soothe and soften the dry, chapped skin.

Yale's Complexion Cream

Will do it. It cleanses the skin and its pores. Softens the foreign matter within and without, soothes all irritation, cools the heat of chapping and fever blisters, and gives a satin surface to the suffering skin.

It is good for burns and any abrasion. A single application is effective. Put it on at night and rub it briskly into the skin and you will be pleasantly astonished in the morning. There have been imitations of this wonderful beautifier. Look out for them. Accept nothing but the real.

If your druggist will not supply you send the price, $1, to MME. M. YALE, Health and Complexion Specialist, 146 State st., Chicago. Beauty Guide for 10 cents in stamps.

IS A FREAK OF A STRUCTURE.

New Barnard Building to Cover Two Acres of Ground.

A ROOF OF SKYLIGHTS.

It Will Be Only a Two-Story Structure, but of Enormous Area—Real Estate News.

Work is being rapidly pushed on the new Barnard building, northeast corner of Laclede and Vandeventer avenue. The new structure is classed as a freak among local builders, on account of its size, covering more ground than any other single structure. The lot comprises an area of two acres. The illustration gives an idea as to the immense size of the structure.

Messrs Tully & Clark, the well-known local architects, drew the plans of the mammoth structure. It is to be completed in August and will be occupied by the George D. Barnard Stationery and Manufacturing Company.

The building will have a frontage of 345 feet on Laclede avenue and 213 feet on Vandeventer. The street walls or fronts will be constructed of stone and buff brick, very artistically planned, as will be seen from the sketch, the west part of the structure will be two stories in height, a space of 26x30 feet being allowed between the floor, permitting the erection of galleries within.

The plans, as arranged, provide for the erection of a steel factory at the west end of the lot, adjoining a large store-room.

NEW BARNARD BUILDING.

The northeast corner of the building will be used as offices of the concern. The boiler-room, measuring 50x37 feet will adjoin the alley in the rear, near the factory and will be fitted up with a steam and electrical plant for the heating and lighting of the building. The roof of the structure will be studded with skylights running lengthwise, which will furnish light and air to all parts of it. The building will be heated by a hot blast furnace, to be the largest single plant in the city.

The announcement of the erection of this immense structure made sometime ago, caused a sensation in realty manufacturing and building circles. The fact of the western location of the structure was a stunner to the interested public. The "far-sighted" dealer claimed he was not surprised. "It is only the beginning of the migration westward of manufacturers," was the way he spoke of it. Vandeventer avenue, during the past few years has rapidly assumed a business air, and negotiations are now going on for two large retail stores. George D. Barnard was one of the first to wheel into line, and will shortly vacate the quarters on Eleventh and Washington avenue.

The movement westward of the manufacturers is one way an advantage to the city, as it makes available a very fine location for a wholesale store. The demand for building on Washington avenue by wholesalers continues to increase. The big lease closed Friday and published exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, made by James Campbell to E. O. Whistler of Chicago, demonstrates this. Mr. Campbell leased the old Cyclorama property on Washington avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, having a frontage of 146 feet eleven inches to the Chicagoan, who will improve with a hotel building and apartments suitable for stores at a cost of $200,000. Charles Green, the realty dealer is contemplating erecting a $500,000 business block between Ninth and Tenth on the north side of Washington avenue for wholesalers' accommodations.

It was reported Saturday that the old Barnard building had been leased at $16,000 a year. The report could not be verified.

NEW ELECTRIC ROAD.

Work to Be Begun on the Kirkwood-Meramec Railway.

The syndicate holding the franchise for the proposed St. Louis-Kirkwood-Meramec River Electric Road report it as authentic that work on the new line will begin July 1, and it is intended to have the road ready for operation before the winter sets in. Dr. Pitman, President of the new road, and a resident of St. Louis County, when seen regarding the improvement, spoke as follows:

"The new road has every prospect of being soon completed and in operation. A contract was made on the first day of this month between G. W. Baumhoff and the St. Louis and Kirkwood Railroad Company which requires the contractor to build and equip this road throughout its entire length within six months from date of contract, provided the railroad company deposits with the St. Louis Trust Company $75,000 within sixty days from date of contract.

"This contract requires the making of a first-class roadbed, rock ballast, heavy steel rails, elegant and handsome cars, each to contain two 50-horse power motors, a power house large enough to contain four 250-horse power engines, and everything else necessary to make and equip a first-class road.

"I believe that the only requirement that the railroad company has to comply with will soon be accomplished.

"Mr. Baumhoff, the contractor for the road, says that he is prepared to begin work within ten days after provisions have been made for the protection of operating expenses and interest on the bonds for a term of not less than three years. To do this it will be necessary to deposit not less than $75,000 with the St. Louis Trust Co., to provide for the interest and any deficit in operating expenses. The condition upon which the road is to be built is a guaranteed city connection with 5-cent fare from the city limits to Third and Washington avenue, and the fare from the city limits to Kirkwood shall be 5 cents and from Kirkwood to Meramec Highlands 5 cents additional."

A citizens' meeting was held last Tuesday at Kirkwood and decisive action was taken that will doubtless secure the $75,000 bond in a short time. The following committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions between Kirkwood and Meramec Highlands: Marcus Bernheimer; Kirkwood and vicinity, Messrs. B. White, W. Bryant and M. Nevins; for Webster Groves, Mr. Merrill, and for the section west of Forest Park, Messrs. Rannells and Sterritt. These several committees will report as soon as possible.

SCIENTISTS' MEETING HOUSE.

A $25,000 Structure on Twenty-Eighth and Pine Streets.

Plans have been drawn for a $25,000 structure to be erected on Pine street, between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets, on the south side of the street, to be occupied by the First Church of Christ, Scientists. Architects Link, Rosenheim & Ittner did the work. The building will have a frontage of 44 feet by a depth of 110 feet, and will contain parlors, reception room, study, lecture hall and main auditorium.

The materials to be used in the construction of the building are Sterling's gray brick, with Carthage and buff Bedford stone for trimmings. The roof is to be of Spanish tile, and the entire interior woodwork to be of oak in natural oil finish. The style of the building will be Gothic.

The above named architects have also drawn plans for the following improvements:

A ten-room residence in Windermere Court for Mr. John H. Wright, of T. Wright & Co., in the colonial style of buff brick, with white stone trimmings, to cost about $10,000.

The interior fittings and fixtures for the bar of the Terminal Hotel and Arcade Company, at Twentieth and Market streets, to cost about $10,000, including the decorations.

The bar will be one of the handsomest, if not the handsomest in St. Louis. The contract for the woodwork has been awarded to E. F. Seidel, of No. 212 South Broadway.

A residence for Mr. Charles A. Hausman of buff brick, with light stone and terra cotta trimmings, on the north side of Washington avenue, about 200 feet east of Taylor avenue, to cost $15,000.

They have about completed plans for elegant residences in Westmoreland and Portland places for J. Clifford Richardson, President Chemical National Bank, and Mr. Benjamin W. Clark, of Clark & Stuyvesant Grocery Co., both of which will be placed upon the market for bids very soon.

NEW CLUB BUILDING.

Railroaders to Erect a Costly Structure Near the Union Station.

Architects Link, Rosenheim & Ittner, located in the Union Trust Building, have prepared the preliminary sketches and plans for the club-house and home of the Railroad Y. M. C. A. to be erected on Twentieth street just south of the new Union Station train shed. The new structure will be four stories in height, and will occupy a lot 75x150 feet, being the southeast corner of Clark avenue and Twentieth street. The lot is triangular in shape, and was leased recently from the Terminal Railroad Co.

The proposed building will cost $100,000, and will be a decided improvement in the vicinity of of the Union Station. It will be erected on strictly modern plans, of classic designs, and will be constructed of stone and brick. Work on the building will be commenced early in the fall.

Passenger Agent Townsend of the Missouri Pacific and other prominent local and outside railroad men are the backers of the enterprise. It is to be furnished up as a club-house and hotel, to be occupied by the members of the R. R. Y. M. C. A. This improvement will prove a strong argument in the movement for the widening of Twentieth street opposite the station, and to tear down the ramshackle buildings upon the sites. Most of the property is owned by the Terminal Railroad Co.

Enlarged the Firm.

The action of the Anderson-Wade Realty Company in admitting into partnership Geo. W. Wilson and Cliff H. McMillan created considerable interest and favorable comment in real estate circles. The young men have both been connected with the company in a prominent capacity for a number of years, but not as members of the firm. Mr. Wilson will continue as Secretary and Mr. McMillan has been made Treasurer of the Company. The Anderson-Wade Realty Company now being officered as follows: Festus J. Wade, President; Lorenzo E. Anderson, Vice President; George W. Wilson, Secretary; C. H. McMillan, Treasurer.

AGENTS' REPORTS.

Realty Dealers Closed Many Large Deals Last Week.

Despite the many auction sales last week, agents report numerous private sales. The prices obtained were generally good. The prospects for next week are good.

AUCTION SALES.

A Number of Sales to Take Place Next Week.

The realty agents have great confidence in auction sales, and this coming week some of the most valuable property in the city will be sold at auction. Improved and unimproved property alike have brought good prices.

ANDERSON-WADE.

Anderson-Wade will place on the market at the purchaser's price, commencing at 1:30 o'clock next Saturday afternoon, a large number of lots in beautiful Gibson Heights. This property is highly improved, having been laid out with telford streets and granitoid sidewalks. The sidewalks have been lined with trees, giving the place a very picturesque appearance. From the present outlook lots will be "hammered" down at low figures. See the agents for full particulars.

J. T. DONOVAN.

This firm has two big sales arranged for this week. On Monday, at 4 p. m., they will sell the Arnot estate, comprised of houses No. 2901 and 2903 Pine street; also, a lot on Pine street west of house No. 2903. The houses to be sold are strictly modern, big houses of 12 and 10 rooms, with hard wood finishings and all conveniences. The terms of sale are one-third cash, balance in one and two years.

J. T. Donovan & Co. will also sell 50 choice lots fronting on Tyler, Shenandoah, Cleveland, Flora and Flad avenues, in beautiful Tyler place. The property is convenient to the Market street, Lindell Railway and GrandAvenue Electric Lines. This sale will take place Thursday at 3 p. m. The terms are very easy, being one-fourth cash, balance in one, two and three years.

SCHLIERHOLZ & REITZ.

Messrs. Schlierholz & Reitz, the local agents for Mr. Shea, who owns the Westmoreland place property that is to be sold at auction on Monday, June 10, at 6 p. m., had an offer Saturday of $200 per foot, or $30,000, for the lot; they submitted the offer to Mr. Shea, who refused it, stating that the property ought to sell for more money, as sales have been made lately for $275 per foot. Mr. Shea prefers to take his chances at public sale. The price that this property will bring will establish the price of the choicest residence property in St. Louis.

GAY & McCANN.

Gay & McCann will sell at auction Saturday, June 22, four modern houses and six choice building lots in the West End. For particulars see their advertisements in to-day's Post-Dispatch.

KINLOCH PARK.

Phil Chew will give a free excursion to Kinloch to-day. His agents will show interested parties about the tract. He has engaged a brass band for the occasion.

A TALE OF FORTUNE.

The Peculiar Chancery Case Decided in Edwardsville.

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill., June 8.—A chancery case of unusual interest has just been decided in the Circuit Court. From the evidence it appears that in the year 1882, John H. McAlpine, a merchant tailor, who had been in business for many years in St. Louis, died, leaving a considerable amount of St. Louis property and also a body of land in this (Madison) county, consisting of several hundred acres, which has since become very valuable. At the time of McAlpine's death parties to the number of sixty-five claiming relationship, the nearest being that of third cousins, came into possession through the St. Louis courts of the property located in that city, but were not aware that he had possessions in Illinois.

After a period of five years the land still unclaimed was advertised by Madison County and escheated to the county. Suit was filed against the county by the parties who had possession of the McAlpine property. At this point the interesting part of the story begins.

Mrs. Jeannie Christian of Onarga saw the advertisement and was so overcome by what it revealed to her that she fainted away and was thrown into a long and severe illness. After her recovery she too filed suit against Madison County as only heir of John H. McAlpine. Mrs. Christian's story is about as follows: Her mother was McAlpine's only sister and died when Jennie, her only child, was almost 5 years of age, leaving the child in the care of the Convent of the Good Shepherd in Louisville, Ky., where she grew to womanhood. Her brother John became the custodian of her property which was understood to be considerable, and for some years visited the convent and paid the expenses of his niece. After a time, however, the visits ceased, the niece lost all trace of him, and the advertisement in the paper was her first knowledge of his fate, though she and the convent authorities knew he had lived in St. Louis. Mrs. Christian is in possession of a locket left her by her mother, which is engraved on one side with her mother's name and on the other with that of her uncle. It contains also a miniature of the latter and had been his present to his sister. The picture was identified by a St. Louis artist as being identical with one of the deceased J. H. McAlpine, which was found in the possession of the Masonic lodge in St. Louis. McAlpine was a Mason and was buried by that fraternity. The St. Louis people who claim his property testified that McAlpine was a Roman Catholic in good standing and a regular communicant in that church.

One witness testified to having been personally acquainted with McAlpine, and that he had frequently told him he had no living relative.

The case was on trial several days before Judge Burroughs, who in his decision referred to this man's evidence as conclusive against Mrs. Christian, on the ground that if Mr. Alpine had no relative, she could not possibly be his niece. A decision was rendered, however, in favor of the sixty-five St. Louis relatives. It is said the case will be taken to the Supreme Court.

TOOK HER BABIES.

Why a New York Mother Raised a Rumpus That Needed Four Police men.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—"He is taking my babies away," shouted Mary Collins, as she saw Agent Babcock of the Gerry Society Board, in a Madison avenue car, with five of her six children. Such a cry always attracts attention. Without waiting to inquire twenty women rushed into the street and threatened Babcock with bodily harm unless he surrendered the children, who were crying. Four policemen were needed to guard Babcock to the society's rooms. The Collinses live at 48 Laight street. The mother is said to be a drunkard. The father was acquitted on a charge of burglary a few days ago for lack of evidence.

WITHOUT BILL OR BEAK.

The Queer Hen Owned by a New York Poultry Dealer.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Nathan Bitzick, a poultry dealer, has a hen without bill or beak, but instead a large mouth, with lips clearly defined and teeth which can be felt. She has a nose, forehead and large eyes. The face resembles that of a monkey. The tongue is unlike that of any fowl, and she licks her chops like a cat. She bites off a piece of bread crust, holding it with one claw while she eats. When asleep she breathes like a quadruped, with a sound much like a gentle snore. She weighs between five and six pounds.

Suit for a Cigarette Machine.

James H. Underwood and J. W. McNeill entered suit for $30,000 yesterday against H. J. Drummond and Robert B. Dula. The plaintiffs state that they owned a patent improved cigarette machine for which Drummond and Dula offered to pay them $30,000 or to start a company and give Underwood 49 per cent of the capital stock. The new company was never organized, defendants got the cigarette machine, and now Underwood and McNeill want the $30,000.

DATE OF TARIFF LAW.

Justice Fuller's Opinion of When it Went Into Effect.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Chief Justice Fuller's opinion in the Burr and Hardwick case, involving the date when the present tariff law went into effect, which was announced on Monday last, but not read, was made public to-day. Discussing the contention that the law should have taken effect on the 1st instant instead of Aug. 28, 1894, the Chief Justice says:

"Upon the threshold we are met with the fact that the act of 1890 was not repealed in terms until Aug. 28, 1894, and that the repealing section of the latter act kept in force every right and liability of the Government or of every person which has been incurred or accrued prior to the passage thereof and thereby every right or liability excepted out of the effects sought to be given to the first section. The right of the Government to duties under the tariff law which existed between Aug. 1, and Aug. 28, was right accruing prior to the passage of the act of 1894, and the obligation of the importers between August 1 and August 28 to pay the duties on their goods under the existing tariff law was a liability under that law arising prior to the passage of the law of 1894, and if Congress intended that section A should relate back to August 1, still the intention is quite as apparent that the act of 1890 should remain in full force and effect until the passage of the new act on August 28, and that all acts done, rights accrued and liabilities incurred under the earlier act prior to the repeal, should be saved from the effect thereof, as to all parties interested, the United States included. A higher rate was imposed on many articles by the act of 1894 than by the prior act, and a lower rate on others, while some that were free were made dutiable as, for instance, the article of sugar. Must duties paid between August 1 and August 28 be refunded where the rate was lowered, and assessed where the rate was raised, a duty imposed where none existed? Clearly not." Summing up, the Chief Justice says: "As the act of 1890 was not repealed by the act of 1894 until the latter act became a law, when inconsistent laws were declared thereby repealed, we think it can not be doubted that Congress intended the rates of duty prescribed by the act of 1894 to be levied on the first day of August if the bill should then be a law and if not then, as soon after that date as it should become a law. On the 1st day of August the duties prescribed by the first section of the act of 1894 could not be lawfully levied and so far as the importations in this case are concerned and others similarly situated, the law required exaction of the duties prescribed by the act of 1890. As to such importations, the first section of the act of 1894 could not be literally carried out.

GREEK RUINS UNCOVERED.

Progress of the Work Being Pushed by Americans.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A dispatch received from Dr. Chase Peabody, dated Eretria, Greece, states that a gymnasium and other well paved buildings have been uncovered, as well as three inscriptions, three heads and some good architectural fragments.

According to this dispatch the work of excavation among the ancient Greek ruins, which have been carried on for some years by the American School of Classic Studies at Athens, is continuing to show good results.

Dr. Rufus Ryan Richardson, who is mentioned as overseeing the work, is the director of the school.

When the houses found last year were cleared a floor of cement and pebbles was discovered about a metre below the surface. The "well-paved buildings" of the dispatch are no doubt of a similar character.

The inscriptions, heads and architectural fragments are in all likelihood of a nature corresponding to the ones brought to light in May a year ago.

The statement about the excavation of the theater being nearly completed indicates that the two former attempts made to uncover this building have been followed by another which has been pushed to a more completely successful conclusion. Most of the more important excavations and discoveries have been in the immediate neighborhood of this theater.

PEABODY AND PATRIOTISM.

First District Court Formally Ornamented With the Country's Colors.

There was a love feast of patriotic orders in the First District Police Court yesterday. Judge Peabody presided. Thirteen councils of the American Protective Association, the Junior Order of American Mechanics and the Patriotic Sons of America raised a fund with which they purchased a complete display of American patriotism—two flags, a quantity of bunting and a gilded eagle. The material was placed artistically upon the wall over the Judge's bench.

At 3 o'clock a band arrived and the exercises commenced. H. A. Thompson of Council 33, A. P. A., delivered the opening address. He stated that the object of the presentation of the flags was to show that the patriotic orders of St. Louis appreciated the fact that the city had a true American patriot in the First District Police Court who was neither intolerant nor bigoted. Judge Peabody replied. He knew it was rather an unusual proceeding, he said, for exercises of this character to be held in a public building, but it was an expression of patriotism, and consequently was entirely in form. Judge James Claiborne, formerly of the Court of Criminal Correction, also made an address.

WAITING ON THE GOVERNMENT REPORT.

The Grain Trade Looking for a Bullish Statement.

HIGH PRICES STILL RULING.

Excitement Runs High in Wheat—Corn Not So Strong—Oats Nervous—Flour Quiet.

For a time last week it looked very much as though wheat had fallen once more into the hands of the bears. The talent of the pit apparently had full control, and most of them were playing for a sharp break in price. They did force July to 76⅞c and Sept to 76⅛c on Wednesday, but on the following day the market broke loose from their control and went up as rapidly and easily as though there was no such thing as a professional bear trader in existence. It was not outside speculation, either, that wrested the market away from the short sellers. The fact was patent that most of the country bulls had sold their holdings, taken their profits and gone home. So the drive the bears had made at the market to shake out the pyramids, struck no pyramids, at least, not enough of them to demoralize the market and break it sharply in price. There was some closing out of long wheat, but most the selling was by the professionals who were aiming at the pyramids. When it was seen that not enough liquidation was being forced to work the market, bear influences, which had been paramount, were lost sight of and bull influences which had been disregarded, at once became all powerful once more.

• • •

Yesterday saw a strong market that was only temporarily soft for a short time early in the day on the announcement that a car new wheat had arrived here. But when the Modern Millers' statement that the winter crop had still further declined in condition and was not over 60 per cent of an average crop was announced, the market just went crazy. Bulls and bears both were buying, and sentiment was all one way. On the regular board July sold up to 82⅝@¾ and Sept. to 81⅞c, but in the "curb" July sold as high as 83c, though later offered at 82½c. Latter price was 2¼c above the preceding Saturday's close.

• • •

The Government report on the condition of winter wheat and the acreage left to be harvested, which will be made public to-morrow afternoon, is expected to be an unusually bullish statement. On May 1, last, the condition was 82.4 and for June 1, it is believed it will be placed at least as low as 70 and probably as low as 65. The lowest June condition in twelve years past was 62 in 1885. One year ago it was 83.2. Besides the promised extremely low percentage of condition, the area of 24,224,000 acres, which the Department of Agriculture estimated was seeded last fall, it is believed will be cut down to nearer 20,000,000 acres. The chances appear to be that the June 1, report will indicate a winter wheat crop of 225,000,000 bu. All advices show as unusually high a condition of spring wheat, as winter wheat is low. Weather conditions have been almost perfect, and the plant is reported as healthy and forward. The percentage of condition should be nearer 100 than it has ever been reported. The acreage, however, is said to be less than last year, conservative estimates placing the reduction at 10 per cent, which would make the present area about 10,500,000 acres. A crop of about 150,000,000 bu will probably be indicated. popular estimates ranging from 150,000,000 to 175,000,000 bu.

• • •

Allowing that a crop of 400,000,000 bu winter and spring wheat is raised, and that is a most liberal allowance, and that this country enters harvest with 40,000,000 bu in the visible, still the reserves back in the country are so extremely small that the total amount to be depended upon for home requirements and that can be spared for export does not mean a lower level of values than the present. Lower prices may be temporarily seen, but the chances appear to favor considerably higher prices, and before the 1896 crop is harvested they surely will be seen. As stated in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the next good advance may come after the new crop has started to market, when the harvesting machine plainly shows the meagerness of the yield and the country and other outside mills are competing with the primary markets for supplies. But the advance is liable to come after that.

• • •

The foreigners do not feel that they are on the easy street they have so happily and securely dwelt upon for several years past. Their own wheat crops are generally reported as in good condition, but they will hardly reach the dimensions of last year, which were placed at 1,418,000,000 bu. Where the total world's crop for 1894 was estimated at 2,897,000,000 bu, it is doubtful, with the known shortage in this country and the Argentine and the probable shortage in Russia, France and lesser wheat growing countries of Europe, that it will be over 2,200,000,000 bu. Then there is the large shortage in the European rye crop, which is more serious than that in their wheat crop. Taken the world over, from the reduced yields to the smaller supplies in sight than a year ago, the situation and the prospects do not indicate low prices and more probably point towards dollar wheat ere the next season ends.

• • •

Yesterday's postings showed that only 160,800 bu wheat is in public stock here, 152,700 bu of which is No. 2 red. The receipts for week were 112,500 bu, but will probably be light from now until the new crop begins to move. A let up in the outside milling demand has been very perceptible and local millers have purchased sparingly, so that sales have been smaller than for some time past. Yesterday No. 2 red sold f. o. b. East side at 84c, and by sample East track at 84½c, and choice this side at 85¾—86c.

• • •

The present prospects are too flattering for an enormous crop to bull corn successfully, but there is also a limit to low prices that apparently is not far away from the present level of values. Of course, if the crop is raised that present prospects promise, the chances are that 50c for corn will be cut square in half, and 25c would be a good price for a 2,500,000,000 bu or more crop. But there is not so much corn now in this country, and the next crop is still too far off and too wrapped around with uncertainty as to future weather and other favorable or unfavorable conditions, to mean the price is going below 40c for actual corn before the next crop moves, even if it goes as low as 40c. With a short hay and grass crop and of oats considerably less than was promised a few weeks ago, and other feed, more particularly millfeed, high in price, the chances still further favor upholding the value of old corn for balance of the season. Yesterday's close of 50c bid for July and 51½c for Sept, was just 1c below the preceding Saturday.

• • •

The latest run of corn to market has apparently spent itself already. Receipts in this market last week of 93,110 bu were 608,000 bu less than one year ago. The stock was reduced somewhat, and now is 981,000 bu, of which 882,000 bu is No. 2. A decline in price brought out a better demand, in part for shipment, local requirements enlarging notably. Yesterday No. 2 sold at 48¾c, though later 49c bid, and No. 3 salable at 48c, No. 2 white sold at 48¾@50c.

• • •

There is every indication of a considerably lower condition than the 87 of one year ago in the coming Government report on oats; but, on the other hand, the area planted will probably be reported much larger than the 27,000,000 acres harvested last year. The prospects for a larger crop than in '94, and the fact that so much of that year's crop will by carried over, is very much against the bull side and has held in check speculation on that side. The close of yesterday, however, was ¼c higher than the Saturday before, June having 29⅝c bid, and July selling at 29¼c and Sept. at 30⅛c.

• • •

Receipts have fallen off still more of late and last week but 97,340 bu came in, against 151,475 bu one year ago. There was not much reduction in the stock—now 143,000 bu, and 85,000 bu of this No. 2—as the cash demand was nothing extra. Yesterday the market was right strong for bulk, owing to light arrivals, sellers generally contending for better prices, but market quiet. Sacked lots dull at relatively low prices. In special bin mixed sold at 29½c for ordinary, 31c for choice. Track this side—No 2 at 30c; Northern mixed at 30¾c; No 3 white at 32c; No 2 white at 33c. In sacks—white at 33@34c.

• • •

Daily Commercial Bulletin says of flour: Between the unsettled wheat market and a light business, the flour sellers' lot has not been a happy one by any means of late. Except a few "chance shots" on special brands that slipped through at 26s 6d to 27s, no export business was possible, but cable inquiries have been coming more frequently of late and may presage a re-opening of foreign business. Domestic trade was smaller and confined almost entirely to the South, nothing being done with the East. Shipments for week were 44,256 bbls, of which 39,053 South, 4,477 East, 996 North and West, against 51,586 bbls last week and 41,789 corresponding week last year.

The Indiana Agricultural Commissioner, it is said, estimates that State's wheat crop at 1,500,000 bushels.

The "tip" is that a crop of 375,000,000 bushels winter and spring wheat will be indicated by the Government figures for June.

Estimates are for 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 bushels decrease in next wheat visible, says the Daily Commercial Bulletin, where one year ago it was about 1,200,000 bushels. St. Louis stock will show about 400,000 bushels and Minneapolis and Duluth probably 900,000 bushels decrease.

• • •

A car of the 1895 wheat crop came in yesterday, an unusually early arrival of new wheat. It was shipped by Davis & Co. of Coffeyville, Kan. and consigned to the J. W. Booth & Son Commission Co. This new wheat graded No 2 red and was in right good condition. When auctioned off on the call the wheat was bought by Annan, Burg & Smith for Paddock, Hodge & Co. of Toledo, who bought the first new wheat that came in here last year. The price paid yesterday was 95c.

The American Agriculturist makes the condition of wheat 71.5 against 86.3 last year and in the principal winter wheat raising States east of the Rockies a condition of 61. The States last Sept averaged 91. The condition of spring wheat is reported at 93.2. The acreage of winter wheat is put at 24,451,000 acres, and spring wheat 12,120,000 acres. The acreage of oats was reported at 29,912,000, a decrease of 3.8 per cent, and the condition 84.

• • •

The Liverpool Corn Trade News says: An official crop report of the Austrian Ministry of Agriculture, giving conditions in middle of May, states in general the winter crops have developed well, the fields are tillering well and rye coming into ear. Local complaints were made of poor rye fields and crops plowed up. In Galicia one fourth of the rye crop was abandoned. At date of report spring seeding was mostly finished, though a good deal of corn had yet to be planted. In general the spring crops have made a good start.

• • •

The Modern Miller of yesterday says: Wheat is prematurely heading out in Eastern and Central Missouri, throughout Indiana, Illinois and the most of Ohio. Yesterday was one of the worst of the season on the growing wheat in the Central States and our most conservative advices take a worse view of the situation than was reflected a week ago. In Western Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, also in Southern Iowa, what winter wheat was left when the rains came is filling out better than expected. On that account, wherever there is any winter wheat in the West and Southwest it promises to be of good quality. The rains did wheat absolutely no good in Texas and the Territories, and the conditions on the Pacific coast are unchanged, and in the Eastern winter wheat States the crop has not held its own. On the whole, the condition of winter wheat has again declined, and, without giving full credence to all the damage news received yesterday and to-day, we cannot expect more than 60 per cent of an average crop of winter wheat. While it is probable that a little more wheat will be harvested west of the Missouri River than was thought possible before the recent rains, the decline in condition in the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys have more than overbalanced any gain possible in the west two weeks ago or thereafter. Michigan must now be placed among the winter wheat growing States that has suffered a decline of condition this week. The great danger now threatening the wheat crop of the central States is that the scorching suns and the lack of moisture will force the crop to mature two weeks or more earlier than usual, preventing the heads from filling out and the grain from fully developing. Wire advices from Southern Illinois yesterday and to-day indicate that less than half a wheat crop will be harvested in that region, and that "Egypt must buy corn." The condition of oats is that of a crop that must follow the fortunes of wheat.

Street Notes.

The homegrown strawberry crop proved to be a small one. It was first damaged by the freeze, late by the drouth and altogether had a hard tussle with the elements. The strawberry season is nearly over here, and this week will wind up the local crop.

The Redemeyer-Hollister Commission Co. received a car of potatoes shipped by a Chinaman from Seattle, Wash. Billy Redemeyer tried his best to make a good showing on this car of potatoes, as he expects to work up a good trade with the celestials of that part of the country next fall.

• • •

Two cars of melons are en route here—one from Florida for P. M. Kiely & Co. and the other for W. J. and J. W. Corcoran from Texas. Therefore, in a few days the luscious melon will be added to the many other edibles on the street in the produce district awaiting purchasers with fat pocketbooks.

• • •

The market was fairly deluged with tomatoes and considerable of a decline in price resulted. Mississippi has started to loading straight car lots for the various markets. Several car lots were in yesterday from Florida, but the Mississippi stock finds much more favor with buyers, being firmer and more attractive and not near so long en route as the Florida product.

• • •

As predicted, new potatoes are coming in more liberal quantities each day, a fact evident enough in the steady decline in prices from day to day. Arkansas and Tennessee growth are now added to the liberal offerings of Ala, La and Miss. The quality of the offerings is steadily improving—the spuds getting larger and showing more mature and full grown stock.

• • •

The Fruit and Produce Exchange is steadily engaged in rooting out some of the evils of the trade, and has already brought about a number of reforms. In compliance with the request or the members of the Exchange, the railroads centering here will permit no more watermelons to be retailed out of the cars in their respective yards, and a printed circular has just been issued to this effect by the Mo. P. R. R. Co.

• • •

The offerings of string beans have been so very irregular all week that the boys have had to wrestle with a feast or famine alternately and nobody seemed able to account for so uneven a distribution. The small demand for the inviting and attractive wax bean so far this season has been a surprise to the trade and lower price did not seem to increase the demand for this variety.

• • •

There is an abundance of peaches and new apples in the market, but the fruit as a rule is inferior in size and quality. Such fruit, so lacking in size and color, finds little favor at the hands of dealers and is netting very little to the growers and shippers of Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee and Alabama, the principal shipping States. Many of the peaches, as well as apples, bear evidence of having been clubbed off the trees, and such hardly bring express charges and occasionally some are refused altogether by the consignees—not being good for the charges.

FROM WEAKNESS TO STRENGTH.

A Change at the Close in the Chicago Wheat Market.

CAUSED BY CROP DAMAGES.

Corn Had No Independent Action, but Declined and Advanced in Sympathy With Wheat.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Wheat turned from quite weak early in the session to-day to very strong at the close, on further crop damage reports. After declining 1c per bushel under its highest value made in the first half hour it rose 2c and closed at 81⅜c, with July, which is 1½c rise. Corn, oats and provision markets sympathized with the strength in wheat. Oats are 1c higher, while corn only gained ¼c and pork, lard and ribs are but modestly advanced. The first sales of wheat were at from ⅛c to ⅝c per bushel over the price at the close yesterday. The opening was comparatively tame. There were no new features in surroundings of the market, the weather was still dry in winter wheat area and wet in the spring wheat region. The chief items of early news comprised the publication of the State crop report of Michigan and Illinois, and the particulars of the week movement. Michigan report gave average condition for the State at 73, or about 10 per cent reduction for the month. The Illinois report gave the average for the State at 62, as compared with 92 per cent on May 1. These reports, bad as was the state of affairs they indicated, were not quite so bad as the imaginations of some of the speculators had pictured by thousands, and consequently their effect was bearish rather than bullish.

The Argentine shipments were smaller for the week, according to a private dispatch, but that also as a proof news fell flat in consequence of being expected. The week's shipments of flour and wheat as published by Bradstreet's from both coasts, 2,991,000 bushels of wheat was from the Pacific side. The total on the week before was 2,262,600 bushels, and on corresponding week of last year 2,742,000 bushels. The aggregate decrease of wheat and flour in the United States and Canada for May was given by the Daily Trade Bulletin as 19,393,000 bushels, and deducting an increase of 4,000,000 bushels in Europe and afloat, the net amount of world's decrease for May was 15,353,000 bushels. The market acted rather heavy for an hour or more. Pardridge took a hand in the market and around 80⅝c for July he began to feed the bulls with short wheat. The price gradually but surely declined to 80¼c, and after hanging between that and 80½c for a time, slowed off to 79¾c. The decline was helped by advices from St. Louis of the arrival there of a load of new wheat from Kansas, and other telegrams referring to threshing returns from the State, which mentioned the twelve bushels per acre from a field of 400 acres. But there was an excellent inquiry for cash wheat. 100,000 bushels taken to go to Toledo. Some car loads were sold for Pittsburg, also, and other places which seldom buy direct from Chicago. Then came rumors of hot winds in California having damaged crops there from 15 to 20 per cent, the Modern Miller's estimate of not over 60 per cent of an average crop of winter wheat, and lastly, the most unkind cut of all, chinchbugs in spring wheat was a mere rumor, but it created a commotion in the minds of the traders, while the price was en route for 81⅜c for July, which it reached and where it closed.

The corn market had no independent action of its own. It declined when wheat was weak and advanced when it regained strength. The crop prospects were good as ever, but the receipts are giving no signs of increasing. The inspection in store to-day was 223 cars and the outward inspection was 338,000 bushels. July opened at from 52⅜c to 52½c, advanced to 52⅝c, reacted to 52@52⅛c, then once more advanced until it reached 53⅛c, the closing price being 52⅞@52⅝c yesterday.

For a Saturday, business in oats was very active. Further reports of crop damage making the condition much more unfavorable than it has been created some anxiety among shorts, and there was free buying by them. Trading was heavy and principally general. July started at from 38c to 38⅜c, sold at 30⅝c to 30½c, advanced to 31¼c and closed at 31⅛@31¼c.

The provision market was firmer and recovered the slight loss of the day before. Hog receipts were only 10,000, making the week's run 17,000 against 177,000 a year ago. The run for next week is not expected to exceed 145,000 head. Compared with yesterday closing pork is from 10c to 12½c higher; lard 2½c higher and ribs up 5c.

Estimates for Monday: Wheat, 40; corn, 225; oats, 200; hogs, 29,000.

Live Stock.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Cattle—In the absence of a fair supply very little trading was done to-day. Prices closed 10c per 100 lbs higher for good beeves than a week ago, but common lots closed 15@20c lower. The week's cattle receipts were 10,000 head less than last week, and 12,000 less than for the corresponding week last year. For common to choice native dressed beef and shipping steers weighing 900 to 1,600 lbs, prices range at $3.60@6, but very few are choice enough to bring $5.80, and sales are largely at $4.25@5.50. Far away Idaho is sending some 885@975 lbs wheat and oat fed steers here, and sales are made at $3.25@3.85. Stockers and feeders are selling more freely at somewhat stronger prices, sales being mostly at $2.40@3.95. Texas cattle, receipts this week are about 15,000 head, against 9,500 last week, and 5,000 the corresponding week last year. At the short decline that has taken place in these cattle this week there is a fair demand at $2.80@3.60 for grass steers, with fed steers selling at $4@4.50. Hogs—This week's receipts, 162,600 head, 6,000 more than were received last week, and about 15,000 less than came in during the corresponding week last year.

There was an active local demand, and prices were strong for light, while good heavy hogs commanded an advance of 5c. Heavy hogs sold at $4.20@4.75; light, $4.25@4.50; mixed, $4.35@4.65, and pigs, $3@4. Prices closed nearly the same as a week ago, and 15c lower than a year ago. The supply was pretty well disposed of, the bulk selling at $4.55@4.65. Light weight hogs sold more slowly than heavy, owing to a poor shipping demand for the former. Sheep—About 2,500 head were received to-day, making 52,550 for the week, a reduction of 5,000 from the number received last week and 14,000 less than arrived in the same week last year. The offerings again consisted mostly of undesirable grades, and trade was extremely dull at yesterday's lower range prices. Inferior to good fat native sheep sold at 62½c@$4. Texans at $2@3. Oregon sheep at $3.25, lambs at $3@4.75 and spring lambs at $5.25@5.80, a few selling at $2.25@4.75. Receipts: Cattle, 300; calves, 150; hogs, 9,000; sheep, 2,500.

NEW COUNTY ELECTRIC ROAD.

Its Motor Power Will be Generated by the Meramec River.

Secretary of State Leseuer Friday granted a charter to E. J. Thurman of the Hynson Hardware Co., W. D. Waters of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. and J. B. Clayton of Fenton, Mo., to construct and operate a double-track electric railway from St. Louis to Morse Mill in Jefferson County, about 35 miles from this city. The capital stock is to be $500,000. The county court on May 13 granted permission to the foregoing incorporators to construct and operate a single or double-track electric railway upon or across the public highways, beginning at the southwest limits of the city about 3,000 feet north of Gravois avenue, thence near and parallel to the Gravois road crossing the Meramec River near Fenton, Mo., and continuing through that town to a point at the boundary line of the county near Fenton.

It is asserted by the projectors of the road that it will be of the most substantial construction and that it will be completed at the earliest possible moment and put into operation, carrying both freight and passenger traffic, the intention being to extend the road at the earliest moment into Jefferson County in order to cater to the freight business of the large flour mills in that county.

Mr. E. J. Thurman told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the company would be a close corporation and that the bonds would not be placed upon the market, as there was plenty of money behind the road to maintain and operate it.

An important factor say the incorporators will be the method of getting motive power. A fall at the bend of the Meramec River will be utilized to furnish electric power. A test has shown that 1,000 or more horse power can easily be generated. This will permit operating the road on an economical basis.

The incorporators would not say, but it is stated that the down-town connection for passengers will be made with some of the Scullin lines and transfers issued.

POSTMASTER MURDERED.

P. S. Graham of Bower, Neb., Killed by Midnight Robbers.

R. S. Graham, the Postmaster at Beaver, Neb., was murdered by masked men at that place Friday morning. Details of the affair were received her by Postoffice Inspector Johnson Saturday.

Graham was awakened at 2 o'clock Friday morning by a cracking noise in the front part of his dwelling, occupied by the Postoffice. He ventured in to investigate and was shot down. His wife, who heard the shooting, rushed in the office to find him lying dead on the floor.

Deputy Postoffice Inspector Sinclair, who is working on cases in Nebraska, went to Beaver to investigate. He reported that nothing had been taken from the postoffice, the robbers having fled after killing Graham. A son of the dead man told the inspector that he saw the men depart, one of them carrying a lantern, and said that he wore a red handkerchief over the lower part of his face.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

It Has Been Holding Its Session in a Big Orchard.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

WILLOW SPRINGS, Mo., June 8.—The State Horticultural Society's session here was the largest ever held since it was organized. Nearly all of the large fruit growers of Missouri were represented. The forenoons have been spent by the members in visiting the large fruit farms, of which Howell County has the largest in the United States.

The fruit crop in this country this season will be enormous, many trees already bending under their load. Early peaches will be in the market in about three days. The grapes are in excellent condition. There are thousands of acres in apples now bearing.

Smokeless Fuel.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

RED BUD, Ill., June 8.—The coke company of Sparta is making some experiments at its Rosborough plant in the manufacture of a smokeless fuel. It is made by burning the sulphur and other smoke producing substances out of the coal. The burning process takes about half the time as in making coke. The new fuel is, therefore, much softer than coke. Five or six carloads have been made and shipped to St. Louis parties for trial.

Contagious Diseases Report.

Following is the report of Chief Sanitary Officer Francis for the week ending June 8: Small-pox, cases 3, deaths 1; diphtheria, cases 19, deaths 9; croup, cases 1, deaths 1; scarlatina, cases 4, deaths 1; typhoid fever, cases 1, deaths 0; measles, cases 56, deaths 1; whooping cough, cases 2, deaths 1.

Fugitive Johnson Captured.

John Johnson, a Work-house escape, was captured at 1106 Carr street, Saturday morning by officers Knoehoff and Simcox on information furnished by Chief Reedy. Johnson had served half of a six months' sentence for larceny. He escaped on May 5.

TRADE IMPROVING AND EXPANDING.

The Prophecies of Fair Weather Have Come to Pass.

CROP OUTLOOK IS NOT BAD.

The Market of the Week Ended Was Remarkable for Nothing but Its Dullness.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Just as the stock market of March, April and May had to be considered apart from the general situation, so that now prevailing must also be discussed in the same manner. The rise, development and decline of sentiment is the only explanation of the market at any time during the period covered. As a matter of fact, at the end of the third month the situation is clearer and sounder than in March, when the market began its advance. Except for the striking influence upon sentiment exercised by the bond contract and the adjournment of Congress, there was really then very little that was hopeful in the situation, or which would have justified such a movement as then took place.

In June the business situation appears not only healthy, but to be improving and expanding. What was a guess in that respect then is now a fact. There has evidently been some damage done in the meantime to the winter wheat crop, but otherwise the crop outlook is not unfavorable so far as its prospects may be stated at this time. Great progress has been made in the reorganizations of the various insolvent companies, large amounts of American securities have been placed in permanent investment abroad, and all the country's great staple products have made striking advances in price. None of these things had taken place in March when the bull movement began, nor could any of them have been predicted with the slightest degree of certainty. At the beginning of June, now that these things have come to pass, the market has lapsed into dullness. For the past month it has been losing the buoyant tone and activity that it showed prior to that time. As the market is not an animate thing which moves capriciously, instead of, as it does, in response to the ordinary laws of supply and demand, as applied to securities, its changed tone is somewhat remarkable. Speculative sentiment on account of the very failure of the market to continue the advance has become somewhat uncertain and even altered, as is shown in the constantly increasing short interest. At the same time there are reasons to expect a recurrence of general liquidation, and any further striking developments, such as followed the execution of the bond contract, might easily revive the formerly existing sentiment, and with the present more justifiable basis for the sentiment the speculation might assume its former proportions. The week's market has been not remarkable for anything but dullness.

Ed Butler's Slaughter-House Scheme.

The Committee on Sanitary Affairs of the House of Delegates will take another whirl with Mr. Kelly's resolution requesting the Board of Health to order daily removals of offal from slaughter-houses in the interest of Col. Ed Butler. A full attendance of butchers interested is requested. Chairman Becker of the committee said yesterday that some of the members of the House did not seem to understand the situation. The House had no jurisdiction, and the committee could not amend its report as far as he could see.

HOW SILVER HAS HELPED JAPAN.

An Interesting Interview With Count Okuma.

HE MAY SUCCEED COUNT ITO.

As Minister of Finance He Soon Realized That the Gold Standard Was a Mistake.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

TOKIO, Japan, May 19.—That there will be a change in the Ministry soon seems to be generally accepted. Public feeling is intense against Premier Ito and Foreign Minister Mutsu, Japan's commissioners in the peace conference, because they yielded to European pressure and restored Manchuria to China. If Count Ito does not resign it is believed that he will be assassinated. His successor may be Count Okuma, who once held a high office in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and afterward became Minister of Finance. Because of his course in regard to the treaty revision and his liberal advanced ideas about foreign countries an attempt was made six years ago, when he wielded a powerful influence, to assassinate him. His left leg was blown off by the explosion of a bomb thrown into his carriage, but he managed to replace it with a cork one. He is 58 years old, but looks as vigorous as a man of 30. He has studied foreign methods, and has associated much with foreign representatives in Japan. To him is largely due the rapid advances Japan has made in recent years. Though he speaks little English he receives Americans in true American style, and through an interpreter talks freely. After a brief introductory conversation in response to a query, he said through his interpreter:

"The war between Japan and China was unexpected to Japan. It grew out of minor differences in Corea. Japan did not declare war for the purpose of acquiring territory, but to extend and develop civilization in the East. It was Japan's desire to bring about civilization in China and to open that country to trade, to cause its opening and development and to that extent add to the advancement of civilization. The foreign powers have misunderstood our object entirely."

"But," I said, "Japan demanded territory in response to China's appeal for peace."

"The demand for Manchuria, I think was a mistake. It is well that Japan does not acquire it. It would have been an expense and a perpetual menace to our peace. It was unfortunate that it was demanded. The complications resulting were more unfortunate. The enthusiasm of victory, perhaps, caused some of our representatives to act hastily. There is some disappointment among the people, but it is best for Japan that we abandon Manchuria. Russia's action has irritated Japan, and a future conflict between the two powers is, I fear, inevitable. But Japan is not prepared for that now. In this war with China Japan established herself before the world. She will now make use of part of the indemnity she receives from China in increasing her navy. She must have more naval vessels, and powerful ones, to maintain her rights and dignity. Some of the new vessels will be built at home, but as yet, Japan is not equipped for building the best class of naval vessels. Some are being built for us in England now. France has built for us, and I presume it would be good policy to have some built in America, as we understand that your builders claim to be able to construct the best class of war vessels. We want the best and are more than willing to give America a chance to compete.

The present Government has asserted too much power and authority. In its methods of dealing with the press, the mouthpiece of the people, it has been equal to Russia. That the people are opposed to the complete throttlings of the press has been demonstrated by the fact that the Lower House of Parliament has five times by unanimous vote passed bills to permit freedom of the press, but each time the Government has managed to have these bills throttled in the House of Peers. The people resent the indiscriminate suppression of the press for indulging in comments. It is a relic of the old Japan, but few vestiges of which remain. It will not long continue. The war has been an educator of the people and will result in Japan making more rapid strides than she has done in the past. It has caused us to realize that our policy of preventing the entry of foreign capital into Japan is a mistake. We are too poor to properly develop our own resources. We have not the capital to build and equip the factories we should have in Japan. Therefore we must admit foreign capital. We must change our laws which prohibit foreigners holding shares in Japanese corporations and prohibit foreigners owning property in Japan. We must adopt your American system, throw open our country, develop it, build up manufactories of all descriptions and control the trade of the East.

The appreciation of gold in Western countries gives us great advantages. After the Paris conference, about twenty-six years ago, I conceived the idea that gold should be made the standard of currency in Japan, and as Minister of Finance established it, but I soon realized my mistake and brought about the change."

"Then you think the silver standard the best for Japan?"

"Yes, decidedly, Japan is prospering. Your gold countries are in greater distress. Our financial system is in a measure based on that of France. Silver is our standard. The gold we have is a commodity. Our notes are issued by the Nippon Ginko, or Bank of Japan, redeemable in silver. We also have notes, issued by national banks as you have, based on a deposit of government bonds."

"Japan will not adopt a gold standard while adopting other things Western?" I asked.

"Japan," answered the Count, with a mildly indignant expression, "has only adopted those things Western best suited to her own conditions. She has sought to better herself. Where her own systems were best she has retained them. Under a silver standard Japan has prospered, and is prospering as perhaps no other nation in the world is. In the products of Japan, and in labor, our silver money is as valuable as ever. Its purchasing power is the same. Abroad our products, owing to the appreciation of gold, sell higher. We are, therefore, enabled to sell our products in the markets of the East cheaper than those of any gold standard country, and make a large profit. In time, with the present relative value of the money metals, Japan should become one of the great manufacturing nations of the world, and certainly control the markets of all the East."

"I think you will see a new ministry in Japan very soon, and with the change you will find Japan develop. In all things Japan will soon be thoroughly modern. Among the first things we want is direct cable communication with America, which I hope to see within a few years. America has been the good friend of Japan. You have taught us much, and we would be nearer you."

Judge Thurman in the City.

Judge R. S. Thurman, for many years an honored citizen of this State, late of the State of California, is in the city visiting relatives and old friends. The Judge is an old school Jeffersonian Democrat and thoroughly conversant with the leading questions of the day. He has carefully prepared a series of lectures, educational in their nature, the most celebrated of which are those delivered in California on "Taxation," "Centralization" and "Shall the American Principle Fall?" Mr. Thurman is a red-hot advocate of free coinage, and a fine speaker. He goes to Southwest Missouri in a few days to speak to the people, and a rare treat is in store for those who may hear him.

Dropped Dead at the Poor-House.

Robert Shaw, aged 57 years, an inmate of the City Poor-house, dropped dead at that institution at 10:40 a. m., Saturday. Shaw has been at the Poor-house for twelve years. He hailed from Joplin, Mo., and has a wife living at 1619 Union avenue.

TO ENLARGE THE ART SCHOOL

Prof. Ives Has Sent Out an Appeal to St. Louisans.

Prof. Halsey C. Ives feels happy over the successful scholastic term of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts just closed. The work of the students' paintings, drawings in black and white, sculpture, etc., which will be on exhibition in Memorial Hall, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings fully bears out the praise of the professor for the merits of the institution over which he presides. "Never in its history," said Prof. Ives, "have we had a faculty composed of teachers who work more harmoniously than our present staff. A unanimous spirit of purpose prevails, which is exceedingly gratifying to me. Our teachers are broad-minded men and women, whose superior education in all branches of knowledge brings them in contact with the best professional and business element, and it helps the school wonderfully in its development."

Prof. Ives again reiterated his purpose to make a home for art in St. Louis second to none in the country, and he says that he is beginning to see a glimmer of light for the realization of this purpose. To make the artisan an artist in his line by bringing him in contact with artistic creations in his particular field of labor is his aim. When that is done, says the professor, we will have a productive field from which artists, painters and sculptors spring.

To accomplish this eventually more room and means are needed. The school is now crowded to its utmost capacity, and all that can be done is to teach drawing, painting and modeling. Prof. Ives is anxious to do more than this.

In order to raise the necessary funds to go a little further than ever before he has sent out 1,000 circulars addressed to well-to-do St. Louisans, whose attention has probably never been called to the St. Louis School of Fine Arts. These have been asked to contribute $10 to this fund, of which they themselves are direct beneficiaries, as well as the school and its work. Those becoming members of the museum by this small payment are entitled with their families and non-resident guests, to visit the museum at all times when open to the public, and to attend all the lectures, receptions and special exhibits given under the auspices of the Board of Control. The end of the week will tell with just what success Prof. Ives' scheme will meet.

A Warrant Issued and Withdrawn.

L. C. Lohman, who runs the artist materials section in George Heffernan's Art Store, 409 Locust street, secured a warrant against Heffernan Saturday for unlawful detainer of goods. When Mr. Heffernan went to the Four Courts to give bond and explain his side of the case Attorney Johnson at once withdrew the warrant. Last Tuesday Lohman recorded a mortgage on his stock to his mother for $700. He had previously mortgaged it to Heffernan for $400, and kept him from recording it by signing an agreement not to remortgage. When Mr. Heffernan found he was deceived he locked Mr. Lohman out and took possession of his goods.

Conductor Johnson Dead.

Charles T. Johnson, the oldest conductor on the Wabash Railway, is dead. He passed away on his train near Centralia at 7 o'clock Friday morning.

Mr. Johnson was born in Newburyport, Mass., November 21, 1819. He came to St. Louis in 1837. He served during the Mexican war and came back to St. Louis. In 1855 he was made the first conductor on the old North Missouri Railroad. Mr. Johnson was a member of the old volunteer firemen of this city. He leaves a wife and one adopted son, who reside at 3324 Lucas avenue.

First Car of 1895 Wheat.

The first car of 1895 crop wheat arrived Saturday, consigned to J. W. Booth & Sons Commission Co. It was shipped by Davis & Co., of Coffeyville, Kan., and graded No. 2 red. The car was auctioned off on the call to Annan, Burg & Smith at the premium price of 85c.

BY GUILLOTINE, ON ALGERIAN SANDS.

Areski, the "Terror of the Kabyles," Suffers Death.

A FAMOUS MODERN BANDIT

Five of His Band Beheaded With Him—The Bold Arab Died Game—Dramatic Scene.

Areski is dead. This most famous of modern bandits, the man who was known in every inch of French Algeria and even along the boulevards of Paris as the "Terror of the Kabyles," and of whom an Arabic phrase was current, "The hand of Areski is sure, his blade is long and keen and it always finds the hearts of his enemies," has met his death on the guillotine within a fortnight, in the Algerian town of Azazga.

The execution was notable, five of the swarthy chief's savage lieutenants being decapitated immediately before him. No less a personage than Diebler, the famous headsman of France, touched the button that let the shining triangular blade fall on their necks. A circle of Algerian horsemen surrounded the guillotine. The brilliant blue of their uniforms stood out vividly against the gleaming white sands. Each bandit was led with measured steps towards the "widow," between two stout guards, habitated in long black frock coats, somber trousers and silk hats. At the platform upon which each victim was laid and which by a touch of mechanism slides slowly until it comes to a rest under the terrible knife, stood Diebler, "Monsieur de Paris," perfectly garbed in his long, black coat and glossy tile.

The horsemen had gathered at midnight. An hour later the machine of death was put in its place and the white blades carefully tried. An hour more and the necks of the condemned men were shaven that the knife might not be swerved, a custom as old as the guillotine. At 5, when no other tint appeared in the sky save a faint yellowish glow, the somber guards and the white-robed, Arabic-costumed, black-bearded, sullen prisoners walked into the circle. Seven minutes from the second the knife first fell and it was all over. Each bandit died in one and one-sixth seconds.

Not one weakened. The only complaint they made was that they were not permitted to see their families. They filed out of their prison chanting verses of the Koran and accompanied by the mufti or Mussulman priest, who repeated to them, one after another, consolatory passages from the Mohammedan Bible.

"Verily, repentance will be accepted with God," softly said the priest to each. "From those who do evil ignorantly and then repent speedily; unto them will God be turned, for God is knowing and wise."

In answer to this attempt at consolation Areski shouted back these Koran phrases: "When we march to war in the earth it shall be; no crime in you to shorten your prayers in case ye fear the infidels may attack you; for the infidels are your open enemy. God hath indeed promised every one paradise, but God hath preferred those who fight for the faith before those who sit still."

The gleaming knife fell on Armed-Ouel-Hadj-Karli, who was entitled to wear the turban conferred upon those who had kissed Mohammed's tomb. The next to die was Mohammed-Ouiddir, a giant, who laid himself upon the sliding platform without a tremor. The parricide, Mokran, followed, and succeeding him was Adoun, who, as he marched to where the knife was raised high in the air, said in French in a cheery tone and with a loud voice, to the stirring melody of an old caravan song, "Nous sommes tous mortels" (We are all mortal).

Last of all, Areski, the master, whose hands were stained with the blood of hundreds, was led forward, and a tremor ran through the immense crowd of natives behind the impassive cavalrymen, when they saw that the chieftain was dying like a savage. It was all his guard could do to hold him in leash. He kicked and spit and bit, and swerved his lithe, long body in a vain attempt, not to get away, for that was impossible, but to delay the moment when that fatal, blood-stained "widow's kiss" should be his.

But Diebler was not to be delayed. Not for an instant did Areski's struggling arrest the clockwork action. All he had time for as he was hurried across the gleaming white sand was to shout these sentences from the Koran: "But the infidels will not cease to doubt concerning it, until the hour of judgment cometh suddenly upon them." "Say I fly for refuge unto the Lord of the daybreak, that He may deliver me from the mischief of those things which he hath created, and from the mischief of the night, when it cometh on."

And so the knife fell, closing the series of tragedies the Algerian bandits had caused for three years. It had taken 800 French and native troops to drive from their mountain fastnesses and exterminate the band. Of the forty that Areski headed, twenty-four were killed in the woodland conflicts. The others were carried before the Algerian Court of Assize. Ten were condemned on Feb. 4 to death, four being pardoned.

The Faculty of Medicine of Algeria claimed the bodies and permission was granted. But the Kabyle women had taken possession of them, and carried them under a great tree and were sewing on the heads to the trunks. The doctors started back at this spectacle and wondered what it meant—these savage mountain women, two kneeling at the side of a corpse and performing this ghastly task. Then the doctors recalled an old Mohammedan tradition that Azrael, the Angel of Death, carries off the dead to Paradise by the hair of their heads, grasping that long tuft of hair that every true Mussulman lets grow on the summit of his cranium, and which he calls the 'Mohammed.'"

Six years ago Areski, till then known only as a tribesman of little importance in the Algerian uplands, stole another man's wife and cattle, first killing the husband. The latter's relatives appealed to the French authorities. The murderer was made prisoner, and, after a fair trial, was sentenced to penal servitude for life in the miasmic regions of French Guiana. Inside of a year he escaped. He worked his way back to Algeria, determined, in accordance with ancient custom, to kill every man who had testified against him, and all of that man's relatives. He gathered about him thirty-nine like desperadoes and devil-may-cares, and established a basis of supplies in the uplands.

His men he spurred on by hope of plunder, for whenever an old enemy of Areski was made to bite the dust the deceased's wife and property went to the band. As the bandit king's murder was wholesale, the pickings, as they might be called, were extensive. In a twelvemonth, he killed over 350 people. On one occasion he led his band to a village wherein lay several of his enemies who were on his "little list." He deployed his men so that at least one gun was trained upon every street. The villagers being reduced to a state of desuetude, Areski sedately, murdered one by one, the people he had in view, burning their houses and destroying their goods.

He managed to wipe every enemy and every relative of an enemy off the face of the earth. The life had fascinated him and he became a bandit merely for the sake of plunder and excitement. No quarter of Algeria save the French cities was safe. Yet, curiously enough, his despoiling was confined entirely to natives. He never molested a foreigner. In fact, so far as foreign interests were concerned, he was an excellent police official, for there are instances when he saved the lives and property of Frenchmen and Englishmen against the attacks and depredations of other savage bands.

A traveling Englishman had been met on the road by brigands and his watch, valuables and baggage stolen. The French officials were totally at sea. He wrote to Areski. It was curious that while Areski could never be found by the authorities, a letter addressed "Areski, Bandit, Algeria," would always reach him. In this case, a week after the letter was sent him, a messenger arrived at the Englishman's quarters, left some packages and disappeared like a ghost. In the packages were found the traveler's watch, his jewelry, the most of his baggage and the greater part of his money.

ARESKI

NEGROES BARRED.

Chief Swingley Will Have No Colored Firemen in the Department.

"Under no circumstances would I employ a colored man on the Fire Department."

This was the positive announcement made by Fire Chief Swingley to a Post-Dispatch reporter Saturday morning when the question was asked point blank.

For some time past the negroes have had their eye on the new engine house at Louisiana and Park avenue. They hoped to secure the establishment of a negro fire company there when the structure is completed and manned, but Chief Swingley's positive declaration that no negroes need apply puts an end to all hopes for colored men who worked to secure Republican victory at the last municipal election.

Insurance men are after Chief Swingley hammer and tongs, and are severely criticising him for the alleged mismanagement of several fires within the past few days. They are demanding better fire protection, and threaten to raise insurance rates if they don't get it.

MARMADUKE'S REMAINS.

To Be Removed to the Family Burial Ground Near Marshall.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

SEDALIA, Mo., June 8.—Col. Leslie Marmaduke of Sweet Springs, Mo., yesterday stated to your correspondent that the remains of his brother, the late Gen. John S. Marmaduke, ex-Governor of Missouri, would in a short time be removed from their resting place at Jefferson City to the family burial ground near Marshall in Saline County. A monument befitting his career will be erected.

John S. Marmaduke was born in Saline County, Mo. As a boy he was graduated with high honors from West Point Military Academy and entered what is now known as the old service. When the civil war broke out, Lieut. Marmaduke offered his services to the Confederacy. He was so unfortunate as to be at Boonville, June 17, 1861. Immediately after that affair, he applied to the authorities of Richmond, Va., and was transferred to the regular confederate service. By a strange coincidence the regiment commanded by him and the Union troops commanded by Col. Van Horn, editor of the Kansas City Journal, fired the first shots of the initial conflict at Shiloh. After many vicissitudes—in which he had killed in duel Gen. Marsh Walker of Arkansas—Gen. Marmaduke returned to Missouri. By and by Gen. Marmaduke became Governor of Missouri, and served his State faithfully and well.

A FEARFUL TALE OF CRIME.

Murder, Robbery and Arson in the Ditch Case at Hillsboro.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

HILLSBORO, Mo., June 8.—A special term of the Circuit Court will convene here next Monday to try the three men now in jail indicted for the murder of Price Ditch of Festus on the night of November 25, 1894. Ditch was a saloonkeeper, and on that night he was murdered and robbed, and the house burned, with the body of the victim. Milton and Basil Sweet and Noah Lavarar are under indictment for the crime, on evidence furnished by two persons who claim to have been accomplices.

HEAVY HARDWARE AND IRON.

St. Louis Leads All Markets in This Trade.

Iron is essential to almost every enterprise and its sale and handling is a leading industry. It is a line in which St. Louis stands ahead of any other market in the United States in volume of business and in diversity and assortment of stock no market in the entire world can even approach us.

The stocks carried here include the entire supply of steel and iron of all sorts manufactured in rolling mills and a large assortment of wagon, carriage, plowmakers and farriers' iron and woodware, all the range of heavy hardware, minor railway supplies, vises, anvils, hammers, forges, wedges, bolts, nuts, spikes, rivets and nails.

Every house has a distinctive trade. One supplies the materials for boilers and in connection therewith plumbers' goods and waterworks supplies, including cast and wrought iron pipe, etc.

Others devote a large part of their attention to supplying the needs of manufacturers of carriages, wagons and plows in everything from the necessary hardware to the wheels, spokes, carriage trimmings and even paint. They also supply the hardware houses with bar iron and steel, hoop-iron, plow steel, etc.

Still others aim to supply in their range of trade corrugated and other forms of roofing sheets and everything in the shape of a metal sheet or plate.

One company operates its own rolling mill and the others have alliances formed with mills, which practically gives them control of their output.

There are eight large houses in this city devoting their attention to the handling of heavy hardware and iron. Their combined annual sales will reach in the neighborhood of $6,500,000. They are all old-established houses having the reputation of being abundantly solvent. There have been fewer failures in this line than in any other line of trade. In thirty-five years it is said that not a single iron firm has made a failure in this city. The iron business is not a woman's work, nor is it in any respect fanciful, as it requires the energies and brains of bright, intelligent men to carry it on. It is an axiom in the local trade that no matter what the character or shape there will always be found a sale for iron if kept long enough.

Notwithstanding the enormous amount of the annual sales as heretofore given, they do not represent the volume of business that would be transacted under conditions which ordinarily prevail. Values are now ruling much lower than usual. At present iron is at $1.10 card, whereas under different conditions the price has ruled from $1.60 to $1.75 card.

St. Louis has at least two iron specialties in which she is ahead of every competing market. One is farriers' supplies of all kinds and the other wagon and carriage-makers' materials. The great western and southern countries using, as they do, more horses and vehicles than any section in the United States, create a demand for these goods, which is supplied almost exclusively by St. Louis iron merchants.

In addition to these specialties St. Louis has had her share of supplying the iron for every leading enterprise in the great Western and Southern country, including the construction of the great Union and Southern Pacific Railway systems.

The territory covered by St. Louis heavy hardware and iron firms is extensive. It includes trade from stores in every Southern and Western State, in the Northwest as far as the Dakotas, and in all of the Pacific Coast States. Several of the local houses do a heavy business in Mexico and orders are not infrequent from Canada, Guatemala and Cuba. There is also a heavy business transacted by local houses in shipments direct from sources of supply—the rolling mills—to customers in territory which could not be otherwise touched by reason of the natural higher rates of freight from St. Louis to the points to which reference is made.

A Post-Dispatch reporter, as a verification of the preceding facts, called on the trade and talked with the heads of some of the leading firms.

Robert E. Brier, President Beck & Corbett Iron Co., said: "St. Louis is the heaviest hardwood market in the United States, both for hardwood lumber and wagon materials. Our location in the center of the hardwood district makes us the lowest-priced market in this line, which is an essential proportion in the iron and heavy hardware business. The assortment of heavy hardware handled by St. Louis merchants is the most complete of any in the United States, or, for that matter, in Europe either, as far as I have observed in my travels. Our local houses are very enterprising, some of them owning and operating large manufacturing plants, the output of which is not included in their estimates of sales. I refer to plants in which various specialties are manufactured. Nearly all of the local houses conduct their business on a cash basis in the purchase of supplies, and the general reputation of our city for solidity is well sustained through them. Some of them have been in business for upwards of half a century, and I have never known one of them to fail."

Charles Campbell of the Campbell Iron Co. said: "St. Louis is one of the heaviest, if not the heaviest, iron and heavy hardware markets in the United States. Our local firms cover a vast territory, largely because of the geographical location of our city, and because prices are lower here than elsewhere. We cover thoroughly the entire South, Southwest and West, and to a reasonable extent the East. Our leading specialties are wagon makers' and finishers' supplies, in which lines St. Louis undoubtedly leads the entire country."

Chas. R. Blake, President Sligo Iron Store Co., said: "The importance of St. Louis as a distributing center for iron and steel is increasing every year. Our firm has enjoyed an uninterrupted business career of nearly sixty (60) years, and is the oldest house in our line west of the Mississippi River, and in all these years the channels of trade have been broadening and deepening, until now the river, which was once the only channel and the greatest of them all, is one of the smallest. Long since we added to our line of iron and steel that of heavy hardware and carraige and wagon wood, and later still, carraige mountings and trimmings, until now the manufacturer of carriages and wagons can obtain in St. Louis every article which enters into the construction and finish of a vehicle, and is no longer dependent on the East, as was formerly the case. As compared with those of other cities, the iron houses of St. Louis enjoy an enviable reputation both in regard to lines of stock carried and methods of doing business, and the territory they cover is as large, if not larger, than that covered by any other city. We sell goods as far East as Western Pennsylvania and Virginia, and as far west as the Pacific coast. From this, it will readily appear, how great are the possibilities of St. Louis in spite of the fact that she is handicapped by freight discriminations of the most arbitrary and exasperating character. One reason which tends to increase the size of our business territory is the fullness and completeness of the line of goods carried by our houses; customers appreciate the fact that they can obtain promptly all the goods of which they stand in need of one house at one time, and, consequently, favor that city with their trade where they can obtain this advantage. This condition of affairs is improving every year, as the St. Louis houses become better known, and it is only reasonable to believe that, aided by the railroads, St. Louis can largely increase her territory, especially in the direction of the Southeast."

E. E. Souther, President E. E. Souther Iron Co. said: "The distinctive methods of the jobbing fraternity in the iron trade at this point are apparent when it is observed that the element of speculation is almost entirely absent in their dealings. Every successful jobber gathers into his clientage certain machinists, blacksmiths and other iron workers, besides a list of dealers that are retailers of this merchandise at interior towns. To keep these buyers supplied with their requirements means the carrying in stock of a variety of shapes, sizes and qualities of iron and steel ready at all times for immediate shipment, but sudden changes or variable prices is death to the profitable conduct of business, because the user of these materials is so constantly bound by contracts for finished work. The jobber then cannot and should not attempt to unload high-priced stocks on his customer, but should at all times be ready to furnish him at low rates as the market will justify. He cannot afford to impoverish his own customer nor can he decline to supply his regular known wants. This results usually in a good tone to the business, cuts out the practice common in some other trades of operating in speculative purchases and sales, and demonstrates the legitimate field of the jobber who can never be displaced under these conditions, and whose margin of profit under close management cannot be greatly disturbed."

VANDERBILT'S DIVORCE.

Brought About by Himself With Chivalrous Deliberation.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copywrighted 1895 by Press Pub. Co.)

PARIS, June 8.—I have the authority of Mr. Wm. K. Vanderbilt's friends for stating that the connection with a certain person in Paris which formed the occasion for his wife's divorce suit and because of which Judge Barrett gave her a decree with the husband's consent has been definitely and finally terminated by Mr. Vanderbilt himself, in fact, I am informed that this separation was insisted upon by Mr. Vanderbilt immediately after the decree was granted, and the inference is freely drawn by those cognizant of the facts that the connection was originally formed with the deliberate intention of giving ground for divorce for the reason that the marriage relation for sufficient reasons had become unbearable and that the Paris connection was, therefore, peremptorily ended as soon as this purpose was accomplished. Facts stated in Mr. Vanderbilt's behalf would prove conclusively that not only was he forced to the action which thus ended in the divorce, but in legally making himself the guilty party he acted with really chivalrous consideration. It is proper to add that statements published in the Post-Dispatch immediately after the decree was granted as to the circumstances preceding it were made on the authority of Mrs. Vanderbilt.

NOW THE LADIES MUST GO.

Pastime Club Members Don't Want the Female Contingent.

And now comes the Pastime Athletic Club and declares that the women must go, even if they do wear bloomers. There are now 100 lady members in the West End athletic club and they monopolize the gymnasium three afternoons in the week, besides getting an occasional show at the grounds at Cabanne. Now the men don't like this. They are not allowed about the place while the young ladies in bloomers are disporting themselves on the parallel bars or turning poles. The men never did go to the place on Mondays, Wednesdays and Friday afternoons, but as soon as they were ordered away they found that those were just the days they wanted to train. And so the matter stands. As for the women they are never, never going to be put out. So there you are and the poor Pastime Club is once more ripped up the back.

FEET LIKE A POLICEMAN.

Queer Effect of Over-Stimulation of a Traveling Salesman.

Edward Hager, a traveler for the Hopkins Weller Drug Company, became imbued with liquor and the idea that he was an officer, and arrested Edward L. Priest and James M. Laughlin for lounging on Broadway and Pine street. Judge Peabody let Hager off with a lecture Saturday.

Justice at Hillsboro.

HILLSBORO, Mo., June 8.—The case of L. A. McGinnis of St. Louis vs. Chief Harrigan et al. for damages is set for the 12th inst., but it is presumed there will be another continuance. The management of these St. Louis cases cannot be understood by a layman. The cases against Michael Foerstel, ex-Treasurer, are regularly docketed, and as regularly marked "continued by agreement," and it looks as if they are never to be tried. The McGinnis case was tried once, but the jury failed to agree.

Weekly Mortuary Report.

The mortuary report for the week ending June 8 is as follows: Deaths from all causes, 211, 39 more than the previous week; same week last year, 126; rate, 19.5 per 1,000 estimated population of 560,000. Deaths from zymotic diseases, 48; constitutional, 34; local, 91; developmental, 27; by violence, 11; diarrhoeal diseases, 24; pulmonary, 12; bronchitis, 11; pneumonia, 8; Bright's disease, 8; by suicide, 3; homicide, 4; accident, 4; under 1 year, 77; under 5 years, 98; 60 years and over, 34; in public institutions, 31; inquests, 20. Births reported 196.

Police Bungle Their Case.

The police made a bungle of their Police Court cases against the opium smokers captured in a raid a week ago. They had the opium examined by the city chemist, and that worthy mixed up the receptacles so badly that nothing could be identified. When Judge Peabody saw the bungle he discharged the keeper under trial and continued the other cases. The cases against the smokers were nolle prossed.

Became Insane in the Night.

A sober, industrious man, in perfect health and good spirits, John O. Nasland went to bed Friday night at 802 South Eighth street. At 1 o'clock frightful screams came from his room. He was violently insane. Five men were required to hold him. The timely arrival of the police prevented his doing violence to his wife and 2-year-old child. Nasland's attack is only temporary. He works at the new Union Station Hotel.

Postmaster Wilson's Missouri Trip.

Washington dispatches stating that Postmaster-General Wilson's trip to Missouri to speak at Fayette College commencement was only incident to a request from Gov. Francis that he be sent here to give goldbug orations are denied by Gov. Francis in toto. "I never asked the President to send a member of the Cabinet to Missouri to make a speech on the financial question," said Mr. Francis, "and I never consulted Mr. Wilson in regard to it."

INVESTIGATION DIRECTED.

State Board Will Inquire Into United Elevator Affairs.

OFFICERS LOOSEN A LITTLE.

Business of the Elevator the Past Three Years Aggregated in a Partial Statement Given Out.

When the Post-Dispatch spread broadcast the exclusive news yesterday that Gov. Stone had taken a hand in the St. Louis United Elevator Company's troubles by ordering the Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners to make a thorough investigation of the shortage in that company's elevators, it was a sensation which made the company's officials lose some of their coolness and talk more freely.

During all the troublous times of the St. Louis United Elevator Company the past two weeks the officials of that corporation have sternly refused to give out a statement of figures from their books to explain the shortage in cash, or rather to explain why there is no cash on hand, and the company is compelled to borrow $275,000 to tide over its difficulties. But the Post-Dispatch is enabled to give the first authentic statement from the company's books that, so far, comes to the public. It was furnished by an official of the company and, therefore, is presumed to be correct in so far as estimates made by the officials of the company can be correct. The statement deals exclusively with wheat handled for the last three years, and is as follows:

Wheat handled, 20,000,000 bushels at ¾c first day's storage	$150,000
Carrying charges on an average of 4,000,000 bushels at ⅝c per month	900,000
Gross earnings	$1,050,000
Running expenses $1,000 a day for 3 years	$1,080,000
Loss	$30,000
Paid for elevator	$139,000
Four dividends of 2½ per cent on capital stock of $2,680,000	$268,000
Paid principal on bonds	60,000
Net loss	$497,000

In this statement all the expenses are charged up against wheat. But the company handled large quantities of corn and oats, and on that grain the profits were sufficient to cover entirely the loss as figured against wheat. So, the company broke even when it paid its last dividend in December, 1894. Therefore, it is claimed, if the present shortage in wheat, which is the accumulation of six years, had not developed at this critical time the company would simply have passed its dividend anyway, as it did in May, but would not have been compelled to borrow $275,000. In striking the December dividend the company used all its surplus money, accumulated profits of several preceding months, but that was done before the present shortage in wheat was ever dreamed of. Then, when the shortage in wheat became known, and money was needed for running expenses for the next two months, with no money in the treasury, the company was forced to borrow $275,000 from the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

But there still remains a mystery behind the shortage that demands $275,000 to cover it. On the basis that the shortage in wheat is 250,000 bushels, that would mean $200,000, the price of wheat being placed at 80 cents per bushel. The remaining $75,000 is to defray the running expenses of the elevators for the next two months, or until the new crop of wheat begins to come in. This theory would explain the need of $275,000.

The officials of the company persistently deny that the shortage in wheat is more than 150,000 bushels. By that denial, therefore, these officials tumble themselves into the necessity of explaining why they had to borrow as large a sum as $275,000. One hundred and fifty thousand bushels of wheat shortage would mean a money value of only $120,000. Allowing $75,000 needed for running expenses to the middle of July, this leaves $80,000 of the loan for which no explanation is given.

The question is: "Why did the company have to borrow any money at all?" Old elevator men say that if the company's business had been properly managed there would have been plenty of funds to meet the shortage, and there would have been no necessity for borrowing a single dollar. The secret of the whole matter is that the officials of the company used bad judgment and handled a large amount of grain for which they did not receive a single copper for shortage. Here is the whole thing in a nutshell contained in a frank admission made by Secretary Slack, of the company, in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"Why, a large amount of the wheat we have handled we sold for the same price we paid for it," said Mr. Slack, "and therefore we received no storage whatever on it. Again, instead of receiving 1 cent for the first day's storage we did not get over ½ cent for a large amount of wheat. On an average the first day's storage was only ¾ cent. Therefore, the company has not made the money that many outsiders claim it has made."

"That's exactly what the trouble is," said a stockholder, when told that Secretary Slack had admitted that large amounts of wheat had been handled on which the company did not get any storage. "That statement is a frank admission that the officials of the company have shown poor judgment, and that the business has been mismanaged. Why, to buy wheat for a certain price and sell it again at the same price, and thereby get no storage, is the worst sort of mismanagement. Any fool could do that."

When any experienced grain man is asked, "what proportion of the wheat that comes to St. Louis is handled by the United Elevators?" the invariable reply, on first blush, is: "Why, the United surely handles two-thirds or three-fourths of all the wheat that is handled in this city."

Inspector O'Shea, when asked about the matter to-day, said:

"Yes, I have received an order from the Railway and Warehouse Commissioners of Missouri to weigh up all the grain in the five elevators on this side of the river that belongs to the St. Louis United Elevator Company. When the work is completed my report will be made public.

"Some criticism of this office has been made, I understand, by persons who believe that I should have had the wheat weighed up in each elevator at least once a year. The question has been often asked, 'Why has the grain inspector not weighed up this wheat long ago?'

"But the answer is simple. I have no authority to weigh up the wheat in the elevators, unless I receive an order to do so from the Railway and Warehouse Commissioners, under whose jurisdiction my office is placed. My duty is simply to see that the grain that goes in and comes out of the elevators properly weighed, and that the grades are reported correctly, and that there is no mixing of grades, etc. I have no authority to weigh up all the wheat found in an elevator, except when I receive special instructions as in this case.

A Post-Dispatch man, in looking up the records in Secretary Morgan's office at the Merchants' Exchange, found the following figures:

	Bushels.
Wheat handled in St. Louis in 1892	27,483,855
Wheat handled in St. Louis in 1893	14,642,999
Wheat handled in St. Louis in 1894	10,003,242
Wheat handled up to June 1, 1895	1,477,236
Total	53,607,332

Out of the 53,000,000 bushels the United Elevator Co., by its own statement, has handled a little over 20,000,000 bushels.

But some of the stockholders of the United Elevator Co. are surprised at the authentic statement that the company has handled only 20,000,000 bushels of wheat in three years.

"I was certain almost that the company had handled at least 30,000,000 bushels of wheat in three years," said the stockholder. "Why, 20,000,000 bushels in three years would mean an average of only a little over 500,000 bushels of wheat handled per month, and I know the company was carrying 6,000,000 bushels last December. I can't understand how a statement could be made from the books showing only 20,000,000 bushels of wheat handled in three years."

Gov. Stone, after hearing the stories of corruption and gross mismanagement of what has been termed the "elevator ring," has decided to have the affairs of the St. Louis United Elevator Co. sifted to the bottom, so far as the law gives him the power to do so. He believes that in justice to the vast grain trade of St. Louis a thorough investigation of the company's affairs is eminently proper at this time.

In accordance with the Governor's order the Board of Railway and Warehouse Commissioners of Missouri has issued instructions to State Grain Inspector O'Shea to weigh up all the grain in the elevators of the United Elevator Co. that are on this side of the river. The company has five large elevators on this side. The six other elevators are on the East Side, and, therefore, come under the jurisdiction of the Warehouse Commissioners of the State of Illinois.

As predicted in the 6 o'clock edition of Friday's Post-Dispatch the St. Louis United Elevator Co. Saturday morning filed a second mortgage against its property for $275,000 in favor of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. The mortgage was detailed on 500 pages of closely typewritten legal cap and caused quite a stir in the Recorder's office, an order accompanying it to have it copied on the record before 6 o'clock p. m.

Isaac H. Lionberger is named as party of the second part, and it is stipulated that the mortgage run 90 days from June 4, when the first installment of the money was handed over.

There was a joint conference of directors of the Elevator company and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. in the office of Messrs. Niemann & Gehner, title examiners, in the Wainwright Building Saturday morning before the filing of the mortgage. Several small changes were made in the document, and it was also agreed that the Trust company pay all back taxes, arrears in fire insurance, and other small claims against the property mortgaged, the same to be added to the principal and paid at the expiration of the said mortgage.

Then President Web M. Samuel of the Elevator company drew a promissory note for $275,000, which was signed by the directors and accepted by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and signed by its President, Julius S. Walsh. Fred K. Wierting, the notary public, tied the deal by swearing the interested parties to the law laid down in the document.

The property mortgaged for the second time is valued at $300,000, and consists almost exclusively of real estate situated in various parts of the city. The principal piece of property is the grain elevator itself, fronting 195 feet on the levee, between Biddle and Lewis streets, valued at $100,000.

It is reported that the closing of the second mortgage will result in the payment of the bonds issued under the first mortgage, which matured Dec. 1, and have not yet been paid. The bonds were originally issued in July, 1881, William E. Burr, the ex-Cashier of the St. Louis National Bank, being the trustee. There were 175 bonds in all, valued at $1,000 each, and were issued at 6 per cent interest. Ninety-five of these bonds were paid off, leaving eighty, which have matured and upon which interest is due since 1889.

It is thought that the filing of the second mortgage for $275,000 will precipitate an early meeting of the stockholders of the company. According to the by-laws of the company the directors must give sixty days notice of a meeting of stockholders, and it has been considered that the next meeting of the stockholders would be the regular annual meeting in July. But, it appears, that the feeling is growing among the stockholders that they should hold a meeting before July and look into the affairs of the company.

Some lively scenes may enliven the next meeting of the Board of Directors, which is set for Monday afternoon.

The Duke of Hamilton's Death Not Caused by Lung Trouble.

INTENSE PAIN AND SUICIDE.

The Prince of Wales Is Melancholy Because He Thinks He Also Will Have a Tragic End.

Special to The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The "Marquise de Fontenoy" in a local paper gives some history about the Prince of Wales, in substance as follows:

Although the Prince of Wales saw little of the late Duke of Hamilton during the last ten years of the latter's life and was to all intents and purposes estranged from his friend and boon companion, yet he is greatly perturbed by the death of Scotland's Premier Peer and shows signs of falling once more into that species of melancholia and depression which followed for a considerable time the demise of his eldest son, the Duke of Clarence, causing him to keep on harping in conversation on the probability of his own death at an early date.

The reason for the revival of this state of mind is attributed to the circumstances of the Duke's death, which now turns out to have been not inflammation of the lungs, as stated, but to a pistol shot, self-inflicted, in a moment of intense physical agony, caused by gout, coupled with mental depression, resulting from the effects of the banting system carried to excess.

Now, the Duke is the third of a memorable party of four who has died a violent death, and the survivor is no other than the British heir apparent. A few months before the young Prince Imperial of France started for South Africa, whence he never returned, he paid a visit of five days to the Duke of Hamilton, in Scotland, his fellow guests being Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria and the Prince of Wales. The most memorable event of that visit was a meeting of the Duke of Hamilton and the three Princes with an old crone who had been evicted from her hovel by the Duke's father for non-payment of rent. The Duke Rudolph suggested that they should have their fortunes told. To all four she said they would die a violent death, and that, too, within a given period, giving a number of details both in regard to the past and the future of the party. They all affected to laugh away the predictions. But a gloom settled on each of them, the party breaking up the following day, and all four traveled South with faces, manner and conversation that showed that there was a weight on their minds.

The tragic death of the Prince Imperial of France and Prince Rudolph are well known. The news that the Duke of Hamilton has also met a violent death greatly depressed the Prince of Wales. This is the first time that the story of the Hamilton palace, or rather the meeting with the hag, has ever been described in print. It is only known to a few of the Prince's intimate friends and associates, none of whom has ever shown any disposition to talk about it, for in spite of being in every sense of the word fin de siecle, the Prince of Wales is very superstitious, far more so than people have any idea of. It is the existence of superstitions of this kind which renders it so difficult for King Leopold of Belgium to find a husband for his daughter Clementine, in spite of the immense dowry she will receive. For there is a conviction, a superstition, throughout Europe that the reigning house in Belgium is blighted with a curse which affects all those who ally themselves thereto.

REVIVAL IN TRADE.

Dun's Review Sends Out Remarkably Encouraging Reports.

NEW YORK, June 8.—When a conservative publication like Dun's Review uses language such as is given below, it is significant of the improved condition of business. The following is from the issue of to-day:

"The tide of business is rising, even as it was falling just two years ago, with surprising rapidity. The gain has gone so far and so fast in some branches that the conservatives fear it may not be maintained. But the period of dullness which comes over each market after an unusual rise brings as yet nothing like a corresponding decline. Industries gain much, halt or fall back a little, and then gain once more. The demand for consumption steadily increases as the employment and wages of the people increase. Demand for money expands, one bank reporting 29 per cent larger discounts for the country and another 28 per cent more commercial loans than a year ago. All but two report some gain. One serious question remains, whether the crops will be full enough to sustain a large business, but the worst reports to-day are better by far than the estimates recently current."

TO RECEIVE THE ST. LOUIS.

Preparations Being Made for the Liner's Arrival.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A special cable from London to the Mail and Express says:

Everything is ready to receive the new American liner St. Louis, and expectation is on tiptoe about the famous ocean greyhound built in the United States. The preparations are extensive, and the town of Southampton bids fair to excel herself in greeting the new steamer. All England is interested to see her. Ambassador Bayard will be on hand to welcome the St. Louis on behalf of the United States and Mr. Cramp will deliver an address at the ceremonies which will mark her arrival. One of the distinguished honors which will be extended to the St. Louis will be the privilege of opening the new dry dock at Southampton, which will be completed and ready for use about the middle of August. To permit her to do this she will skip a trip and remain here until the dry dock is opened.

Harsh Methods in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Copies of a proclamation by the Governor of Baracoa, Cuba, that have been received here are being referred to by Cuban sympathizers as an evidence of the harsh military methods that the authorities have felt called upon to adopt. This proclamation, by Thomas Bottgar, as Colonel commanding, notifies the public that thereafter all persons are prohibited from entering or leaving the town after 6 o'clock at night, and before 6 in the morning. Any one offending against the prohibition is to be arrested and brought before the commander.

FLOWER DAY AT THE JAIL.

Memory of Jennie Cassidy Lends a Little Brightness to Prisoners.

The delightful odor of flowers pervaded the city jail yesterday afternoon. Sunbeams penetrated dark and cheerless corners, and sympathizing women smiled and chatted with the prisoners. The sweetly simple strains of religious songs from an organ were wafted through all the cells recalling to some criminals their boyhood days and nursing in the hearts of others the seed of repentance, which from the lips of the most eloquent evangelist would have fallen on barren soil.

The occasion was the Annual Devotional exercise of the W. C. T. U., in honor of Miss Jennie Cassidy, the first to institute flower work in prisons. Every year Miss Cassidy's birthday, June 9, is celebrated in this manner. This year the exercises were held a day earlier, because Miss Cassidy's birthday fell on Sunday.

Large quantities of bleeding hearts and daisies were brought into the jail and given in bunches to all the prisoners. Attached to each bunch was a verse from the Bible.

At 2:30 p. m. the exercises were opened with gospel songs. The Misses Stokes then sang two duets. After this Mrs. Mary L. Clardy conducted devotional exercises. Reverend Dr. Harris, assistant pastor of the Union M. E. Church, gave a short talk on religion. He was followed by Miss A. A. Robbins, President of the W. C. T. U. in St. Louis, who stated the object of the exercises. Then came the distribution of flowers. All the women present divided into pairs and went to the different cells with bunches of flowers.

About sixty-five members of the W. C. T. U. were in attendance and the distribution itself would have taken but a short time had not many unfortunates as they received bouquets implored the giver to linger and talk of the future life.

Two little girls were sent to the cell of Maud Lewis, the murderess of Senator Peter R. Morrissey, with a bunch of flowers. The woman was crouched down in a dark corner when they appeared at the door of her cell. She got up and walked eagerly toward them. Tears were in her eyes as she received the bunch with softly lisped words of comfort from each little one. She picked at a withered daisy, and in doing so noticed a small slip with a verse from the Bible on it. The verse read: "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear."—[1 John, 4, 18.

Something in the thought expressed affected the woman forcibly, for she prostrated herself on the floor of her cell and wept.

Duestrow's bunch of flowers was given him by a young girl who falteringly expressed the hope that he was guarding the welfare of his soul. He laughed grimly and remarked, as he walked away, that he would watch his body first and then care for his soul.

James Fitzgerald, who has been convicted of the murder of Annie Naessens, is one of the quietest prisoners in jail. He keeps away from the rest and has never been known to express an opinion on any subject. When a bouquet was presented to him the giver did not know that he had been convicted of murder. "I've been coming in contact with murderers during my whole trip here," she said, "and now I want to talk to some one less ferocious. I know that you have never committed a murder, because you have such honest features."

"You're the first one that has ever said so," replied Fitzgerald, bitterly. "Judge, jury, prisoners and everybody believe me guilty, and yet I was only convicted on slight circumstantial evidence. Yes, I know I'm going to Heaven when I die. My God! I'm suffering the pangs of hell now."

The warm sympathy which was extended Fitzgerald prompted him to talk freely. "I am all alone here. Nobody in this jail is friendly to me, because I don't care to associate with them and laugh at their coarse remarks. I kill time by studying and trying to improve my mind. Last night while feeling more gloomy than usual I composed a few lines of poetry." After considerable persuasion Fitzgerald produced the following, which he had neatly written on a sheet of foolscap:

> Innocence chained to a felon's cell
> Suffering the pangs of the pits of hell,
> No hope;
> Doomed to die at the time of the year
> When flowers bloom and peace is near,
> I grope.

This was all he had written. After showing the poetry Fitzgerald retreated to his accustomed dark corner and resumed his brooding.

The distribution continued until late in the afternoon.

HER GREAT FORTUNE.

A Woman Saved From Life-Long Misery and Made Happy and Useful.

A woman confined to the house several years with a chronic female derangement had finally given up all hope of being cured. She had tried physician after physician and remedy after remedy without any permanent improvement. Her treatment had cost her husband, who was a poor man, hundreds of dollars. They had been obliged to deny themselves many comforts of life in order to get money enough to pay the physicians. Yet, in spite of all economy, there was a small mortgage on their property because of the expense her illness had brought upon them. The woman had become weak, nervous and wretched, scarcely able to keep out of her bed. Her children were growing up neglected and ragged, because of the want of a mother's care. Her husband was becoming discouraged and broken down with overwork. Picking up the paper one day she happened to read an item which contained the news that Dr. Hartman would treat such cases free of charge by letter. She immediately wrote the doctor, describing her case and giving him all her symptoms. She soon received a letter telling her exactly what to do and what medicines and appliances to get. She began the treatment (the principal remedy being Pe-ru-na) at once, and in a few weeks was well and strong again, able to do her own work.

This offer of free home treatment to women is still open to all who may need the services of this eminent physician. All letters applying for treatment will be promptly answered and be held strictly confidential. No cures published except by the express wish of the patient. A medical pamphlet by Dr. Hartman devoted to female diseases sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

For free book on cancer address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

SECOND ONLY TO COTTON.

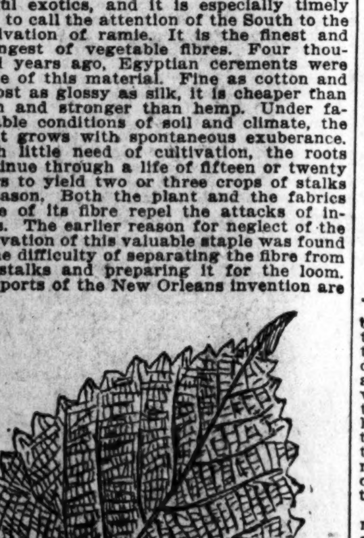
A Recent Invention Cheapens Its Fabrication—Its Many Uses and Advantages.

The agitation of the subject of cultivation of ramie in the Southern States has received a new impetus from the invention, by a New Orleans man, of a decorticating machine, which promises to revolutionize the methods of preparing the fibre of this plant for use in the manufacture of cloth as radically as the methods of separating cotton fibre were revolutionized by Whitney's great invention of the cotton gin in ante-bellum days. It is reported that practical tests of the new machine, the invention of S. B. Allison, have already demonstrated its effectiveness, and the New Orleans papers, as well as many other publications, are paying great attention to all current developments in the case.

This is especially interesting news for St. Louis, aside from the fact that this city is necessarily and always interested in everything which affects the welfare of the Southern States, where so much of its own trade territory lies. One of the most constant and untiring advocates of the cultivation of the ramie plant in this country has been Prof. S. Waterhouse of Washington University of this city. Since 1873 Prof. Waterhouse has interested himself in this subject, and has never lost an opportunity to impress upon the mind of Southern planters the great and almost incalculable advantages to be derived from ramie cultivation. Consequently, a Sunday Post-Dispatch reporter was sent to Prof. Waterhouse during the week just closed for detailed particulars as to this plant, its growth and manufacture, and what it would mean for those sections of this country the climate of which makes ramie cultivation practicable.

TOP OF WHITE RAMIE, SHOWING SEEDS.

"The Gulf States," said Prof. Waterhouse, "can broaden their agriculture not only by the cultivation of other native plants than cotton, but also by the introduction of useful exotics, and it is especially timely now to call the attention of the South to the cultivation of ramie. It is the finest and strongest of vegetable fibres. Four thousand years ago, Egyptian cerements were made of this material. Fine as cotton and almost as glossy as silk, it is cheaper than linen and stronger than hemp. Under favorable conditions of soil and climate, the plant grows with spontaneous exuberance. With little need of cultivation, the roots continue through a life of fifteen or twenty years to yield two or three crops of stalks a season. Both the plant and the fabrics made of its fibre repel the attacks of insects. The earlier reason for neglect of the cultivation of this valuable staple was found in the difficulty of separating the fibre from the stalks and preparing it for the loom. If reports of the New Orleans invention are correct, that problem is now solved, and a great and most remunerative field is opened up to Southern planters.



GREEN RAMIE LEAF.

"The following facts furnished by Felix Fremerey, an active and zealous promoter of American fibre culture, forcibly illustrate the exuberance with which ramie grows in our Southern States. He says that in July, 1887, a Texas planter set out several thousand roots. The next spring each root sent forth thirty or forty sprouts, which grew with rapidity. But early in July a drought began which lasted nine weeks. Hundreds of thousands of cotton plants perished, but the ramie survived the drought, and, quickened by the fall rains, grew with such luxuriance that often 150 stems were found in clusters not more than two feet in diameter. In one instance, 163 stalks sprung from a single mass of roots. The plants grew so rapidly that fourteen days after the cutting of the mature stems the new sprouts were thirty inches high.

Each root yielded a gross return of four or five pounds of fibre, the price of which was then 4 cents a pound. From the product of the few plants which were permitted to ripen, it was estimated that the average production of seed would not be less than forty pounds an acre. In previous years New York firms had paid Texas planters as high as $4 a pound for ramie seed. The result of his experiments convinced Mr. Fremerey that the portions of Texas best suited to the culture of this textile can produce three, or possibly four, harvests a year, with an average of 100 stalks to each root."

"Formerly," continued Prof. Waterhouse, "The tillage of ramie in the United States was discouraged by the lack of an effective means for removing the fibre from the stalks. But now there are several machines whose practical efficiency, aided by protective legislation, seems to warrant a general cultivation of the new staple. A semi-tropical climate, a soil that fosters rank growth of the plant, a demand for the product that far exceeds the supply, and defribators whose effectiveness, assisted by congressional duties on competitive fibres, would apparently enable planters to derive lucrative returns from the light toils of tillage, are conditions so favorable to the culture of ramie in our Gulf States as to awaken a feeling of wonder at the slow development of the new industry. A cheap and rapid process of preparing the fibre would revolutionize the textile industries of the United States, and it may be that this has been found in the New Orleans invention. There is scarcely any textile device that would confer a greater benefit upon mankind, or more certainly win for its originator the meed of public usefulness than a thoroughly successful decorticator.

PORTION OF RAMIE FIELD.

"Here are some of the products made of ramie: Ropes and cables that exceed the strength of manilla hemp; table cloths that excel the gloss of Irish linen; lace that equals the delicacy of cotton and surpasses its durability; plushes that rival the luster of sealskin; velvets, damasks and brocades whose exquisite finish embarrasses a further advancement in textile art. Ramie is combined with cotton, linen, wool and silk, and it always add to the mixed texture an element of greater usefulness and beauty. In handkerchiefs, cravats and hosiery, in cambrics, camlets and shawls, in alpacas, carpets and draperies, it is, with the possible exception of silk, superior to the fibres with which it is interwoven.

RAMIE ROWS, 4 FEET AP ART, 6 FEET HIGH.

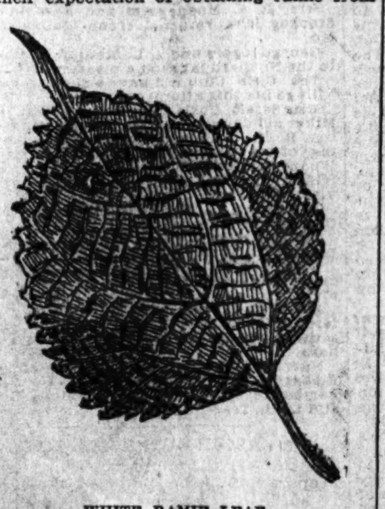
"Though China has always been the chief producer of ramie, other countries have attempted its cultivation. More than a quarter of a century ago a systematic endeavor was made to introduce a general culture of this plant into India, and the effort was so far successful that in 1865 India exported to England about 70,000,000 pounds of ramie. But the aversion of the natives to the growth of new staples, and their ignorance of intelligent methods of extracting the fibre, proved to be insuperable obstacles to a national development of the new industry. Latterly an experimental culture of ramie has been carried on in many lands. There have beee plantations of this textile in the Sandwich Islands, in South America, in the United States, in Northern Africa, and in every country of Southern Europe, and though their total extent has not probably exceeded 50,000 acres, yet their existence in so many lands shows a world-wide interest in the culture of this plant. In the South of France the formation of several companies for the fabrication of ramie indicates the confidence of capital in the success of the undertaking.

"From a greater similarity of conditions and a more exact record of results, French experience affords the most trustworthy information for the guidance of American planters. In the French experiments the number of roots planted to the acre varied, according to the soil or the judgment of the manager, from 10,000 to 20,000. After the second year, each root sent forth fifteen or twenty stems. These stalks grew to the height of from five to eight feet, and averaged about 200,000 to the acre. There are always two, and often three, crops a year. At the time of the operations of the results I mention here, the prices of dry stalks, ribbons of crude bark, and fibre ready for the comb, were respectively 14.38 and 15.9 cents a pound. In one instance where there was need of costly irrigation, careful tillage and rich fertilization to repair a soil exhausted by centuries of culture, there was a clear profit of from $70 to $90 an acre. In three cases the total returns from three cuttings a season were $36.85, $124 and $154 per acre. Americans who have tried the experiment of raising in our Gulf States have estimated the gross value of the two crops a year at from $90 to $120 per acre. These figures do not refer to the products of the first two years after planting. During that time so large a yield would be impossible, but afterwards, in consequence of the luxuriance of the plant, and the small cost of its cultivation, the returns would be large and profitable.

"It is certainly reasonable to assume that the unworn soil of our Southern States will bear as bounteous harvests as the long cultivated fields of France, and it is therefore fair to judge of the possible productiveness of American plantations by the richest yield of Gallic lands. The largest gain mentioned in the foregoing statistics is $154 an acre. Official authority entitles this statement of profits to full credence. But to avoid all possibilities of exaggeration, take only one-half this amount and then, after this unwarranted reduction, there remains a net profit of $77 an acre."

During this part of the conversation Prof. Waterhouse took occasion to show the reporter many specimens of cloth, plushes, etc., made largely of ramie, and the appearance of these goods certainly supported all claims made in their behalf. Some of the separated fiber and the "ribbons" of ramie were also shown, taken from the Professor's collection, and the exhibit as a whole was decidedly interesting.

"Some time ago," said Prof. Waterhouse, "one of the largest textile organizations in France, owing to its urgent need of more fiber, offered to form companies in our Southern States, contribute a liberal proportion of the requisite capital, build mills, equip them with their own deprivators, and buy at stipulated prices all the ramie which American planters raised. But this great opportunity to establish an industry which would largely increase the fibrous resources of the nation was not improved, and the French manufacturers, disappointed in their expectation of obtaining ramie from the United States, are now importing the fiber from China."



WHITE RAMIE LEAF.

From other sources of information at his command, Prof. Waterhouse then furnished the reporter with further interesting facts concerning this interesting plant. The ramie is of the nettle family of plants. The fiber is in the bark of the plant, and in its cultivation in China and other Eastern countries where labor is cheap, the custom has been to split the leaves and scrape away the woody part with bamboo or iron knives. This furnishes the commercial product known as "ramie ribbons," of which a good workman can produce about two and a half pounds per day. The bleaching process is a natural one in China, the ramie being exposed for a long time to the action of the sun and dew. The spinning and weaving has been done in the most primitive way, but the recent inventions in this country and Europe have, of course, made this process of manufacture entirely up to the level of modern methods of improved machinery. The decorticating machines, if as successful as is claimed, solve the last remaining problem of the remunerative culture and manufacture into fabrics of ramie.

The fiber of ramie is of long staple, of from medium to exceeding fineness, and of great strength, from two to three times that of flax. It is not affected by water, it will not shrink or swell, and it does not rot. It is inelastic, a quality which is valuable at times, but which precludes its use for certain manufactures, hosiery, for example, and it will not mildew. These characteristics of strength, inelasticity, lack of shrinkage, and freedom from mildew have made it evident that ramie would be a promising material for the sails of vessels, and it is said that those of the Defender, the new American racer, are to be made of this material. If so, it but adds another to the long list of useful fabrics that can be manufactured from the fiber of this decidedly remarkable member of the nettle family.

In view of the recent discoveries and inventions, it will be interesting to watch the history of ramie in the Southern States for the next few years. The time may soon come when that plant will share the throne with cotton as a great Southern staple.

ST. LOUIS MEN.

—Wm. F. Niedringhaus is in New York.

—Murray Hill spent the past week in New York.

—Dr. George Brown has returned from his trip East.

—Ben Edwards has gone to California for the summer.

—Attorney Harry M. Hill is away on a trip for his health.

—Fred L. Steiner ranks as one of the best Turners in St. Louis.

—Capt. D. P. Slattery is now a grandfather, and is proud of it.

—Ed Mallinckrodt has returned from a short trip to New York City.

—E. D. Henna, the builder, is in New York City on a business trip.

—Lieut.-Gov. John B. O'Meara is spendin a few days in Washington.

—Col. John D. Hopkins is back from his Eastern trip, looking as fresh as a rose.

—Eugene Handlan has given up society and is giving all his attention to business.

—Marcus Bernheimer, it is said, is going to New York to reside in the near future.

—Harry Walker will spend his vacation in Wisconsin at the lakes with his family.

—Mr. S. M. Kennard is one of the best Sunday School teachers this city ever saw.

—"Bob" Pim has been down from Chicago visiting his mother, Mrs. Celeste Pim.

—John J Collister of the Lackawanna Line intends making a European trip shortly.

—Charles G. Wells is spending a week at the "Windy City" with his wife and children.

—F. Dunn spent a few days of last week renewing acquaintances at his old home in Sedalia.

—Real Estate Agent Kaime passes the plate at the old-fashioned Congregational Church.

—G. J. Frankel of the Western Union has gone to Chicago to see his wife off to Oregon.

—Percy Hammer will spend the summer at Inglesyde with Mr. and Mrs. Theodore de Forest.

—Dr. G. A. Moses, the famous physician, has returned from a brief sojourn at Citronelle, Ala.

—Lester Crawford plays a great game of billiards. And he always plays at the St. Louis Club.

—Park Commissioner Ridgeley has gone to Annapolis to visit his son, who is in the Naval Academy.

—Joy Glidden of the Glidden Varnish Co. is up to his ears in three volumes of "Coin's Financial School."

—Raef Whitledge, the well-known steamboat captain, has given up the river to accept a city office.

—Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien of St. Leo's Church is an accomplished ventriloquist, but does not practice the art.

—Col. Griff Prather and Col. Joe Rickey are the Damon and Pythias of the Fair Grounds quarter-stretch.

—C. Sewing, the North End Druggist, can be seen almost every evening on Grand avenue astride his bicycle.

—J. L. Morrison of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul has purchased a commutation ticket at the Cave.

—Dr. Theodore Prewitt has returned from New York City, where he went to attend a medical convention.

—George McManus is making preparations for a trip to New York in search of attractions for his theater.

—The marriage of Mr. Max Kotany leaves another gap in the St. Louis Club's phalanx of eligible bachelors.

—Deputy Sheriff James M. Rollins was formerly a Methodist missionary in Japan. He is a capable newspaper man.

—George S. McGrew will return by the middle of the week from New York City, where he has spent the past week.

—Ex-Gov. Robt. A. Campbell says he is out of politics, but he is taking considerable interest in political developments.

—George Kerr has purchased a winter home in California, near Pasadena, to which he will go with his family next fall.

—Howard O'Fallon, who is a stduent at a St. Paul college, will go to Nonquit, on the Massachusetts coast, to spend the vacation.

—Maj. A. R. W. Hartwig of St. Joseph, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, will arrive in the city on Monday.

—Jos. Sutherland, the attorney, has a fondness for "checker-board" neckwear. He says the black and red pattern is just the thing.

—Rev. Dr. Lee of the St. John M. E. Church South has been to the Holy Land, and is now an interesting lecturer on that subject.

—Police Sergeant Rea was formerly drillmaster at West Point. He was one of the best disciplinarians at the great military academy.

—Hon. John J. O'Neil was at Sedalia looking over the new capitol site. He intends assisting in the moving part of the old machinery.

—John P. Ellis, the well-known attorney, is one of the most successful fishermen in the city. He takes at least two outings every year.

—Henry Alt is loud in his praises of the pleasures and comforts of private life after his years of official toil in the interests of the dear people.

—Lawyer Virgil M. Rule is devoting a good deal of time to society's demands.

—John A. Galbraith went to New York last Wednesday.

—Wm. H. Mayo, grand recorder of the Knights Templar, is growing very stout. He has gained about fifty pounds within the past four months.

—As Gov. Stanard grows older he is allowing his hair and beard to grow in a breezy sort of a way, that makes him look like the picture of Henrik Ibsen.

—It is said that there will be a number of weddings in the fall with prominent young grain men implicated, as a result of the late bulge in wheat.

—Col. William Donaldson has returned from New York City, where he went to meet his daughter, Miss Annie Donaldson, who has just returned from Europe.

—Mr. John G. Lonsdale, an enterprising young real estate dealer from Hot Springs, is in the city, visiting his aunt, Mrs. A. B. Thompson, of 2909 Chestnut street.

—State Auditor Seibert was in town last week, and it is still understood he will be a candidate for renomination, despite his opposition to a free silver convention.

—The cool spell of last week has been traced to its source. W. Flewellyn Saunders, secretary to Mayor Walbridge, appeared in a full costume of white duck.

—Herman Mauch, President of the State Jewelers' Association, is being urged to accept the Presidency of the National Association, which will meet July 12 to elect officers.

—Prof. Waterhouse of Washington University has a grip like that of a vise. When he shakes hands with you, the fact is remembered physically for some time afterward.

—The fact that Secretary of State Lesueur has shaved off his mustache need not deter the aspiring statesmen from wearing full beard. The Secretary's will grow out again.

—Rev. Michael Burnham of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, one of the ablest ministers in this State, accompanied Ransom Post, G. A. R., to Springfield on Decoration Day.

—George H. Morgan, Secretary of the Merchants' Exchange, has returned from his trip to New York, where he went in the interest of the inaugural trip of the steamship "St. Louis."

—Father Powers of the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception is said even to occupy the place once held by Archbishop Ryan, that of the most eloquent pulpit orator in St. Louis.

—M. C. Brown will leave in a few days for Vienna, Mo., where he will establish headquarters. He recently purchased 1,000 acres of land in Maries County, which he will endeavor to sell.

—Mr. A. D. Cunningham, secretary of the Choral Symphony Society, was one of the bassos that sang at the Ballman-Ruckert nuptials. Mr. Cunningham was at one time quite an oratorio singer.

—If George E. Leighton should consent to go to the Senate he would leave behind him the best and most interesting front and back yard in this town. The probabilities are that he will stay at home.

—Maj. Foster, Secretary of the Board of Public Improvements, is the most inveterate book worm in the city government. His hobby is the political, social and religious development of the human race.

—Tom Lynch, now of Louisville, Ky., the brightest wit and cleverest cartoonist that ever worked in a local railroad office, was called to the city last week on a sad mission to attend his brother Saucier's funeral.

—Mr. Nicholas Espenschied, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Fred Espenschied, en route from California, where he spent the winter, left a few days ago to return to his home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

—Archbishop Kain wears a red necktie along with his somber vestments. Moreover he is an adept at interviewing, being assured of what he wants in and what you want out, which is more than half the business.

—Alex Henneman's friends are begging him to forswear his whiskers and remove a striking resemblance to Du Maurier's Svengali, which ends with the hirsute appendage, although Mr. Henneman is quite a remarkable musician.

—Col. R. B. Southard was in town last week. He is leading an active life in the field as Chief Engineer of the Chester & Maryville Railroad and the outdoor life seems to agree with him after his four years of official cares.

—Lieut. Gonzalles Bingham, who has been stationed at Jefferson Barracks, has been removed, and will leave this week for Washington City for a visit of a month, before going to his new post, which will probably be at Governor's Island.

—Lieuts. Hughes, Walker, West and Conrad, from Jefferson Barracks, are usually in evidence at the races on "society days." Is it admiration for the fair ones or for the equines which attracts these dashing cavalrymen? That is the question.

—Wm. F. Parsons, with Langenburg Bros. & Co., has just bought a cosy home out at Ferguson. He has also bought a cow, and recently went out on the accommodation train with two small pigs in a sack. He says there's nothing like country life.

—Gen. Geo. H. Shields, who was a delegate from the St. Louis Society of the Sons of the Revolution to the annual meeting and banquet in Boston, has returned home, and joined his family, who were making a visit to relatives in the interior of the State.

—Max M. Bodenheimer has returned from his trip to Atlanta, Ga., to attend the annual meeting of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association. He says that the Atlanta people in general and the grocers in particular, are the most royal entertainers in the world.

—Jacob Furth is one of the hardest workers for charity in St. Louis. He gets around among his friends and personally solicits contributions to the Jewish Orphan Asylum and other charities and it is said that his eloquence is of such a persuasive nature as to move a heart of stone.

—Col. Theodore Shelton of the Gauss-Shelton Hat Company, goes up country at about this season of the year to spend the summer. Mr. Shelton is a son-in-law of the late Maj. Wm. Gentry, while Mr. Gauss is a brother-in-law of the preacher, and also of President Charlie Bullen of the National Bank of the Republic.

THE SONG OF THE CATBIRD.

Strange Sounds Sometimes Made by This Really Sweet Songster.

The catbird is so named on account of a peculiar call or cry which it makes. Upon the slightest alarm, and often from caprice it mews like a kitten, and often makes a sound loud and harsh enough to proceed from a full-grown cat. This sound becomes very pronounced and vociferous in the spring. With spread tail and feathers erect, the bird flies about the thickets, shrubbery of the garden, the most wide awake bird of all these haunts, uttering its noisy and strange cry.

But the catbird is a bird of varied musical talents. It has another call which resembles the syllables "trat-tat-tat-tat-," given in quick succession. Beside this, it has a beautiful song, which has been called a medley, because it resembles a mixture of the song of the robin and the thrush. This song is described as very sweet and spirited, and as keeping throughout a peculiar whirring note, always suggestive of the cry of a cat.

The catbird's song often unquestionably contains distinct imitations of the voices of other birds, but it has besides this peculiar and well-pronounced quality of its own, and is sweet enough to make us regret that the bird so often drops back into the harsh "ma-i-ou," which has gained it its name.

A Wonder.

From the Washington Star.

"I tell you," said Mr. Proudpaugh, "that boy of mine is a wonder. He has the signs of extraordinary genius stamped all over him in display type."

"Indeed? He must be a phenomenon."

"He is. He is only 6 years old and writes a hand like Horace Greeley's and sings worse than Trilby."

TRILBY IN ST. LOUIS IN ALL HER GLORY.

Female Models Who Pose in the Studios of Well-Known Local Artists.

Some of the Most Famous Pictured Here With Pen and Pencil.

Their Stories Combine Romance, Mystery, Tragedy and Comedy—How They Are "Discovered"—Art School Methods.

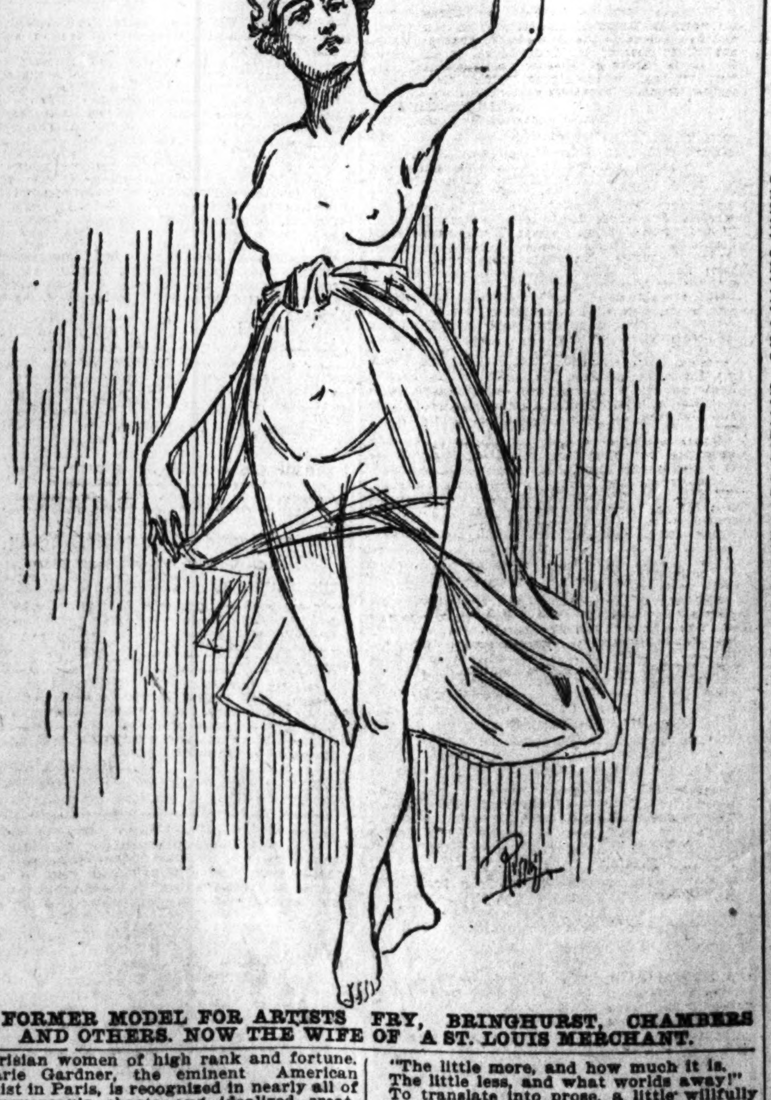
When in 1880 Hans Makart, the famous Viennese painter, conceived the idea of his great painting, "The Entry of Charles V. Into Antwerp," the female aristocracy of the gay Austrian capital gave its indorsement to a calling long since established in the art centers of Europe.

The women who posed for Makart in this dazzling pageant-scene were all noted for great beauty of face and form, among them being the Princess Metternich, that eccentric and clever aristocrat; the beautiful Countess Klingosch-Zichy, whose enormous plebeian wealth restored the ancient house of the Counts of Zichy to former splendor; Charlotte Wolter, the celebrated tragedienne, who married royal blood; Gallmeyer, whom Americans remember as "Jolly Josie," when she toured this country in 1883, and many others, as prominent of name and rank, too numerous to mention.

MISS MATTIE LENNOX POSING TO ARTIST J. WILTON CUNNINGHAM FOR "EASTER LILIES."

The knoweldge that gentlewomen were the amiable figurantes of Makart's famous canvas, created a furore in the art world of Germany and England, where painting from models, especially the nude, was carried on much more conservatively than in France and Italy. But it gave stimulus to a new occupation—women, gentlewomen, no longer abhorred the "artist model," society no longer sneered at and tabooed a professional calling necessary to art and it increased the rank and file of professional figurantes perceptibly.

In France gentlewomen had long ago consented to pose for their artist friends. Lefebvre's beautiful nudes in many instances are reproductions of well known Parisian women of high rank and fortune. Marie Gardner, the eminent American artist in Paris, is recognized in nearly all of Bouguereau's chaste and idealized creations.



A FORMER MODEL FOR ARTISTS FRY, BRINGHURST, CHAMBERS AND OTHERS. NOW THE WIFE OF A ST. LOUIS MERCHANT.

This by way of prelude to a little talk on "artists' models" in St. Louis, for St. Louis, too, has its Trilbys of the studio. But its Trilby with an "if"; Trilby with a dash, not dash of style, but dash of punctuation; Trilby nameless, not Trilby incarnate of Du Maurier's story. There is no reason why we should not have her with all the fresh and captivating flavor of her prototype, if we will only hold out a little encouragement to her.

New York has quite a respectable coterie of artists' models, in number as well as class. Their vocation, for it is a vocation, is not looked at askance. These women live a life as respectable as the typewriter girl, the seamstress, the journalist, and all the rest of feminine bread winners. Their beauty is not their fortune, nor their undoing, but a sure and honorable means of earning a livelihood.

There are just two ways by which legitimate models are obtained by artists in St. Louis. One is the ordinary and efficient one of advertising. John Cunningham, Paul Cornoyer, Robert Bringhurst, the women artists in the various studios, and the Fine Arts School have obtained some good models in this way. The ranks from which they come are of the working class. Rarely indeed does a woman apply from the higher walks of life, and independent of earning a livelihood. When one does, she is usually endowed with some great charm, a fair, white, rounded throat, shoulders that seem in marble cast, a hand molded on lines of perfection. Consciousness of her extraordinary features of beauty imbues her with the pardonable desire to see it immortalized in some ideal creation of a painter's fancy. Pardonable, indeed! Do we chide the flower that revels in its own perfume? Or blame the sky for smiling at its glorious blue? Why chide the woman, who is glad of her own beauty? Even savage nature glories in that which is pleasing to its savage mate.

Of the models obtained by advertising may be said what is said of love:

"The little more, and how much it is.
The little less, and what worlds away!"

To translate into prose, a little willfully perhaps, Artist John Wilton Cunningham's experience might be cited, with a model who not long ago answered his advertisement about like this:

"I am a beautiful woman, and would like to pose for you. But you must promise the utmost secrecy. Do not mention my name, nor the fact that I applied to you, on your honor." And then the good soul enumerated her artistic charms.

Mr. Cunningham was highly impressed with the missile and begged the would-be model to call. When she appeared there was consternation in the studio of the young painter. The lady was past 50, and the particularly beautiful features of which she had spoken in glowing terms of self-praise, were conspicuous by their absence.

A MEMBER OF THE LIFE CLASS OF THE ST. LOUIS ART SCHOOL POSING FOR HER CLASSMATES. THIS STUDY IS BY MISS MARTHA HOKE.

But there are not many cases like this. As a rule, here in St. Louis at least, professional models are not born, they are made. Nearly all of them have been originally obtained by advertising in the newspapers. In nearly every case they came from the lower walks of life, poor, respectable, anxious to make as good a living as they can, and refreshingly green. The attaches of the museum, and Mr. Robert Bringhurst, who work much from models, say that in less than six weeks a perceptible change comes over these girls. They expand in the artistic atmosphere which surrounds them. The often dull and uninteresting face lights up, as the model warms to her work; the attitude half timid, half self-conscious, becomes natural, refined, graceful, forceful. As time progresses these models of accident become professional in their conduct, business-like and anxious to do their utmost in the interest of the artist who paints them. The quid pro quo, although the main instigation, which furnishes a valid excuse for the occupation, and classes it among respectable wage earnings, is no longer the sole consideration. There is a desire for a little more than this, a spiritual satisfaction that increases the value of the model a hundredfold. A sympathy with the artist and his work permeates and softens the more sordid desire for gain. "Simpatica," the Italians call it, and no other language in the world defines this sentiment exactly as the Italian word does. It is this "simpatica" which idealizes the work of the artist, which robs the nude of vulgarity, and makes an otherwise commonplace subject classically pure.

"MADGE" POSING TO MISS RUTH STERLING FOR THE "ARMENIAN SLAVE."

At first these girls are somewhat distinctive and bizarre in their type of looks; a little too picturesque, shabbily so, in dress. But this is soon changed. They have caught some idea of color and effect from the artistic atmosphere in which they live, and now they show the influence in their gowns and bonnets. A Fantine's bonnet, which is a little more than a bit of black framing with a crimson rose drooping, Spanish fashion, over an ear, is a deal more becoming than the stiff sailor hat, and the artist model soon finds this out. Even though the lace is a little brown and rusty, and the rose one of the cheap pattern that can be had for a quarter, it suits the debonaire face more than any draping which is the result of a milliner's suggestion.

Another thing, the model soon becomes full of "shop talk," and looks upon the painting of pictures and the posing therefor as the most important business on the one hand, the highest profession open to women on the other. The artist patronizes her in a fatherly sort of way. He tells her condescendingly what he thinks of rival pictures, and she always concurs in his opinions. She treats him "en bon camerade," and he likes her spirit of helpfulness.

Here in St. Louis the artist models have always concealed their identity behind mere given names. They are known by no other in the class for which they pose, and the artists refuse positively to reveal their true cognomens. In some instances the artists themselves know nothing more than their given names, which might be "Mary" or "Trilby," so far as they care.

There is, however, a book kept in the Art School to which no one has access except the Secretary, and in this book are registered the various models available for posing. And a curious registry it is! "Trilby Dissected" it might be called, for each artistic qualification is faithfully described, and if an artist wants a finely molded arm for a special piece of work, and his own model cannot supply that anatomical perfection, he has recourse to the Art School register, which under the index of arms, furnishes just what he wants. Miss So-and-So of a certain number, on a certain street, with an arm like a Juno, a Hebe, or a Greek slave, etc., through the list.

The Painters' and Sculptors' Art Exhibit, which closed not long ago, revealed the fact that there are several charming female models in St. Louis at present, who may be called professionals. Miss Ruth Sterling's "Armenian Slave," which attracted much favorable comment, was painted from a model named "Madge," who posed for the life class and in private studios all winter. She was discovered by John Wilton Cunningham through advertising. After six weeks posing she became a very good model. Madge is a simple country girl, who came to the city to earn her living. It was difficult to obtain work, and she drifted into posing from sheer necessity. Now she is a professional model. She is a striking creature, with a great shock of red hair, a well-proportioned figure, and a naturally refined carriage, much improved by her present occupation. As a "poser" she is said to be the best that they have had for a long time. Since starting upon her career as an art model Madge has developed some literary taste, and she almost devoured "Trilby" when that much-discussed work first came out. Of course, she had her opinion about the various characters, and when she was asked in a general way by one of the attaches of the school what she thought of "Trilby" she very pertinently argued with great perspicuity: "Everything would have been all right if only Little Billee's mother had stayed away."

Madge is especially valuable on account of the beauty of her flesh tints and the satiny polish of her skin which usually accompanies her color of hair. Her eyes, too, are of that greenish lustre so difficult to reproduce with brush and pigment.

One of the earliest models, who posed for George W. Chambers before he abandoned the quest for fame for a surer field of labor; for John Fry, Will Chase, and a coterie of other artists of that time, was a handsome maid in Sleeper's bakery. She had an exceedingly pretty and paintable face, and Fry employed her to sit for him for one of the faces in his picture of "Samson," which he afterwards destroyed. This face of the pretty bakery maid Fry perched on the shoulders of a semi-nude in that picture. When she discovered it at the time it was exhibited in the old Pettes and Leathe gallery on Washington avenue there was a great rumpus in the house of Fry, and the artist had to efface the resemblance before she would be satisfied. Another model of recent years, who posed for the Life Class of the Art School, for Fry and Bringhurst, and a number of others, is to-day the wife of a well-to-do business man. She is a Jewess of the pronounced brunette type, with beautiful shoulders and arms, and a shapely, well-poised head. During her model days she lived on Franklin avenue, not far below Eighteenth street.

"Inez," one of the ex-models of the Art School, is immortalized in Fry's picture, "The Waternymphs." She has since married a wealthy stockman in California. Inez, like nearly all her predecessors, came from the humble walks of life. Her present husband fell in love with her through a picture for which she posed. He sought her out, married her and took her to California. From there she wrote to one of the attaches of the museum not long ago that she could never express her gratitude sufficiently for the refinement she acquired in her association with artists, fitting her, as she says, for her present social position. Miss Sipple, also, is a very good model, who is fond of posing. "Gussie" and "Katie" are late years' models, and they, too, are happily married. Katie was met a few days ago by Miss Phillips, one of the brightest little artists and teachers at the Art School, with a tiny "Trilby" of her own in her arms, over the possession of which she seemed highly elated.

Occasionally there is the charming denouement of an artist marrying his model. Will Chase, for instance, whom St. Louis still likes to claim, although he lives permanently in New York, chose for his wife the heroine of many of his creations. She sat only for him, and they had been married a year before announcement of the marriage was made to their friends and the public. Mrs. Chase is still her husband's model, and he paints her now with her back turned, and a laughing babe crowing over her shoulder at the spectators.

Now and then a tragedy comes of it all, or a prelude to one, but cases like these are exceedingly rare.

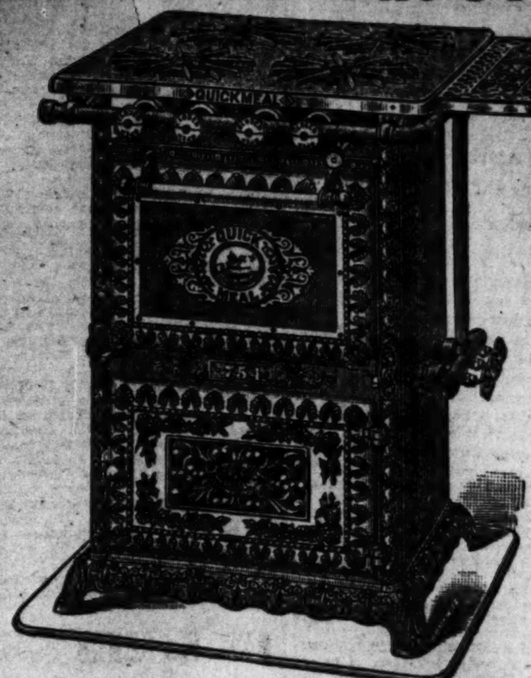
Mattie Lennox, the graceful dancer of the Roof Garden last season, posed as the model for Mr. Cunningham's "Easter Lilies," that charming study, which he exhibited a few weeks ago. Two of the ballet dancers of Kiralfy's "Black Crook," when here last winter, replenished their slender incomes by going from studio to studio posing for various artists during the week of their engagement here.

While advertising brings plenty of applicants, few of these are satisfactory subjects from an artistic standpoint. They lack the fine-grained attributes of the gentlewoman, the classical hand, the perfect foot, that air of bred-in-the-bone refinement of high conditioned womanhood. For this reason the art students at the School of Fine Arts, especially those of the "Portrait Class," pose for each other. It is a veritable labor of love. Miss Chandler, a beautiful blonde, with a strikingly well-bred face, herself a student, posed for a number of her fellow-students. One of these portraits is especially good, and will be seen at the Art Students' Exhibit next week.

The charming subject of "The Pensive Maid" was sketched by Miss Martha Hoke from a sitting given by one of the members of the Sketch Club, a gathering of young and striving artists, who felt it incumbent upon themselves to render this service to each other every time the Sketch Club met for work. Miss Katherine Patterson, so well remembered for her fine display of histrionic talent in amateur performances here, can be pursuaded now and then by her friends, the art students at the school, to pose for them. She has marvelously beautiful shoulders and a throat like ivory with a mass of lovely hair, which has been reproduced on many a friendly screen.

Perhaps the "unvoiced judgment" which influences the scales of justice in society will ere long permit the gentlewoman to seek the occupation of "artist model" unmolested by idle gossip tand unfriendly criticism. It is a means of bread-winning especialy suited to impecunious women of the better class. The average price for the ordinary draped pose is $2 a sitting, for a nude $3, which is much more than can be earned by needle, or in almost any other occupation suitable for women. Of course skilled professional models, who are especially valuable to certain artists for whom they have posed regularly, and who appreciate thoroughly the true artistic nature of the model's calling, are worth more, but the average of prices is about as stated above.

The development of the "professional of posing" in America is an interesting subject to study, and it is a question with which society has much to do. The dying away of an old-fashioned habit of cavilling at this honorable occupation means much; it means that in time these trained and sympathetic models will make it possible for the artists of America to create as distinctive a school of art, with as high a standard as the French or German or Italian, by the preservation on canvas of the unique types of beauty of American women.



Quick Meal Gas Stoves

It is not surprising so many "Quick Meal" Gas Stoves are in use and steadily increasing when considering that gas bills are so much lower where a "Quick Meal" is being used than at houses using another make. The "Quick Meal" is simple, substantial and economical; it is a grand good stove, and we earnestly recommend it to our friends and the public.

RINGEN STOVE CO.,
414 NORTH BROADWAY.

THE ATLANTA EXPOSITION.

To Have Many Attractions, Including a Midway.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 5.—Just now the subject most discussed in the South is the "Cotton States and International Exposition," its prospects and its probable results. This is the first time in their history that the Cotton Staes have attempted an exposition of an international character. The leaders in this great undertaking recognize that now is the time to interest Northern people, especially the farmer, the settler, the homeseeker and the capitalist, in the resources and advantages of the "New South." The exposition is now fast assuming the shape it will finally take. But there is still an immense amount of work to be done. The gates will be thrown open to the public September 18, and will close on December 31.

The grounds cover an area of about one hundred and eighty-nine acres. They are two miles from the center of the city, and are easy of access, by trolley lines or by the Southern Railway. Piedmont Park now presents a scene of great disorder and confusion. Horses and wagons, and a score of workmen are engaged in digging what looked like a big canal. This will be filled with water, and will form an inland lake. A number of buildings will have water frontage and there will be electric launches and gondolas.

The main entrance to the Exposition grounds will be on the Piedmont avenue side. Here, facing the avenue, will be the Administration Building—the longest structure on the grounds. It will have a frontage of 440 feet. It will resemble a mediaeval castle. The main tower will represent the Rheinstein, while at one end the architect has reproduced in part the tower of Warwick Castle. The circular doorway of the principal entrance will be patterned after the old doorway of the Tower of London. Adjoining the Administration Building is the big Auditorium. It will have a seating capacity for 3,000 persons. At one side of the building there will be the music stand, and along the sides cafes, so arranged as to give full view of the main hall.

Last year Congress appropriated $200,000 for a Government building and exhibit. This is on the summit of a hill to the left of the Administration building. A powerful searchlight will be placed on its dome. Near by will be a small building for the United States heavy ordinance. Here will be shown modern machine guns, rapid-firing guns and projectiles.

The exhibit of the Interior Department will contain several new features. Prominence will be given to those industries which affect the South. Machinery connected with the manufacture of cotton will be shown on a larger scale than ever before. The exhibit of the Geological Survey will show more particularly the resources and mineral wealth of the South.

Perhaps the most striking exhibit in the Government Building will be that of the United States Commission. The fish will occupy thirty tanks, which will be arranged in a grotto. The sea water will be brought from the ocean and will be stored in an immense reservoir underneath the building, from which it will be pumped into the tanks. The fresh water supply can be obtained without storing, from the city's water works.

The exhibit of the Division of Forestry will be placed in the Forestry and Mining Building. It will show the splendid forest resources of the Southern States better than any previous exhibit. According to Dr. Fernow, the Chief of the Division of Forestry, one of the most interesting exhibits will be a set of three models—one to represent a 160-acre farm in the hill lands of the South, which by bad cutting and management has become gullied, furrowed and silted over; another to show how with bush dams, with ditching, proper drainage, with terracing, sodding and replanting the lost ground may be recovered, while the third model will show the same 160 acres restored to good condition.

The exhibit of the mineral resources of the South will be very complete. North Carolina alone can show as large and varied a collection of gems and geological specimens as any State in the Union. Scarcely less varied and valuable are the mineral resources of Georgia.

The Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building will be 356 feet long, 208 feet wide, and 90 feet in height at the four tower ends. The Machinery Building will be nearly 500 feet long, 118 feet wide and 60 feet in height. In design it will be Romanesque.

The Agricultural Building will be 304 feet long, 150 feet wide, and 110 feet in height to the center of the dome. It is expected that this exhibit will give to the Northern people a better notion of the extent and variety of farm products and stock in the South than has been heretofore possible. The progress in agriculture in the South has been very rapid in late years. Southern farmers no longer pin their faith to one crop—cotton. The "truck" farms of the South now supply Northern markets with fresh and green vegetables and small fruits in early spring. The Southern fruit trade has grown enormously of late years, and the supply of Georgia peaches is something wonderful.

The Electricity Building will be 262 feet long, 85 feet wide, and 109 feet to the center of the dome. The Transportation Building will be 240 feet long, 150 feet wide, and 68 feet in height, with two end galleries 48 by 117 feet.

The Negro Building will be 275 feet long, 112 feet wide, and 70 feet in height. Here will be arranged for display the work of the negro. This should be one of the interesting features of the exposition. Particularly noticeable will be the educational exhibits, including the technical instruction connected with the industrial arts.

The Fine Arts Building will be situated on a hill between the Manufactures Building and the Government Building. It has been designed after the Renaissance style, and will be one of the most attractive structures on the grounds. The floor area will be about 15,000 square feet, and the wall space about 25,000 square feet. The floor space in the center of the floor will be given up to sculpture. The two large galleries at each end will be reserved for paintings contributed by artists of Europe and America. The Architectural League of New York City will have two galleries set apart for its exhibit.

The free arts exhibit should awaken much interest in the South, where art is in a backward state. After the war the people were too busy in the struggle for existence to pay much attention to works of art. Now, with the revival of trade, and with the increase of wealth, the Southern people are beginning to take interest in art subjects.

The design for the Woman's Building was furnished by Miss Mercur, of Pittsburg. It has a frontage of 150 feet, 128 feet deep and 70 feet to the top of the dome.

The Fire Building will be the headquarters of the Fire Department. The urgent need of efficient fire protection is apparent. The exposition buildings, of yellow pine, are simply so many tinder boxes. It is the intention to place alarm boxes near almost every exhibit, and besides these hundreds of fire extinguishers will be distributed.

Mr. Cooper of the Department of Publicity and Promotion, has said that every Southern State would be represented. It is probable that at least half a dozen Northern States will have exhibits. California will erect a building of the old mission style, in which the varied and wonderful products of the State will be displayed. The other States likely to be represented are Illinois, Tennessee, Pennsylvania and New Mexico. New York and Massachusetts have not been heard from officially.

One of the principal objects of the Atlanta Exposition will be to promote closer trade relations and larger commerce between this country and the countries of South and Central America. Special efforts have been put forth to have these South American States represented by exhibits. The responses have been most favorable. The President has announced his intention of making an elaborate exhibit of the resources of Mexico at the Exposition. The Argentine Republic has appropriated $25,000 to make a display. The Chilian Congress voted $10,000 for the same purpose. Venesuela, Honduras, Nicaragua and Paraguay propose to make exhibitions.

It is interesting to note how this exposition has outgrown its original character and proportions. As at first planned it was to be more or a less of a Southern affair. Then the term "Cotton States" was found to be too narrow, and so the word "International" was added. The affairs are managed by a company composed of fifty-one directors. The men behind the undertaking do not intend to lose any money. They calculate that the exposition will pay all expenses and leave a surplus. The bulk of the revenue is expected to come from the "concessions," or privileges of selling things on the grounds.

A writer in a local paper has been poking fun not only at the exorbitant prices asked for concessions, but at the classification of these different privileges. The list price of each concession is as follows: Canes ([illegible] stands), $200; chewing gum (15 stands), $200; souvenir medals, spoons and watch charms (5 stands each), $200; wire jewelry (2 stands), $500; satin spar jewelry (2 stands), $500; popcorn (12 stands), $500; peanuts (12 stands), $300; optical goods (10 stands), $500; microscopes (5 stands), $300; soda water (5 founts), $1,000; weiner wurst and coffee privilege (5 stands), $1,000; silhouettes (2 stands), $200; hot waffles, with sugar and honey (3 stands), $300; griddle cakes, with maple sugar and syrup (3 stands), $300; silk loom products (2 stands), $300.

The exposition will have a Midway Plaisance. The amusements and attractions will be stationed on a broad street to be called "The Terrace." There will be about the same features that made the Midway noted and notorious at Chicago.

A prominent official connected with the management said the other day: "We have begun a thorough canvass of the city and suburbs. We expect when the work is finished to have a complete list of every house and every room that will be available for visitors. There may be certain days when Atlanta, with a population of 120,000, may have to take care of as many more people. In order to meet such an emergency, houses and rooms twenty and thirty miles from Atlanta will be registered. There will be cheap round-trip tickets for those who lodge in the suburbs and who come into the city in the morning and return in the evening. During the exposition every house on the list will be visited twice a day and every vacant room will be reported. There will be "public comfort" headquarters in the city, where visitors can obtain all this information without any charge. No fee will be asked of the hotels, boarding houses or private residents. With telephone service and bicycle messengers we expect to be able to tell at any time how many rooms are unoccupied and ready for visitors and guests."

One of the principal objects for holding the Atlanta Exposition is to attract visitors who have never been in the South—to interest those who know little of the resources of the Cotton States. In this way it is hoped to bring settlers to its fields and land and capital to its industries. The railroads, which will be most benefited, recognise this fact, and they are ready and willing to make liberal concessions. Vice-President St. John of the Seaboard Air Line says that the rate will not be more than one fare for the round trip, probably less than that. The passenger agent of the Southern Railway says that the fare will probably be less than $50 from all points as far north as New York.

An Inventor's Dream.

From the Bombay Gazette.

Elias Howe almost beggared himself before he discovered where the eye of the needle of a sewing machine should be located. It is probable that there are very few persons who know how it came about. His original idea was to follow the model of the ordinary needle and have the eye at the heel. It never occurred to him that it should be placed near the point, and he might have failed altogether if he had not dreamed he was building a sewing machine for a savage king in a strange country. Just as in his actual waking experience, he was rather perplexed about the needle's eye. He thought the king gave him twenty-four hours to complete the machine and make it sew. If not finished in that time, death was to be the punishment. Howe worked and worked, and puzzled and puzzled, and finally gave it up. Then he thought he was taken out to be executed. He noticed that the warriors carried spears that were pierced near the head. Instantly came the solution of the difficulty, and, while the inventor was begging for time, he awoke. It was 4 o'clock in the morning. He jumped out of bed, ran to his work-room, and by 9 a needle with an eye at the point had been rudely modeled. After that it was easy. This is the true story of an important incident in the invention of the sewing machine.

A Mean Revenge.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Near Gainesville a newly-married couple on the train the other day attracted a good deal of attention by their peculiar behavior. A lady got on the train at a station and took a seat in front of them. Scarcely was she seated before they commenced making remarks in loud whispers about her wearing last season's hat and dress. She was severely criticised by them for some moments. Presently the lady turned around. She noticed at a glance that the bride was older than the groom, and, without the least resentment in her countenance, she said:

"Madam, will you please have your son close the window behind you?"

The son closed his mouth instead, and the madam did not giggle again until the brakeman hollered out "Lula!"

Natural Question.

A Cincinnati paper reports that the agent of a clock dealer in that city called one day on a good German citizen of the "Over-the-Rhine" district and endeavored to sell him an eight-day clock.

"My dear sir," said the salesman, "this is a remarkable clock. It is not only beautiful, but it is most useful. Why, this clock will run eight days without winding."

The German opened his eyes.

"Eight days vidout vinding!" he exclaimed. "Vy, dot is a great clock. But tell me dot—if he will run eight days vidout vinding, how long vill he run if you do vind him?"

And Was Speedily Shorn.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"You used to do a little trading on 'Change, didn't you, Higgs?"

"Yes."

"Were you a bull or a bear?"

"Neither, Biobbs. I was a lamb."

ARCHBISHOP KAIN.

A Personal Study of the New Ecclesiastic.

RESOURCES AND STRENGTH.

His Early Life Amid the West Virginia Mountains and What He Has Accomplished.

The archiepiscopal residence at 3810 Lindell boulevard is one of the handsomest in that peculiarly aristocratic community. The long, double block between Grand and Vandeventer avenues is crowded with resplendent homes, all owned by men who have sufficient wealth to maintain them in the style which they deserve. The double block begins on the left-hand side with the University and the famous Church of St. Xavier, which for so many fruitful and eventful years were located at Eleventh and Christy avenue. Then follow the homes of some of the richest citizens of St. Louis, on both sides of the boulevard, until Vandeventer avenue is reached, when the beautiful outlook bumps up against the well-known church of Dr. R. C. Cave, which may well be designated "the little church on the corner," since it is not connected with any denomination, neither is it dedicated to the worship of any unknown God.

The residence of Archbishop Kain is a two-story and mansard red brick. It is broad and deep rather than high, and has bay windows at both the extreme east and west ends. A broad pavement of granitoid leads up to the front door, while a similar pavement to the west forms an outlet for carriages, flanked by large gray stones of a pumice character, piled three feet high to mark the outer edge of the drive.

There is a cut-in portico confronted by big double doors.

Entering the house one finds a wide, hospitable reception hall, flanked on one side by the parlor, and on the other side by the library, every appointment giving evidence of the culture and refinement of the person who lives within.

Archbishop Kain is a rugged and comparatively young ecclesiastic, since he has attained the archbishopric at the age of 52 years. His gray hair is combed loosely back from a low forehead which indicates a vast deal of personal independence and executive power. He has a long, large nose, a firm, attractive mouth, and eyes which gaze upon you intensely and with the fervor of religious enthusiasm.

The new Archbishop is not inclined to discuss the affairs of his diocese. They are in a delicate situation, and the diplomacy which a bright man should exercise under the circumstances is unquestionably appreciated by him.

ARCHBISHOP KAIN.

He will tell you of his earlier life, how, when a young man, he bestrode a horse or mule and rode over the mountains of West Virginia, by day and by night, administering consolation, comfort and unction to the isolated people. He will tell you, calmly and without ostentation or boasting, how he worked and suffered to spread the gospel of his church among a splendid race who were entirely absorbed in the Church of England or else were Baptists or Methodists.

A well-known Virginian of St. Louis said the other day: "I grew up in the mountains of the Mother of Presidents without having heard that there was such a church as the Catholic until the beginning of the war, and my first intelligence on that point was of Archbishop Kean and Archbishop Kain, both of whom penetrated the fastnesses of the hill-country and brought the news of the existence of the Catholic Church. Up to that time everybody I knew or heard of was a Protestant, but it was not long before little white church buildings, with a cross on top, began to appear among the mountains, and thus when I left the old State of Virginia the names of Kain and Kean were equally well known and revered."

The new Archbishop of St. Louis never hesitated in those old days to swim his horse across swollen torrents, or to rest at night with a family of Protestants who gave him shelter. In short, he has had experiences enough to make him charitable, helpful and philosophical.

Probably he is not so learned or so scholarly a man as was Archbishop Kenrick in his palmiest days, but he knows a vast deal more of human nature, its sufferings and trials and struggles than most ecclesiastics of his time. And in this respect he is a valuable acquisition to the church and the people of Missouri.

Archbishop Kain reminds you of the old presiding elder in Dr. Eggleston's "End of the World," who, when the great storm came on which the Millerites of 1842 said was to signalize the termination of all earthly things, rode calmly down the highway singing at the top of his voice:

Come, let us anew
Our journey pursue.
Roll round with the year
And never stand still.
Till the Master appear.
His adorable will
Let us gladly fulfill,
And our talents improve
By the patience of hope
And the labor of love.

The rain and the lightning and the wind played about him, but he said it was immaterial whether the storm presaged the end of the world or only a summer shower. He had his work to do on earth, and would continue to do it until the heavens were rolled back as a scroll and all the people of God were admitted together into the kingdom above.

You can imagine Archbishop Kain doing and saying those very things. To look at the firm mouth and determined nose it is easy to conjecture that not all the shouts and cymbals of all the side issues on earth could tempt him to pause for one moment in whatever course he might map out for himself.

So, as Archbishop of this diocese, he will be found mild and gentle, yet with a firmness of purpose which no combination of influences can cause him to swerve from.

Archbishop Kain will be a popular man, however. He knows how to conceal beneath his gown the likes and dislikes which others more scholarly have let fly in face of the community. He is a born diplomat, and his every word and gesture shows that he is fully acquainted with the so-called polish of the world, which conceals its disagreements in order the quicker to conquer.

But he is also a fighter. Every lineament of his strong Irish face indicates that there might be circumstances under which he would "shed his linen" and meet an adversary more than half way. But the provocation must needs be strong, since the gentle light in his clear eyes shows that he is preferably a man of peace.

Such is the new Archbishop of St. Louis—a man of diplomacy and courage, of gentleness and strength; a man in whom the elements are combined to give him power for the great office to which he has been assigned by special orders from the seat of the Cathedral Church Government. He looks as though he would be equal to any emergency, and it is quite probable Rome knew precisely what it was doing when it appointed Kain to succeed the great Archbishop Kenrick.

An effort was made by a representative of the Post-Dispatch to interview the new Archbishop on the affairs of the arch-diocese and other topics bearing upon the change of administration, but no results could be obtained, as he declined to talk.

It would have been interesting to hear from the lips of the new Archbishop an outline of his plans for the management of the affairs of this, one of the most famous of all the Catholic archdioceses in the world, but the distinguished prelate refused so positively to discuss topics of current interest that the subject was necessarily abandoned and the Archbishop left to his own cogitations.

MRS. FLORENCE BOOTH DEAD.

An Estimable Lady Well Known Here—Her Easter Poem.

The many St. Louis friends of Mrs. Florence Booth, wife of Maj. Booth of the United States army, stationed at Omaha, will be grieved to learn of her death, which occurred June 3 after a painful illness of five weeks of rheumatic fever. She spent the month of April visiting Dr. and Mrs. Otto E. Forster of this city and was taken ill immediately after her return home.

Mrs. Booth was the daughter of Dr. Lockwood of the United States navy, now retired and was born in Florence, Italy. From the city of her nativity she took her given name. She was married sixteen years ago to Maj. Booth in Washington and they have one child, a daughter, now fourteen years of age, attending the convent school at Georgetown, D. C. Lieut. Lockwood of the army, formerly stationed at Jefferson Barracks, but now transferred to the East, reached her bedside before her death.

Mrs. Booth was in St. Louis when the Post-Dispatch published its Woman's number for Easter and handed in too late for publication the following dainty little poem, which is fraught with a sad interest since the hand which penned it so recently is stilled forever:

EASTER.

Close to my face a half-ope'd violet cup,
A hand came holding. "This came up
Because it is the day that Jesus rose,"
The sweet lips said. And I suppose
No violet ever more up to my face,
Will lift its purple breast, in any place,
But I shall hear the words and see
The glad eyes smiled upon me,
Because this one sweet flower was found—
Just one, above the hardened ground
On Easter Day. It was a face so bright,
A boy's fair face all filled with light,
Alas! This blessed Eastertide
Will find that sweet face glorified.
And, though, for Jesus' sake, some flowers
may blow,
No face with deeper love, I know,
Will smile, because its leaves unclose
The day when Jesus rose.

FLORENCE LOCKWOOD BOOTH.

The above poem is probably the last ever written by Mrs. Booth, and its tenderness and purity of sentiment make it well worthy of preservation.

The Song I Never Sing.

As when in dreams we sometimes hear
A melody so faint and fine,
And musically sweet and clear,
It flavors all the atmosphere
With harmony divine;
So, often in my waking dreams,
I hear a melody that seems
Like fairy voices wispering
To me the song I never sing.

Sometimes when brooding o'er the years
My lavish youth has thrown away,
When all the glowing past appears
But as a mirage that my tears
Have crumbled to decay,
I thrill to find the ache and pain
Of my remorse is stilled again,
As, forward bent and listening,
I hear the song I never sing.

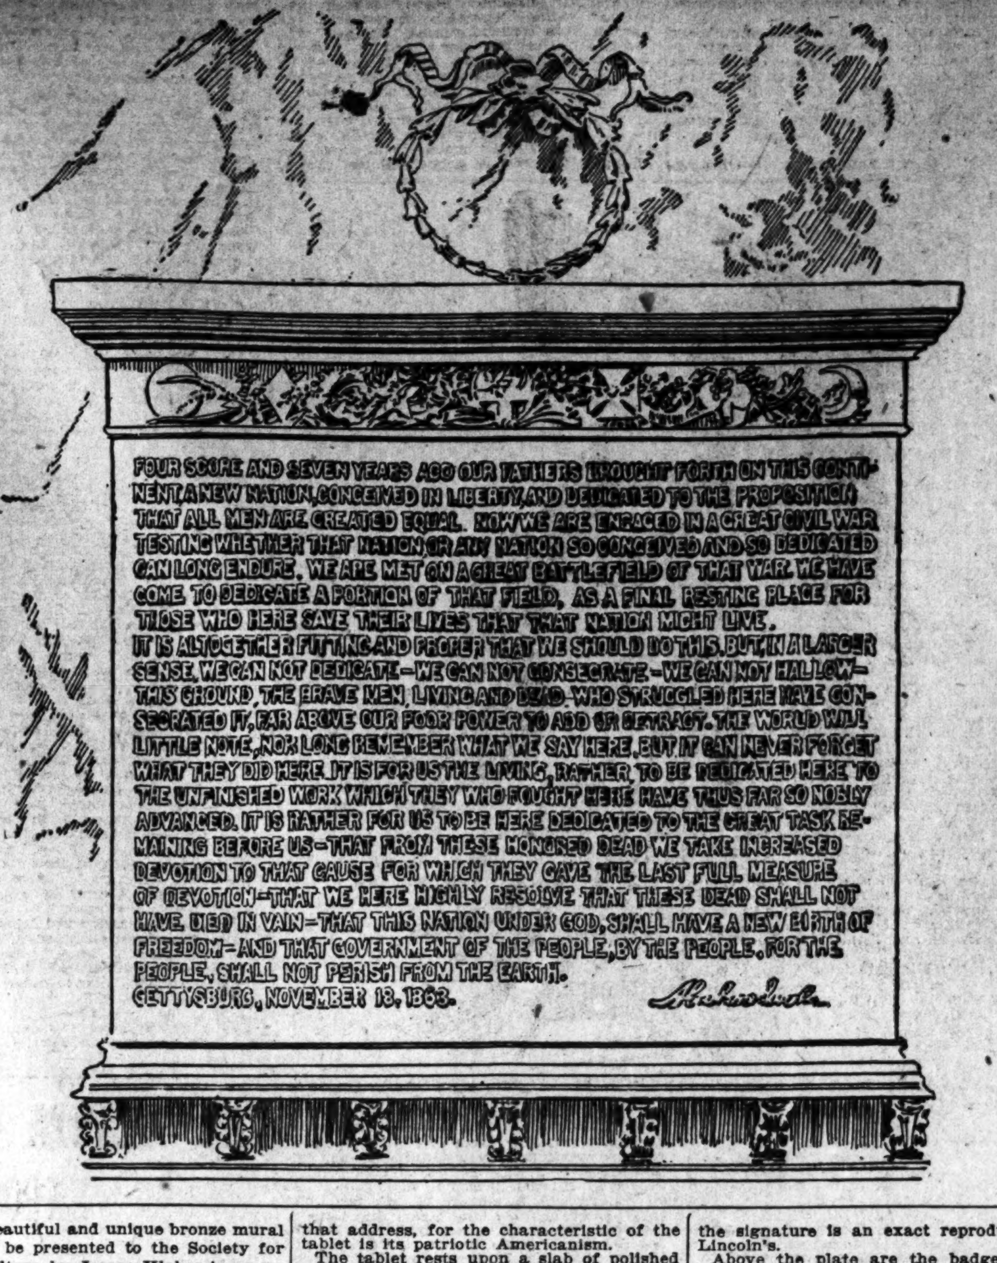
A murmuring of rhythmic words,
Adrift on tunes whose currents flow
Melodious with the thrill of birds,
And far-off lowing of the herds
In lands of long ago;
And every sound the truant loves
Comes to me like the coo of doves,
When first in blooming fields of spring
I hear the song I never sing.

The echoes of old voices, wound
In limpid streams of laughter where
The river Time runs bubble-crowned,
And giddy eddies ripple round
The lillies growing there;
Where roses bending o'er the brink,
Drain their own kisses as they drink,
And ivies climb and twine and cling
About the song I never sing.

An ocean surge of sound that falls
As though a tide of heavenly art
Had tempested the gleaming halls
And crested o'er the golden walls
In showers upon my heart.
Thus, thus, with open arms and eyes
Uplifted toward the alien skies,
Forgetting every earthly thing,
I hear the song I never sing.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S GREATEST ORATION CAST IN BRONZE.



FOUR SCORE AND SEVEN YEARS AGO OUR FATHERS BROUGHT FORTH ON THIS CONTINENT A NEW NATION, CONCEIVED IN LIBERTY, AND DEDICATED TO THE PROPOSITION THAT ALL MEN ARE CREATED EQUAL. NOW WE ARE ENGAGED IN A GREAT CIVIL WAR TESTING WHETHER THAT NATION, OR ANY NATION SO CONCEIVED AND SO DEDICATED CAN LONG ENDURE. WE ARE MET ON A GREAT BATTLEFIELD OF THAT WAR. WE HAVE COME TO DEDICATE A PORTION OF THAT FIELD, AS A FINAL RESTING PLACE FOR THOSE WHO HERE GAVE THEIR LIVES THAT THAT NATION MIGHT LIVE.
IT IS ALTOGETHER FITTING AND PROPER THAT WE SHOULD DO THIS. BUT, IN A LARGER SENSE, WE CAN NOT DEDICATE—WE CAN NOT CONSECRATE—WE CAN NOT HALLOW—THIS GROUND. THE BRAVE MEN, LIVING AND DEAD, WHO STRUGGLED HERE HAVE CONSECRATED IT, FAR ABOVE OUR POOR POWER TO ADD OR DETRACT. THE WORLD WILL LITTLE NOTE, NOR LONG REMEMBER WHAT WE SAY HERE, BUT IT CAN NEVER FORGET WHAT THEY DID HERE. IT IS FOR US THE LIVING, RATHER, TO BE DEDICATED HERE TO THE UNFINISHED WORK WHICH THEY WHO FOUGHT HERE HAVE THUS FAR SO NOBLY ADVANCED. IT IS RATHER FOR US TO BE HERE DEDICATED TO THE GREAT TASK REMAINING BEFORE US—THAT FROM THESE HONORED DEAD WE TAKE INCREASED DEVOTION TO THAT CAUSE FOR WHICH THEY GAVE THE LAST FULL MEASURE OF DEVOTION—THAT WE HERE HIGHLY RESOLVE THAT THESE DEAD SHALL NOT HAVE DIED IN VAIN—THAT THIS NATION UNDER GOD, SHALL HAVE A NEW BIRTH OF FREEDOM—AND THAT GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE, FOR THE PEOPLE, SHALL NOT PERISH FROM THE EARTH.
GETTYSBURG, NOVEMBER 18, 1863.
Abraham Lincoln

A very beautiful and unique bronze mural tablet will be presented to the Society for Ethical Culture by James Klaber in memory of his son and will adorn the society house, No. 669 Madison avenue, New York. The tablet contains that world-famed utterance, Abraham Lincoln's address at Gettysburg, Nov. 18, 1863, and its American designer has been guided by the spirit of that address, for the characteristic of the tablet is its patriotic Americanism.

The tablet rests upon a slab of polished serpentine stone, beautifully marked, which, appropriately, comes from Pennsylvania, in which State the battle was fought and Lincoln delivered the address. The tablet proper is supported by seven consoles enriched with decorations of "blue-eyed grass." The address is in raised Doric characters on the plate, easily legible, while the signature is an exact reproduction of Lincoln's.

Above the plate are the badges of the seven Union army corps that took part in the battle, intertwined with sprays of camass, blue-eyed grass, Oswego mint, primrose and arrowhead—all American wildflowers. Above the frieze and resting on the cornice is a wreath of laurel. The whole design is extremely chaste and graceful.

The Wagner Place Methodist Sunday-school will give a picnic at Ramona Park on Thursday, June 20.

The first moonlight excursion given by the managers of the Woman's Training School took place yesterday evening and was a decided success. There will be six more during the summer.

The Provident Association of St. Louis has expended since its organization $682,508.85 for the benefit of the poor.

Among the St. Louis ladies who have sailed to attend the World's Temperance Convention in London are Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, Mrs. Clara Hoffman and Miss Belle Kearney, all earnest workers in the cause of temperance.

The Epworth Leagues of the St. Louis District of the M. E. Church South met at 10 o'clock on Friday morning at the Lafayette Park M. E. Church.

The annual convention of the Sunday-schools of the Christian Church will be held at Marshall, Mo., beginning to-morrow and lasting until the 13th.

The Sunday-school Union will organize a new school on Chouteau avenue near Third street, where there are about 3,000 children who never attend any Sunday-school. This new school will be run by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Pilgrim Congregational Church.

A large number of ladies were present at the second meeting of the Flower Mission on Wednesday morning at the Matron's office at the Union Station. A large quantity of flowers were sent by Mrs. A. S. Mermod and Mrs. F. D. Kimball of Kirkwood, Mrs. M. R. Wood of Allenton, Mrs. N. D. Thompson, Mrs. J. W. Slaughter, Miss Helfenstein, Mrs. H. F. Hafner and Mrs. W. Bell of Webster, who also sent $1.

The flowers were made into 300 bouquets and distributed as follows: 75 bouquets at the City Hospital, 26 at the Martha Parson Hospital for children, 40 at the St. Louis Children's Hospital, 38 at the Baptist Hospital, 25 at the Good Samaritan, 20 at the Protestant, literature accompanying the flowers. Among the ladies appointed to visit the hospitals were Mrs. H. F. Hafner, Miss Lida Menzie, Mrs. Hunt Smith, Mrs. Charles McKee and Miss Lillie Wolfe. The ladies meet at the same place again on Wednesday.

The Board of Managers of the Methodist Home Association have been made happy by the munificent gift of $80,000 from Mr. Samuel Cupples for the erection of a new home. The ladies have been trying for years to get money for a new home, as the old building on Laclede is in very bad condition. They will erect a new home costing $100,000 and have an endowment of $150,000.

The most beautiful and comfortable Orphans' Home connected with the charitable work of St. Louis ladies is the Home at Webster Groves, and the beautiful grounds furnish a cool and comfortable asylum for the little orphans during the warm season. The ladies connected with the Home are very vigilant in their attentions to the comforts and needs of the inmates and visit them often, although the home is ten miles from the city.

Several handsome bequests to charitable organizations of the city were left by the late John C. Collins. Among them was $1,500 to the Home Mission of the M. E. Church South; $1,000 to the Foreign Mission of the M. E. Church South; to the Memorial Home $500; in trust for the Woman's Parsonage and Home Society $1,000.

A visit to Bethesda Home for Foundlings during the past week by a representative of the Sunday Post-Dispatch found the nursery filled with tiny representatives of humanity, all bearing the heat as well as could be expected. The nurses do all they can to make their little charges comfortable, but they need a larger and more commodious home, with a shady yard, where the little ones can get plenty of fresh air upon days like those of last week.

The Children's Home Society on the corner of Sixteenth and Olive streets is well filled with little children, who seem very happy, to judge from their appearance. The nursery department is flourishing and they all play together in the side yard during these warm days.

ROME'S CARDINALS.

There Are Now But Sixty, of Whom Thirty-three Are Italians.

From the London Daily News.

The death of Cardinal Despres, Archbishop of Toulouse, has, our Paris Correspondent says, reduced the number of French Cardinals to six, and the death of Cardinal Benavices y Navarrete, Archbishop of Saragosso only leaves sixty Cardinals who would, in the event of the Pope's demise, meet at Rome in Sacred College to elect his successor. It happens that the proportion of "foreigners" to Italians is larger than it has been for centuries, thirty-three Cardinals being Italians and twenty-seven of other nationalities.

At the present moment France and Germany have each six Cardinals. Each Government is anxious to have other Cardinals, in order to increase its influence at the next conclave. Some possible candidates for the Papacy are supposed to be friendly to the Triple Alliance, while others pass for being in favor of France. When a French Government goes in for anti-clericalism the Pope can show his displeasure by refusing to create further Cardinals in France, and this is keenly felt even by free-thinking politicians. England is the only great Western power that does not go a footstep out of her way to get new Cardinals. She has only one Cardinal, Mgr. Vaughan. Ireland has Cardinal Logue, Australia has Cardinal Moran, Archbishop of Sidney, and Canada Cardinal Taschereau, Archbishop of Quebec. The Sacred College includes five Austrians, three Spaniards, two Portuguese, one Belgian, and an American, Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore. All the rest are Italians.

Provoking.

From the Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Trott: "Oh, I only went into town on a shopping tour."

Mrs. Streete: "Did you? Tell me all about it; did you have a real good time?"

Mrs. Trott: "Not at all. I found what I wanted in the very first store I went into."

Mrs. Streete: "How provoking!"

The Cheerful Idiot.

From the Indianapolis Journal.

"I hear," said the Cheerful Idiot, "that they are talking of revising the costume of the Goddess of Liberty."

"And what will it be, pray?" asked the typewriter boarder, who has a wheel.

"Red, white and bloomers," said the Cheerful Idiot.

MAKING A BUST OF THE BRITISH MINISTER.

(SIR JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE SITTING TO U. S. J. DUNBAR, THE SCULPTOR, FOR A LIFE-SIZE LIKENESS IN CLAY.)

Sir Julian Pauncefort, the British Ambassador, has had, during the past six weeks, fourteen sittings with Mr. U. S. J. Dunbar of Washington, who has modeled a bust, the artistic merit of which the photograph will show. Mr. Dunbar, although a Canadian by birth, is an American citizen by adoption, and has more than a local reputation. He works with great rapidity, but with a highly artistic touch. The bust will be shortly cast in plaster, and Mr. Dunbar hopes to be able to put it in marble some time this fall, after Sir Julian's return from England, for which he will sail next week. Mr. Dunbar says that the British diplomatist is one of the most patient of sitters, never becoming irritated by the somewhat tedious task of doing nothing while the sculptor is doing his best to make a lump of clay look like him.

"This is quite in contrast with the average American sitter," says Mr. Dunbar, "for all Americans have the national characteristics of nervousness and impatience. This clay," continued Mr. Dunbar, patting Sir Julian's bust familiarly on the shoulder, "has done duty for the last ten years in modeling the busts of many notable Americans, Chief Justice Waite and Vice President Hendricks among them."

ON SEA AND STRAND, BY LAKES AND MOUNTAINS.

Where Prominent St. Louisans Will Spend Their Summer Vacations.

Numerous Parties Have Been Arranged to Tour the Continent.

Local Missouri Resorts Will Be Better Patronized Than Ever Before.

When the summer comes the denizens of big cities get away not from the sun but from the baked streets and the crowded thoroughfares and the stifling rows of houses. They want to get away from the everlasting panorama of brick and stone and feast their eyes on green fields and running water, to fill their lungs with air fresh with the flavor of nature. Everybody can't leave the town, but everyone with half a chance will get away this summer. The number of European tourists is exceptionally large. Although the good ship St. Louis did not carry many St. Louisans on her inaugural trip, her bookings for subsequent voyages will contain the names of many St. Louisans.

A feature of the local vacation season this year is the popularity of the local resorts. The lovely Arcadia Valley will be dotted with rusticating St. Louisans. Meramec Highlands and the suburbs will be well filled with folk from town.

Prominent society people and their summer destinations are enumerated below:

Foreign Tourists.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Alexander sailed May 18 for foreign lands. They will spend four months abroad.

Miss Matilda Anderson, accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. Largue, sailed early in May to spend the summer in Europe.

Mrs. Lewis D. Allen of Westminster place has gone to Europe to spend the summer.

Judge and Mrs. Elmer B. Adams, after a visit to her mother in Vermont, will go to Europe in July.

Mrs. George S. Beers and her daughter, Miss Ella Beers, will leave in June to spend two or three months in Europe.

Mrs. Samuel Breckenridge, accompanied by her youngest daughter, Miss Elizabeth Breckenridge, will leave for Liverpool June 19, sailing by the Majestic. They will spend the summer in travel through the British Isles and on the Continent, and will spend the winter in Russia.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Block will leave June 15 to spend the summer in travel abroad.

Mrs. Kate Broaddus will leave about the middle of June for Europe, where she will spend three months in travel, chaperoning a party of young ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Baer will spend the summer in Europe.

Mrs. E. A. Busch went to Europe with a party of friends about the middle of May.

Mrs. Augusta Boeckelmann sailed the last of April for Bremen, and will spend the summer with relatives in Germany.

Dr. John L. Boogher sailed by the steamship Trave on the 30th of May for Bremen. He goes to pursue his medical studies.

Miss Thekla Bernays has gone to Europe. She is visiting relatives in Berlin and will make a general tour abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Busch and the Misses Minnie, Clara and Anna Busch left May 28 for New York, from whence they sailed for Germany to remain during the summer at their picturesque castle on the Rhine.

Mrs. Deane Cooper and her son, Mr. Thomas Cooper, will sail June 20 by the Normannia for Hamburg and make a tour of Norway. They go to Russia in August.

Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Chaddock sailed June 1 for Liverpool and will spend the summer on the Continent.

Mr. Alonzo Church, who will be married to Miss Carlotta Clark June 25, will leave at once for New York, whence he will sail with his bride for foreign shores, intending to spend the remainder of the summer in Sweden.

Miss Katharine Cunningham has joined Miss Garesche's party of European tourists, who sail June 15.

Mr. D. Crawford and family will sail on the 11th of June for Scotland.

ABOVE THE DREAD MAELSTROM

A Daring Frenchman Hung in a Balloon.

ITS TERRORS PICTURED.

The Whirlpool Photographed From Mid-Air—Graphic Narration of a Thrilling Adventure.

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Once again a legend of romance has been torn to shreds at the hands of science, and demolished by the wink of the camera's shutter. The old maelstrom of the Norwegian coast, one of the harrowing subjects of the school of romanticists and tale-bearers, exists no longer as regards the horrors that have been painted of it by imaginative pens. A daring Frenchman skimmed across its surface the other day in a basket that swung a hundred feet below the car of a balloon, and, suspended 'twixt heaven and the torrent, unconcernedly took instantaneous photographs of the whirlpool's seething waves.

He found that, after all, the maelstrom was not the frightful watery abyss that tradition and folk lore had been depicting it for centuries. Down in his little basket, oscillating to and fro, almost within reach of the slapping waves, he felt no fear. There, in a spot where no mortal man had ever been before, the first on earth to see the whirlpool of the world as it really was, he learned, and he has brought back tangible proofs of the unlying lens, that the maelstrom is simply a succession and conglomeration of torrents, eddies and currents, eddies and currents in which no small boat could live, but through which any large vessel properly handled, might pass to safety .

A more important piece of news, a more valuable bit of contribution to the day-book of science, has seldom been given out. One by one the old myths of the world, dating back to the time when fairies, elves and goblins, gods and demons, giants, satyrs and pigmies were believed in, are being disproved by careful investigation. The tradition of the maelstrom is the latest to go.

To-day along with the Napoleonic revival, has come the re-entrance into popularity of Edgar Allen Poe. Among American authors of all dates and eras none enjoys greater poplarity throughout the continent than the shabby story teller of Fordham. In France especially, he has long been hailed as America's greatest romanticist, and Frenchmen rank him very near indeed to Guy de Maupassant. It is curious that just at the hour of the revival of his works in this country and abroad a savant of Paris should have exploded with cold facts one of the most dramatic of his tales.

"A Descent Into the Malestrom" stands in imaginative force well in the class of those short stories headed by the "Black Cat." Until now it has always been believed to have been the exact truth. Few more wonderful descriptions have been written than the tale of the sturdy Norse fisherman and his brothers who, overtaken by storm, with their boat laden down by fish, and before they knew it and could prevent it, were driven by the currents and tides into the full force of the "Moskoestrom."

"I dragged my watch from its fob. It was not going. I glanced at its face by the moonlight, and then burst into tears, as I flung it far away into the ocean. It had run down at 7 o'clock. We were behind the time of the slack, and the whirl of the storm was in full fury!

"I would not have believed that any wave could rise so high. And then down we came with a sweep, a slide, and a plunge, that made me feel sick and dizzy, as if I was falling from some lofty top in a dream. The Moskoe-strom whirlpool was about a quarter of a mile dead ahead—but no more like the every day Moskoe-strom than the whirl as you now see it is like a mill-race. The boat made a sharp half turn to larboard, and then shot off in its new direction like a thunderbolt. At the same moment the roaring noise of the water was completely drowned in a kind of shrill shriek. We were now in the belt of surf that always surrounds the whirl; and I thought, of course, that another moment would plunge us into the abyss—down which we could only see indistinctly on account of the amazing velocity with which we were borne along. The boat did not seem to sink into the water at all, but to swim along like an air bubble upon the surface of the surge. Her starboard side was next the whirl, and on the larboard arose the world of ocean we had left. It stood like a huge writhing wall between us and the horizon.

"We gave a wild lurch to starboard and rushed headlong into the abyss. I muttered a hurried prayer to God, and thought all was over. As I felt the sickening sweep of the descent, I had instinctively tightened my hold upon the barrel and closed my eyes. For some seconds I dared not open them. But moment after moment elapsed. I still lived. Never shall I forget the sensation of awe, horror and admiration with which I gazed about me. The boat appeared to be hanging, as if by magic, midway down, upon the interior surface of a funnel vast in circumference, prodigious in depth, and whose perfectly smooth sides might have been mistaken for ebony but for the bewildering rapidity with which they spun around and for the gleaming and ghastly radiance they shed forth, as the rays of the full moon, from that circular rift among the clouds, streamed in a flood of golden glory along the black walls and far away down into the inmost recesses of the abyss.

"The rays of the moon seemed to search the very bottom of the profound gulf, over which there hung a magnificent rainbow, like that narrow and tottering bridge which Mussulmen say is the only pathway between Time and Eternity. This mist or spray was no doubt occasioned by the clashing of the great walls of the funnel as they all met together at the bottom, but the yell that went up to the heavens from out that mist I dare not attempt to describe.

"Our first slide into the abyss itself, from the belt of foam above, had carried us to a great distance from the slope; but out farther descent was by no means proportionate. Round and round we swept—not with any uniform movement, but in dizzying swings and jerks, that sent us sometimes only a few hundred yards—sometimes nearly the complete circle of the whirl. Our progress downward at each revolution was slow, but very perceptible.

"My gaze fell instinctively downward. In this direction I was able to obtain an unobstructed view, from the manner in which the smack hung on the inclined surface of the pool. She was quite upon an even keel—that is to say, her deck lay in a plane parallel with that of the water—but this latter sloped at an angle of more than 45 degrees, so that we seemed to be lying on our beam-ends. I could not help observing, nevertheless, that I had scarcely more difficulty in maintaining my hold and footing in this situation than if we had been upon a dead level, and this I suppose was owing to the speed at which we revolved."

In describing the whirlpool from the cliff that overlooks it, Poe makes his story teller say: "Here the vast bed of the waters, seamed and scarred into a thousand conflicting channels, burst suddenly into frenzied convulsion—heaving, boiling, hissing—gyrating in gigantic and innumerable vortices, and all whirling and plunging on to the eastward with the rapidity which water never elsewhere assumes, except in precipitous descents.

"In a few minutes more there came over the scene another radical alteration. The general surface grew somewhat more smooth. Suddenly—very suddenly—this assumed a distinct and definite existence in a circle of more than a mile in diameter. The edge of the whirl was represented by a broad belt of gleaming spray—but no particle of this slipped into the mouth of the terrific funnel, whose interior, so far as the eye could fathom it, was a smooth, shining and jet black wall of water, inclined to the horizon at an angle of some forty-five degrees, speeding dizzily round and round with a swaying and sweltering motion, and sending forth to the winds an appalling voice, half shriek, half roar, such as even the mighty cataract of Niagara ever lifts up in its agony to heaven."

To explore this waste of untamable waters, by hanging over them in a fragile basket, swinging by slight cables from a balloon car, is a plan that would only have suggested itself to a man immersed in modern science and willing to prove his theories by risking his life for them. That is exactly what the Frenchman Castellani did April 26 last, when he journeyed up to Norway, and stationed his friend, Latruffe, an experienced aeronaut, in the balloon car, and himself, camera in hand, embarked in the tiny basket and ordered the balloon to be loosened and Latruffe to direct its course from the little fishing village on one of the Isles of Loffoden across the Moskoestrom to the rocky island of Veroe. The passage in lower mid-air with the basket at times but 100 feet above the surface of the seething waters, took scarcely an hour, but this time was sufficient to prove the real terrors of the Maelstrom to have been a fairy tale and to make Castellani a Stanley of the sea.

His life was in his hands as he swung in his wicker cradle just above the towering billows, leaning over the edge with an insouciance that was sublime, snap-shooting meanwhile, as if he had been on a tennis field. The day was dark and the sky was lowering. The sea was just at the end of a tempest from the Northwest that had lashed it into fury twenty-four hours before, and the mountainous billows had not yet subsided. Such was the exact condition of affairs that Castellani wished. His project was to take the Maelstrom at as near its worst as possible, and he ventured out with his balloon at the first moment the winds would allow him an opportunity of guidance.

As it was, the frail airship came very near being blown out to sea by the veering currents which rendered aerial navigation almost impracticable. Only the skill of the aeronaut, Latruffe, saved them. With the balloon they had brought, carboys of acid and a complete set of instruments to make the gas, the whole apparatus weighing nearly 3,000 kilogrammes, or four long tons, a kilogramme being equal to 2.67 pounds. The couple made their famous trip on April 26, and arrived in Paris on May 10. The half dozen photographs obtained were taken on the most sensitive plates known to the camera world, and despite the fogs, the mists and the cloudy sky, Castellani obtained pictures that are fit to have high ranking in sea photography, and besides are the most unique specimens of photographic art that exist in the world to-day.

This expedition through the air is all the more wonderful and remarkable when it comes to be realized that the slightest misadventure would have resulted in Castellani's death. It was infinitely more hazardous than ballooning proper, for a balloon is at the mercy of the air current alone. Down in his little basket Castellani was at the mercy of the waves as well. A drop of a few feet in the balloon, which might readily have been caused by the striking of a new current, a sudden changing of wind or a thousand and one chances, would have plunged him into the trough of the whirl and torn his basket from its cables as easily as a woman snaps a bit of thread. For, lamb-like as the Maelstrom really is, as Castellani's close view of it has proved, in comparison with the yarns that skilled romancers have spun, it is a sufficiently terrible sea and sufficiently cruel and treacherous.

Castellani's story of the way the Maelstrom looked and of his experiences in the basket from the moment he left Loffoden to the time the grappling anchor from the car above first caught the cliff of Veroe, is best told in his own words, for the drama is best expressed in the Gallic phrasings:

"After a long and difficult as well as dangerous series of trials, of which I will not give the technical details, made under almost impossible conditions, the balloon was inflated and we left the earth about 5:30 in the afternoon, blown by a feeble wind from the northeast in the direction of Veroe.

"A few moments later the fog enveloped us, but it was not of sufficient thickness to prevent our being able to see clearly an island some distance away.

"It seemed to me that we were slanting slightly downward, towards the left, and I heard M. Latruffe call to me that he was opening the valve, adding these words:

" 'Do not be uneasy. All is going well. We are going to approach the surface of the water.'

"And then I saw the sea rapidly approaching me, and heard the clamor of the waters rising and falling in mountain-like masses. I could not have been more than thirty metres (less than 100 feet) above the boiling surface.

"There was a tugging at my heart strings.

"We stopped sharply in our descent, and several shocks came, one more violent than the others, which made my basket whirl like a top, and it was with difficulty that I could keep myself inside.

" 'Fear nothing!' cried Latruffe. 'It is the buoy I have thrown overboard with the cone anchor, and both of them have been torn away.'

"Immediately after I felt sand dropping on my head, and blown by the wind, I saw Latruffe's visored cap float away far above the water, as if it was some new sort of unfeathered bird.

"I peered into the waters beneath me, and with great difficulty I perceived directly below, a deep, dark gulf belted with foam, which seemed to me in the midst of the tumbling waters, to give every sign of being a vast whirlpool. I levelled my camera in that direction and, snapping the shutter rapidly, had the time to take three or four views.

"The air was far from clear, and the fog which had shadowed itself in the morning had sensibly increased and prevented me from distinguishing the rock of Veroe, otherwise than as a vague spot, drawing rapidly nearer and nearer, and increasing in size. As we swept on in a straight course, it finally appeared to me in all its details.

" 'Mount quickly,' cried the Captain (Latruffe).

"I did not stop to pray, for the necessity of speedy action was apparent. We were already close to land, close to the rocky cliffs of Veroe, and my basket was swinging like a pendulum. A moment more and it would have been dashed against the cliff, and I would have been dashed to pieces like a dog, and with as little ceremony. Hand over hand, hardly stopping to breathe I worked my way up the slender cables, and grasped the rope ladder that hung for a few feet below the car. Quickly I placed myself beside my companion.

" 'Now, carefully,' said he to me, 'turn the valve. I will take care of the steering. Let us try to land between the big and the little rock just before us, those above the huts.' "

"As if they arose out of the waste of waters the rocks came suddenly before our eyes. There was hardly time to draw a single breath before a violent shock, happily softened by the snow with which the hollow was filled, threw us on top of each other at the bottom of the car, I above, Latruffe below.

"The balloon stopped short.

"The grapple that Latruffe had thrown out before our overturn, had caught on the instant. It was the luck of a thousand years. I started to spring out, but my companion restrained me.

" 'Wait until I let all the gas escape,' he cried.

"I had not considered that in abandoning the car I was risking seeing the balloon, relieved of my weight, shoot up into the air, bearing away Latruffe. Finally we were able to climb out of the car. In my joy I could hardly keep from dancing a jig when my feet touched the ground. Our task was over. The fishers who lived in the huts at the foot of the mountain ran up and helped us fold the balloon, an undertaking that was not easy, because of the fog and the intense cold.

"These brave fishermen, at first astonished, rendered us valuable aid in dragging the cars and balloon down to their huts. Their wonder was not so great as one might have imagined, for news of our expedition had reached them with remarkable quickness, and the balloon was expected. We passed a wretched night in one of the cabins, and the next day returned to Mosekenes with our balloon in a little fishing-boat which we had hired for that purpose. When we arrived we received a veritable ovation."

"Now that I think it over, the adventure does not seem dangerous, but I would not go through it again.

"I admit that once, when the wind seemed about to change and to carry us out across the ocean into the terrible night, from whence we might never return, that I was afraid. It is no light thing, after all, to have discovered that the maelstrom is very nearly a blague (a joke, that is), or, at least, a phenomenon of little importance compared with the reputation which it has enjoyed throughout the world.

"It is a singular thing that we found no one en route who was able to give us any exact information regarding the importance of the phenomenon which I can now declare to be nothing more than a whirlpool, dangerous for small boats, but not at all for ships. I consider that the gulf in question, judging from what I have seen, is five or six metres across (twenty feet) at the most. Perhaps in the high tides it becomes more considerable, but we saw it at all events at very nearly its worst, but without doubt the poets and romancers have been led away by the old legends.

"Nevertheless our researches and our tangible proof should not detract from the fantastic interest of the story of Edgar Poe or the magnificent romance of Jules Verne, which latter tells of the disappearance of a ship beneath these raging waters. I will add, to console the amateurs of the drama, that the great current of the Maelstrom presented to us a majestic and passably terrible spectacle. This tumultuous torrent gives an impression all its own, an impression entirely different, with its shifting and flying foam, from that of waves raised by the tempests. It is by hundreds that are formed the tumultuous whirlpools, some of greater, others of lesser diameter; but, I repeat it, the Maelstrom presents no abysses, vast or otherwise, such as have been described."

A Simple Tale of Love and Storm in the Hamlet of Pilhoel.

I.

It was at the little hamlet of Pilhoel, one of the wildest on the coast of Brittany, almost savage in its environment of blue rocks, the rugged crests of which were reddened by the setting sun; with the sea, rampant like a chained lion, or furious and hurling its sonorous waves to the very thresholds of the houses above; while, inland, the country was sheltered and smiling with flowers in all seasons, as in a greenhouse—a sunny zone, where camelias blossomed in the open air.

At that time Pilhoel was a corner unknown there to sketch took care not to lead thither to tourists; and a few painters who went the crowd of elegants and curious. Fifty houses at most, all inhabited by fishermen, stood under the shadow of the ruined church, the cracked bell of which frightened even the sea-gulls on the shore. During the working days of the week none but women with children hanging to their skirts were to be seen moving about between the dwelling places. All the men were away fishing.

On Sundays their long nets were spread along the weather-stained white of the house walls, holding in their meshes silver spangles which glittered in the light, and there was a world of poor people, all resigned, pious and knowing nothing of the unwholesome dreamings of city dwelllers, but full of faith and courage.

There is in France—at least, on the borders of the sea—no village, however humble, which has not its pearl of beauty. It was no untruth so to call Jeanne, the prettiest girl in Pilhoel. The humblest garments—for she was one of the poorest girls in the hamlet—could not disguise her inherent grace and beauty. Her superbly designed bare feet, her little hands, which hard toil had often wounded, were signs unconquerable of natural aristocracy. Good and modest above all the girls about her, she had none the less a love secret in her heart.

She was 16, and he whom she loved was four years older, a handsome youth, who, equally with herself, felt the flow of noble blood in his veins. Something of instinctive worth was betrayed in his least gestures, and a proud melancholy was strongly expresssed in his face. He was skillful in his calling and bravest of the brave; with all that, a dreamer, taking little part in the Sunday sports on the square in front of the church, but oftener at the hour when Jeanne was listening to the vespers and singing the verses, re-entering the holy building, and at the foot of the pillar contemplating her in shadow scarcely penetrated by the yelllow rays of the altar candles, or wandering away to the deserted seashore to think of her, the music of the waves seeming to bear away to far-off horizons the frail bark of his unspoken hopes.

What was it separated these two beings, so completely made to unite their laborious and resigned existence? Their common poverty. Both were orphans. Loehic had earned his scanty living in service on the boats, and only, at last, had been able to buy one for himself, and such a boat!—the oldest and most sea-battered of the little fleet.

As to Jeanne, she had been reared by her old Aunt Mathurine, who had brought her up with infinite tenderness, but at the same time promising herself not to allow her niece to marry any but a man who would be in a position to assure her (Mathurine) a comfortable provision for her old age. For there is always a basis of selfishness in our devotion.

This man she had chosen without saying anything about it; it was Mathias, the pilot, who was looked up to by the whole fishing community of the little hamlet. A rough man, with his weather-beaten face and hands of bronze, yet hale and hearty in spite of his 50 years; who had often faced death, from whom he had snatched his intended victims, and who had made enough fortune to insure his ease and allow him to retire from his perilous calling. He had known Jeanne in her infancy, had danced her on his knees, and had seen her grow with increasing and affectionate interest. And Mathurine, who had the natural sharpness of all peasants, had guessed that the old pilot was in love with this flower of grace, slowly spreading under his eyes.

But Mathias was no fool, and when he thought of his age he laughed at himself and again became paternal with the young girl, who, innocent creature, had never even suspected the combat that was being waged in the old sailor's heart. With him she was always the same—simple, frank, and sometimes cruelly charming; admiring him, but in the way in which patriarchs are venerated.

All her tenderness was reserved for Loehic, and, knowing that her aunt was opposed to her marriage with him, she had resolved to remain unwed rather than become the wife of any other man. She had sworn it to him one evening when they had met upon the shore in the soft moonlight, broken by the sea into a rain of gold; at one of those mysterious hours, sweet to lovers, when their hearts seem to open widest to solemn confidences, when their souls bathe deliciously in the same concert of abandonment and sincerity; he had even placed upon her finger a ring in remembrance of her promise—a poor brass ring, but one which Monseigneur, the Bishop, had blessed at the last consecration.

"Before God I am your betrothed," she said to him, all her soul vibrating in her voice, "and death alone can part my thoughts from yours!"

And both had melted into tears, the bitter drops of which ran down to their lips, mingling with the salt vapors rising from the waves and the tossing seaweeds from the shore. And from the shelter of a block of granite in the lande, he had plucked a wild flower and given it to her, and she had placed it between two leaves of her poor "Book of Hours," the face towards a picture of the Virgin bearing this epitaph: "Ave Maris Stella." And she turned her eyes toward a star on the golden eyelashes of which a tear of pity seemed to tremble.

Both had moved away, overcome by this idyl, but confident in each other, expecting nothing of men, but everything from some marvelous and heavenly intervention, which would not permit the future viewed by them with a like tenderness to be forever destroyed, or that such a dream as theirs should be the eternal despair of their lives.

After that supreme interview, existence had, so to speak, returned to them. Loehic every day, without rest or truce, risked his life in his miserable boat for trifling gains; and Jennie repaired the nets of old or unmarried fishermen for a small piece of money, which Aunt Mathurine dropped into the throat of a nearly empty purse.

II.

There was a fete that day at Pilhoel. The pilot, Mathias, had solemnly retired. He had said farewell to the fleet he commanded, and his old companions, to do him honor, and in gratitude for the services he had rendered them, organized a series of rejoicings.

As soon as it was daylight they went to his cottage, to play the drum and fire guns and pistols under his windows. Then the maidens brought him a large bouquet, which was presented by Jeanne, which made the old sailor's tanned face blush as red as a peony with pleasure. Then full cups of the best cider—which had been bottled months before in anticipation of the event—were drained, and the glory of the old pilot was commemorated in song.

Loehic had not been the least active in all these proceedings; for he felt towards Mathias a childlike admiration mixed with a confiding sympathy. Many times he had been on the point of confessing to him his tenderness for Jeanne and asking his advice—for how could he, for a moment, imagine that venerable Mathias had ever regarded her with other than fatherly feelings? At 20, people think those who are 50 years of age veritable Methusalehs.

As was proper, this touching ceremony was not left without its comic side. This was secured to it by Aunt Mathurine, by the offering of a pair of slippers embroidered by herself—a garden in tapestry, with roses resembling cabbages and birds that might readily be mistaken for gnats; for Mathruine had, in her youth, been in service in one of the large towns, and had acquired genteel accomplishments. The old sailor, who had never in his life worn anything but sabots, felt an enormous temptation to burst into a roar of laughter.

"SAVE HIM AND I WILL BE YOUR WIFE."

"If it makes no difference to you, Mathurine," he said, "I'll wear 'em on my hands in winter time, to play the dandy in at high mass."

And, by the way of thanks, he clapped on the old girl's two cheeks a pair of such hearty kisses as, for a moment, made her teeth rattle in her head like castanets.

Everybody had that morning made holiday for this rejoicing, which was followed by a copious repast, and ended with a rigadoon, accompanied by Mathurine on the guitar—a superannuated instrument which had been given to her by one of her old employers, and which distilled under her meager fingers some vinegar notes, falling drop by drop, as it were, into the tormented ear. But they had no refined notions as to music at Pilhoel, and so this performance of Aunt Mathurine, embroidered by the gruntings of a bagpipe, played by a lad whose execution had come to him naturally and wholly without study, seemed to all who heard it as charming as any music could be.

All this reveling had filled the morning down to 1 o'clock, and the time was then come for putting off to sea, to make up for the early lost hours of the day.

It was in the month of September, and the forenoon had been particularly bright. The sun had risen over the ocean in mist, which had speedily been consumed by its rays and had melted, like the last cloud of smoke at a conflagration, into the rosy light. The intense azure of the zenith paled down to the horizon, where the blue of the sea blended with that of the sky in a long kiss—the insensible line between reality and dream, between the region of stars and the region of tempests.

The mild air—too warm, perhaps, for the season—was scarcely tinctured with salt, but laden with the life-giving perfumes, the nourishing breath of the immense living thing which breathes along the land and warms it with the beatings of its heart. On seeing the few tiny copper clouds which the dawn had rapidly driven before it, some of the weather prophets had said that the day would not pass without a storm.

But this threat seemed to have withdrawn behind the glittering curtains of the firmament, and in the gayeties of Mathias' fete had passed from the minds of all. Joyously, therefore, the sails had been unbound from the masts, dressed with flags for the occasion, when, suddenly and unexpectedly, they were caught by a rude puff of wind and filled even before they were completely spread, while a violet-hued vapor rose above the horizon, presently shaping itself into a long, slate-colored blade, widening itself obliquely, and cutting the azure sky as with a shadow knife.

"There'll be a tempest presently!" said Mathias. "Take care of yourselves, boys!"

"Ah! you have done well to quit the business, my good Mathias!" Aunt Mathurine murmured softly in his ear.

Jeanne looked sadly on while Loehic adjusted, as well as he could, the rough and torn sail, which, like a wounded wing, was to bear him out to sea. His soul was heavily oppressed by a melancholy. When he had wished to dance with Jeanne, old Mathurine had made at him, through her diabolical spectacles, such a pair of eyes, that he had not dared to invite the young girl. At table, before that, they had been placed as far as possible apart from each other; so that what had been a pleasure to everybody else had been for him nothing but a punishment.

Never had he felt so completely downcast. So, when passing near him, while her aunt was offering a pinch of snuff to Mathias, Jeanne had said to him:

"Don't go out to sea, my Loehic, I beg of you!"

The only reply he had been able to make to her was:

"Oh, let me go! I wish to die."

III.

A heavy gloom poisoned the departure after the gayety of the morning, and many a furtive tear mingled with the farewells along the range of boats into which the men were climbing to go in quest of the daily bread for which they daily prayed.

The prediction of Mathias had troubled the minds of the most courageous; the old pilot knew so well the ocean and its treasons! But all had solid boats, and well fitted to withstand the onslaughts of the waves. Then, they were not going out far, but meant to content themselves with fishing within sight of the coast ready for a prompt return in case the winds and waves should prove too hostile. Loehic alone, in his shattered boat, would run any real danger.

"Take my better boat, lad," said Mathias, with rough tenderness.

But, for the first time, the poor young fellow had noticed the old man's assiduities to Jeanne, and with what fond eyes he had gazed upon her, and he answered shortly:

"No, thank you; I don't want it."

And with a last look, charged with agony, cast upon his loved one, he threw himself into his leaky boat, and his tattered sail, filled with the rest, bore him away. The wind grew every moment stronger, and, one by one, the boats disappeared into the violet mist, their gray sails looking to the end like the wings of frightened gulls.

Mathias and Mathurine had retired into the cottage of the latter, who had prevailed on him to partake of a last pitcher of cider; for she could think of no better artifice for drawing to her house the only nephew she could hope to secure in this country, so far removed from the shores of Pactolus. Moreover, the moment appeared to her an excellent one for making a first trial. The old sailor had given up the sea; it was the very time for him to take to himself a wife. Jeanne was the prettiest girl in Pilhoel; Mathias was the [illegible] fisherman there.

These two aristocracies were made for one another, evidently. The matchmaker, therefore, set about diplomatizing, commencing the campaign by a significent enumeration of her niece's virtues; she augured well from the enthusiasm with which Mathias declared that she had still fallen short of the truth.

During this conversation, in which she was so much concerned, Jeanne had remained on the seashore, anxiously, and with moistened eyes, peering into the horizon overspread by a dark curtain which had, at length, veiled the whole sky. Suddenly this vail was torn by a flash of lightning, skimming the dense green surface of the sea afar off; followed by a scarcely perceptible rumble, after a long interval. The storm was yet distant.

But she already felt its commotions, and a chill fell on her heart. The light had faded out of the sky. Heavy drops of rain fell upon the sands, tinting them gray. A fresh zig-zag of fire rent the air, reflecting itself on the face of the deep water, and the voice of the thunder immediately followed.

Jeanne uttered a cry of agony.

"We had better go and see what it was, perhaps," said Mathias, emptying a large glass of cider to the health of Jeanne.

"Nonsense—stay where you are," said Mathurine, restraining him.

Like a flight of pigeons regaining the dovecote pressing closely one against the other, white and rapidly increasing in size, the sails of the fishermen appeared, all low upon the water, all flying before and under the stress of the tempest. A third burst of thunder had brought all the women and children in terror to the beach.

In spite of Mathurine, Mathias had hurried down to the shore, his rough face expressing a strange anxiety. This one and that one uttered cries of relief and joy on receiving those belonging to them. The wind came in aid of the courage of the sailors; a powerful gust threw the whole fleet on the shore in safety.

On all sides kisses, embracings, sobs of joy, hand-graspings of friends lost and restored. One sail alone was behind—a rag of canvas on a raft, for the gunwale of the boat had all been torn away by the waves; and against it the figure of a young man struggling to keep it standing against the fury of the wind. Jeanne recognized in him Loehic, and, with blanched features and clinched hands, felt as if death had laid his hands upon her.

"He is lost!" was the cry of all.

"There is only one man who can save him!" cried a fisherman.

"Mathias alone could make head against such a sea!" cried another.

Mathias had already stripped off his waistcoat and thrown it on the ground. He was going to launch his own boat.

"Unhappy man—I forbid you!" screamed Mathurine, clinging to the pilot's shirt sleeve.

Mathias looked at Jeanne.

There are moments, solemn, mysterious, when language becomes useless, when souls understand each other in silence, when hearts open themselves, dumb, but readable as widespread books. The young girl went to the pilot and said to him in a voice so low that none but he could hear her:

"Save him and I will be your wife."

For that look—that one look—had in an instant revealed to her the pilot's passion.

With a vigorous movement Mathias threw off Mathurine—so vigorous, indeed, that her clutch carried away with it a shred of the shirt sleeve on which it had been fastened—and sprang into his boat, already moving out through the surf. A turn of the helm—white furrow in tne sea—then a cry of agony and admiration.

The storm raged more furiously than ever. The old pilot's boat had reached Loehic's shattered vessel in the midst of a cloud of spray, which, at moments, hid both from view. The mingled forms of two men stood out against the gray, tumultous background—Mathias holding Loehic insensible in his stalwart arms. The double shadow stoops—the shadow of a single man rises; Mathias has laid in the bottom of his own boat the body of the man he has saved. Another turn of the helm and in a few seconds the rescuer lands the still insensible form of Loehic on the beach.

A ringing outburst of hurrahs!—the horny hand of the old pilot passed from lip to lip; his name murmured by all mouths in benediction. The women on their knees put up thanks to the Virgin also.

Jeanne, pale, motionless as death! Mathias turns upon her a look appealing for thanks. A pained smile passes to the young girl's lips, and Mathurine makes everybody laugh by breathlessly bringing to the pilot a glass of hot sugared wine, which, in spite of the old girl's protestations, he insists on forcing between the lips of Loehic, who has not yet returned to consciousness.

IV.

At the end of six weeks Loehic, saved and sheltered by Mathias, has slowly recovered the reason of which, for awhile, he had been bereft by excess of emotion. After many days of delirium, during which his life had been in suspense, consciousness had returned to his mind, but on his heart had fallen the shadow of an incurable sadness.

Mathurine had only permitted Jeanne to come and see him once; and Mathias—strange as it seemed—had not sought to break through that cruel decree, but appeared to be completely in agreement on the subject. The reason was that, in his sick dreams, poor Loehic had so often repeated the name of Jeanne, and with such despairing tenderness in the tones of his voice, that the old pilot feared he had discovered that love existed between them. Jeanne, whom he saw every day at her aunt's appeared, however, firmly resolved to keep her promise. She had allowed her hand to be officially asked of Mathurine, and, without making the least objection, proceeded with the preparation for her trousseau.

The young girl listened to the pilot's projects of happiness without responding, but with a vague smile upon her lips which he might take for contentment.

One day she was kneeling in prayer as he entered, and, in rising, let a faded flower fall from the "Book of Hours." Mathias stooped for the purpose of picking it up and returning it to her; but, before he could reach it, she had snatched it up and jealously hidden it in her bosom.

The eagerness of her action attracted the old sailor's atttention.

"Who gave you that flower?" he asked uneasily, without knowing why.

"Loehic gave it to me."

And, as a look of anguish passed into the pilot's eyes, she added:

"God does not forbid remembrance."

Mathias did not insist, but a terrible doubt had entered his heart. An hour later, on taking his place by the bed of Loehic, now convalescent, he said to the young man:

"How would you answer me, Loehic, if I, who have saved your life, were to ask something of you in return?"

"I should answer you: 'Mathias, my life is yours; dispose of it as you please.'"

After an interval of silence, and with a faltering voice, the pilot continued:

"It is not much I have to ask of you, lad; give me only the worthless brass ring you always wear on your finger."

Loehic started in his bed and became very pale.

"That? Never!" he cried, an angry light flashing from his eyes.

"It was Jeanne, then, who gave it to you?" replied Mathias, his voice choking with pain.

"Why do you ask me since you know?" rejoined Loehic, closing his eyes and overcome by this sudden trial of emotion.

The pilot rose, his eyes full of tears. He kissed the forehead of the young man, who had fallen suddenly into a kind of sleep. He listened and assured himself that he was really sleeping.

"Forgive me!" he murmured.

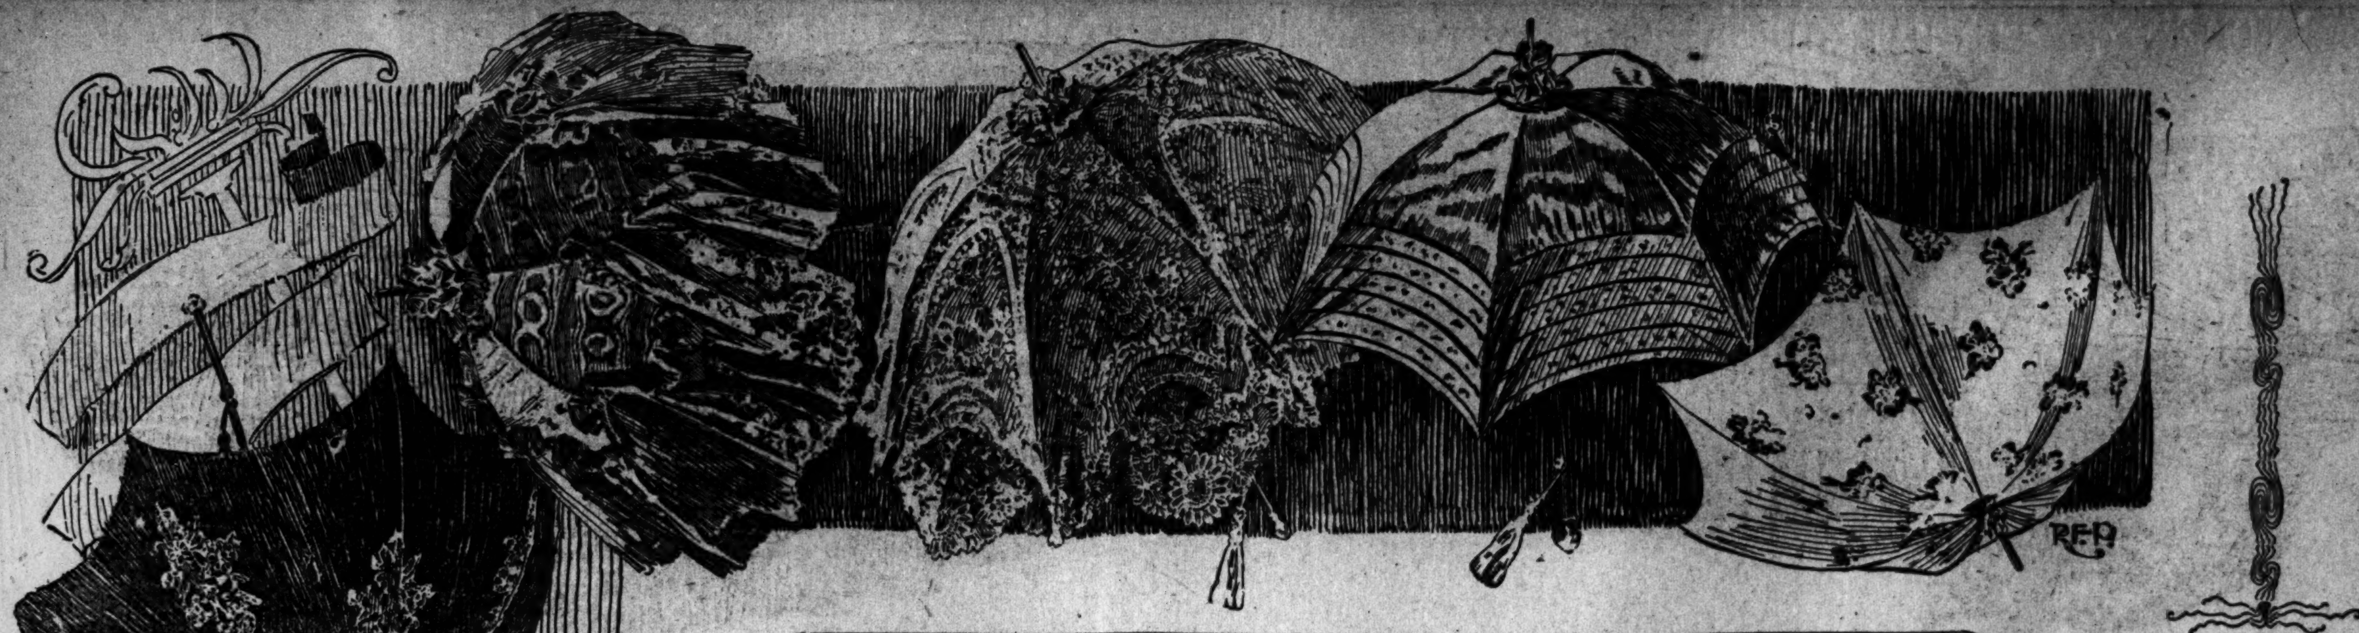
Then, in a corner of the room, before a crucifix, he knelt and besought God to give him courage. Calmed, a look of admirable resignation on his brow, he put on his heavy woollen cap and returned to the house of Mathurine, whom he found working with feverish ardor at the white bridal dress.

"Well—will the trousseau be ready soon?" he cried, in a voice which he rendered almost rough from trying too much to make it gay.

"You have become very pressing all of a sudden, Master Mathias," replied Aunt Mathurine. "For when do you want it?"

Very simply this time, in the admirable tone of sacrifice, the pilot answered, looking at Jeanne:

"For when Loehic is well again."—From the French.



TO SHADE MY LADY'S FACE.

The Season's Parasols Are Things of Beauty.

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Cobwebby lace, cloudy chiffon and silk as opalescent as rainbows are the materials which milady uses this season to shade her face from the sun. Pompadour silks with pale-hued flowers shot across a milky ground are as popular here as for collars and sashes, and the butter-colored lace which riots on all the fashionable gowns is found on fashionable parasols also. The jeweler contributes handles beautiful to see, and altogether the parasol of 1895 is a creation which would cause the women of half a century ago to believe their descendants were on the road to financial ruin.

The linings of the fashionable parasol have two fields of usefulness. They must enhance the beauty of the outer material and they must also prove effective in improving the complexion of the wearer. have two fields of usefulness. They must harmonize with the colors of the frock with which they are worn.

The sticks are of light woods, mostly bamboos, with crystal, topaz, onyx, lapiz lazuli or porcelain balls mounted over a band of silver or gold.

One parasol is a dome of black moire, with band of shaded flowers or uncut velvet with feathered edge and lined with black. The ribs are gilt; the stick of shaded bamboo, surmounted by china ball handle with a gilt band. Another, with a dome of black watered silk, is trimmed with a white watered silk band, sprinkled with pink rosebuds, and has a stick of light-colored bamboo and a white china ball with gilt band. A white-watered silk dome, flecked with moss rosebuds, a white stick, crystal ball and white tassel, is exceedingly pretty.

An old-fashioned rosebud silk, with a Japanese stick and Cupids on a Dresden ball, is what enthusiasts call a dream.

One with a dome of black moire, a border of white gros-grain silk, in which are branches of violets and moss rosebuds, has the edges of the border stitched with crimson silk ribbon. The stick is of light bamboo, the handle an ebony ball, with gold rim and black tassel.

A plainer one, better adapted to a dowager of severer taste, is all of black silk, with the exception of eight bouquets of white roses cut from old lace and applied at intervals around the band. The ribs are covered with white silk, the stick a stained bamboo with an ebony ball handle, black tassel and black rosette surmounts the top.

Another "dream" has a white watered silk dome and is bordered by a band of six black stripes about two inches apart. Scattered through the stripes are tiny moss rosebuds.

An entire dome of changeable lavender silk over which are showered small bunches of violets intermingled with detached violets is springlike.

A dome of white watered silk with clusters of creamy lace bunched in artistic knots is another charming specimen.

The prices of these fairy-like creations are such as would make the eyes of our revered ancestors distend with horror. They vary from $50 to $300, and may be had at even more expensive rates. The crude objects which they used to protect their famous complexions from the sun cost no such fabulous prices. But then there were not so fabulously pretty things. Even those charming representations of the ladies of old Greece in the Tanagra figures are plain and unattractive beneath their unadorned sunshades.

THESE ARE FOR A JUNE BRIDE.

Two New Designs for Traveling and Reception Gowns.

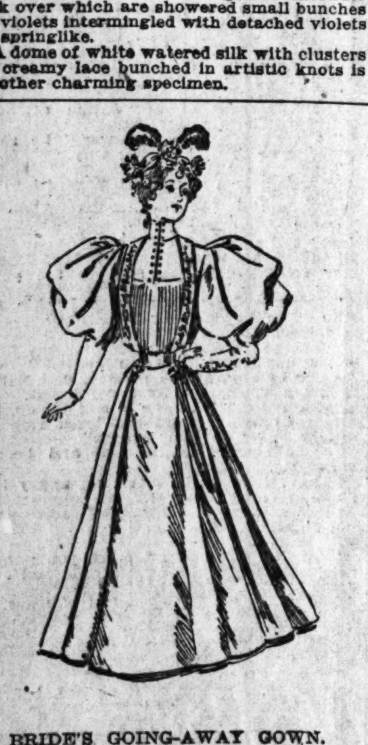
Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

The crying question of the times concerns linings. The desideration for which all womankind is searching, modistes and those for whom modistes labor alike, is a lining which will give skirts their fashionable flare and sleeves their longed-for largeness, without proving destructive to the health of the wearer. Nervous prostration has followed in the wake of the heavy skirts, and doctors' bills have added themselves to dressmakers' bills.

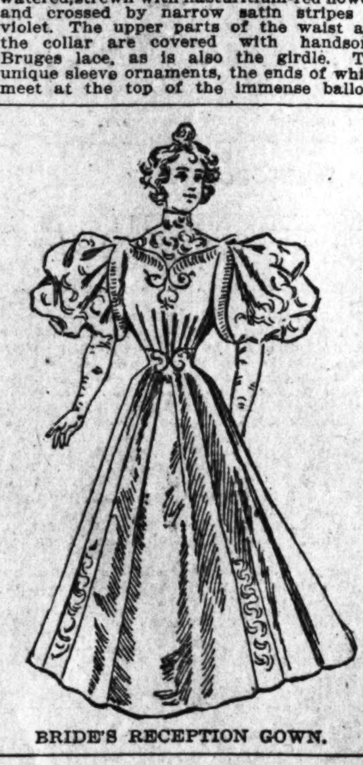
A glance through the parlors of some of the leading modistes demonstrates the fact that many of the styles which made their appearance with the Easter lilies have been modified to better suit the requirements of the general woman. Particularly is this true of skirts, which, although they flare at the sides in the pronounced manner noted earlier in the season, and still display flute-like folds at the back, fall with a softness that is infinitely more graceful and far more becoming to the average woman, she who is stout and not above the medium height.

Two examples of gowns which, by reason of their fashionable design and general becomingness, should find a place in the wardrobes of the up-to-date woman are shown in the accompanying sketches. One of them might be worn as a going-away dress by a June bride, while the other might do duty on the occasion of her first "at home." The traveling dress is of blue light-weight tailor cloth. The front of the round waist is brightened by a deep yoke of white doeskin, which appears effectively above the crepon bodice and outlined by a band of the spangled white doeskin. Tiny gold buttons decorate the vest at each side of the invisible closing and similar buttons ornament the high, close-fitting white collar. The lower sleeves fit the arm closely and are trimmed with spangled passementerie, arranged in perpendicular lines along the inside and outside of the arm. Above the elbow they are covered with huge puffs which drop in full, soft folds from the point of the shoulder and spread below with a decidedly bouffant effect, which is produced by an interlining of fibre chamois. The skirt measures fully six yards around at the bottom, where it falls in a succession of rolling folds or flutes, and fits with becoming smoothness over the hips. It is separated from the bodice by a broad belt of white cloth and is decorated at each side of the front with a spangled ornament.

The reception dress is of the new chene silk. It has a light yellow ground, slightly watered, strewn with nasturitium-red flowers and crossed by narrow satin stripes of violet. The upper parts of the waist and the collar are covered with handsome Bruges lace, as is also the girdle. The unique sleeve ornaments, the ends of which meet at the top of the immense balloon puffs, are stiffened with fibre chamois, and this material is also used to interline the collar and belt. The skirt is on the Paquin order, and is nearly seven yards wide at the bottom. In both of these skirts the flare at the front and sides and the softly rolling folds at the back are produced by an interlining of fibre chamois, a material which has almost entirely superseded hair-cloth. The back gores of the skirt are interlined from the bottom nearly to the top with the fibre chamois and a deep underfacing of it is applied at the front and sides.



BRIDE'S GOING-AWAY GOWN.



BRIDE'S RECEPTION GOWN.

WHERE WOMEN BUY STOCKS.

An Establishment Fitted up for Female Speculators.

Special Correspondence Sunday Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 6—A full-fledged establishment on the fifth floor of a building on lower Broadway, fitted out in the regulation manner, the ticker telling off the market quotations, a group of excitedi women gathered in the room discussing fluctuations like experienced speculators, conversations on the variations of "points" and a remarkable familiarity with every phase of the stock report—such was the scene witnessed the other afternoon.

Most of the women were of middle age, several were young, two were decidedly old, but all were posted, or thought they were, on the investments they were so feverishly watching. That they were "regulars" was evident at a glance, the fascination of the game holding them month after month, although it is seldom they make as much as $10 per day, often clearing, as one of them said, "anywhere from 75 cents to $2 or $3."

The establishment has separate rooms for men and women. The apartment for men, containing the business manager's office, is directly across a narrow court from the women's room. No men are admitted into the women's room. The men's room showed the usual paraphernalia of "a branch of the Stock Exchange," which the manager says it is. Apparently, only the office force were present, a striking contrast to the women's room.

There was nothing particularly attractive either in the women's room or in the appearance of its occupants. A plain carpet covered the floor. The stock ticker stood by the one window, which is in the court directly opposite the window of the men's office. On the opposite side of the room from ticker was a blackboard where an elderly woman in a black dress chalked down the quotations as they were read from the ticker by three women who read its enigmatical signs as readily as if it were a primer exercise. Every woman in the room carried a small tablet and a lead pencil and covered page after page with small tables of figures, which they seemed to consult with the greatest satisfaction.

The Post-Dispatch woman reporter for one hour thereafter had an excellent opportunity to observe the quotations, and incidentally observe the effect of fluctuations on the feminine temperament. The questions of the manager were almost duplicated by the women, who looked significantly at each other when the tips from the prominent railroad officials were mentioned. A vivacious blonde shook her head gayly and laughed outright.

"You will be in great luck," said she. "When you get your pointers come right up here and use them, but be sure you get them right. Go to your railroad friend and make him tell you what he does not tell anyone else. Use that only. It is my opinion that if you study this thing for about a thousand years you may know something about it. I don't, and never will. The worst of it all is that there is no logic or judgment, or anything else possible in this, as far as I can see. It is nothing but luck, or fate, and very small rewards."

"What are the investments of you ladies to-day?" asked the reporter.

"I am in Sugar and St. Paul," said the blonde.

"Mine is Sugar and Gas," said a middle-aged woman on the reporter's right.

"I have Sugar and Whisky," quietly said a good-looking and well-dressed woman on the reporter's left.

"I bought Sugar at 118½ this morning," said the blonde, "and I want to catch the bulge at 119⅜."

"How are you on your stock now?" asked the reporter of the quiet woman on her left presently.

"I am ahead on Sugar, but not on Whisky," replied the woman.

"You may not get your cocktail to-night," said the blonde.

"I have better luck at poker than here," said the woman at the blackboard.

"I haven't had any luck anywhere yet," said the blonde, with an air of indifference, "but I'm going to stay in the deal I'm in now, and I think I'll catch the bulge on something and pull out all right."

"Only five minutes more left," said the blonde, glancing at the clock.

There was a stir in the room. The women were putting on their wraps.

The blonde gave a final look at the ticker.

"I wonder if I shall catch the bulge just right?" she said.

It was 3 o'clock and Sugar had closed at 118⅞.

A "CONFECTION" FROM VIENNA.

Unanswered.

Her eyes are closed, that were the door
  Through which the light had found access
To her sweet soul; forevermore
  The fair soul-house is tenantless.

Her eyes are closed; yet, in the night
  That saw her fuller life begin,
The watchers knew the clearest light,
  Just dawned, was that her eyes shut in.

O strangely radiant gates of Death!
  Could we look past you through her eyes,
Should we, too, lay aside our breath
  With such eternal glad surprise?

The girl may go first.

I received an invitation to dine with a friend. It was written on a postal card. Do you think she showed me a discourtesy in not writing on letter paper? A. E. X.

Courtesy demands that all communications except those of the most perfunctory business nature should be written on paper and inclosed in an envelope. To send an invitation on a postal card was the height of unconventionality and may have been the height of rudeness.

* * *

We have recently moved to a small town. The minister has called on us, but his wife and daughters have not. Should we call on them? ALICIA.

The minister's call belonged not to the class of social visits, but to the one known as "pastoral duties." You owe him no pastoral duty. You therefore do not call upon him, and you do not make a social call upon his family until they have shown you that courtesy.

* * *

When I attend a luncheon and find at my place numerous forks and spoons, the use of which I do not know, what shall I do? JULIE.

Watch what other people do. Eternal vigilance is the price of correctness as well as of other things.

* * *

What should a guest wear to an evening wedding at church? E. K.

An evening or reception dress, with no bonnet or a very small evening one, is appropriate.

* * *

How shall I decline an invitation so that I shall receive no further ones from the sender of this? JEANETTE.

Any refusal to accept an invitation which would be forcible enough to prevent further invitations would be likely to be excessively rude. It is very much better to refuse many invitations ceremoniously than to decline one too vigorously, and the ultimate result is the same.

* * *

When one receives a gift of flowers from a young man who calls on one frequently should they be acknowledged at once or is it proper to wait until he calls and thank him then? IGNORANT.

He should be thanked at once by note. One should never wait for chance to put it in her way to thank any one for a favor.

THE DICTATOR.

NEW USE FOR THE CAPE.

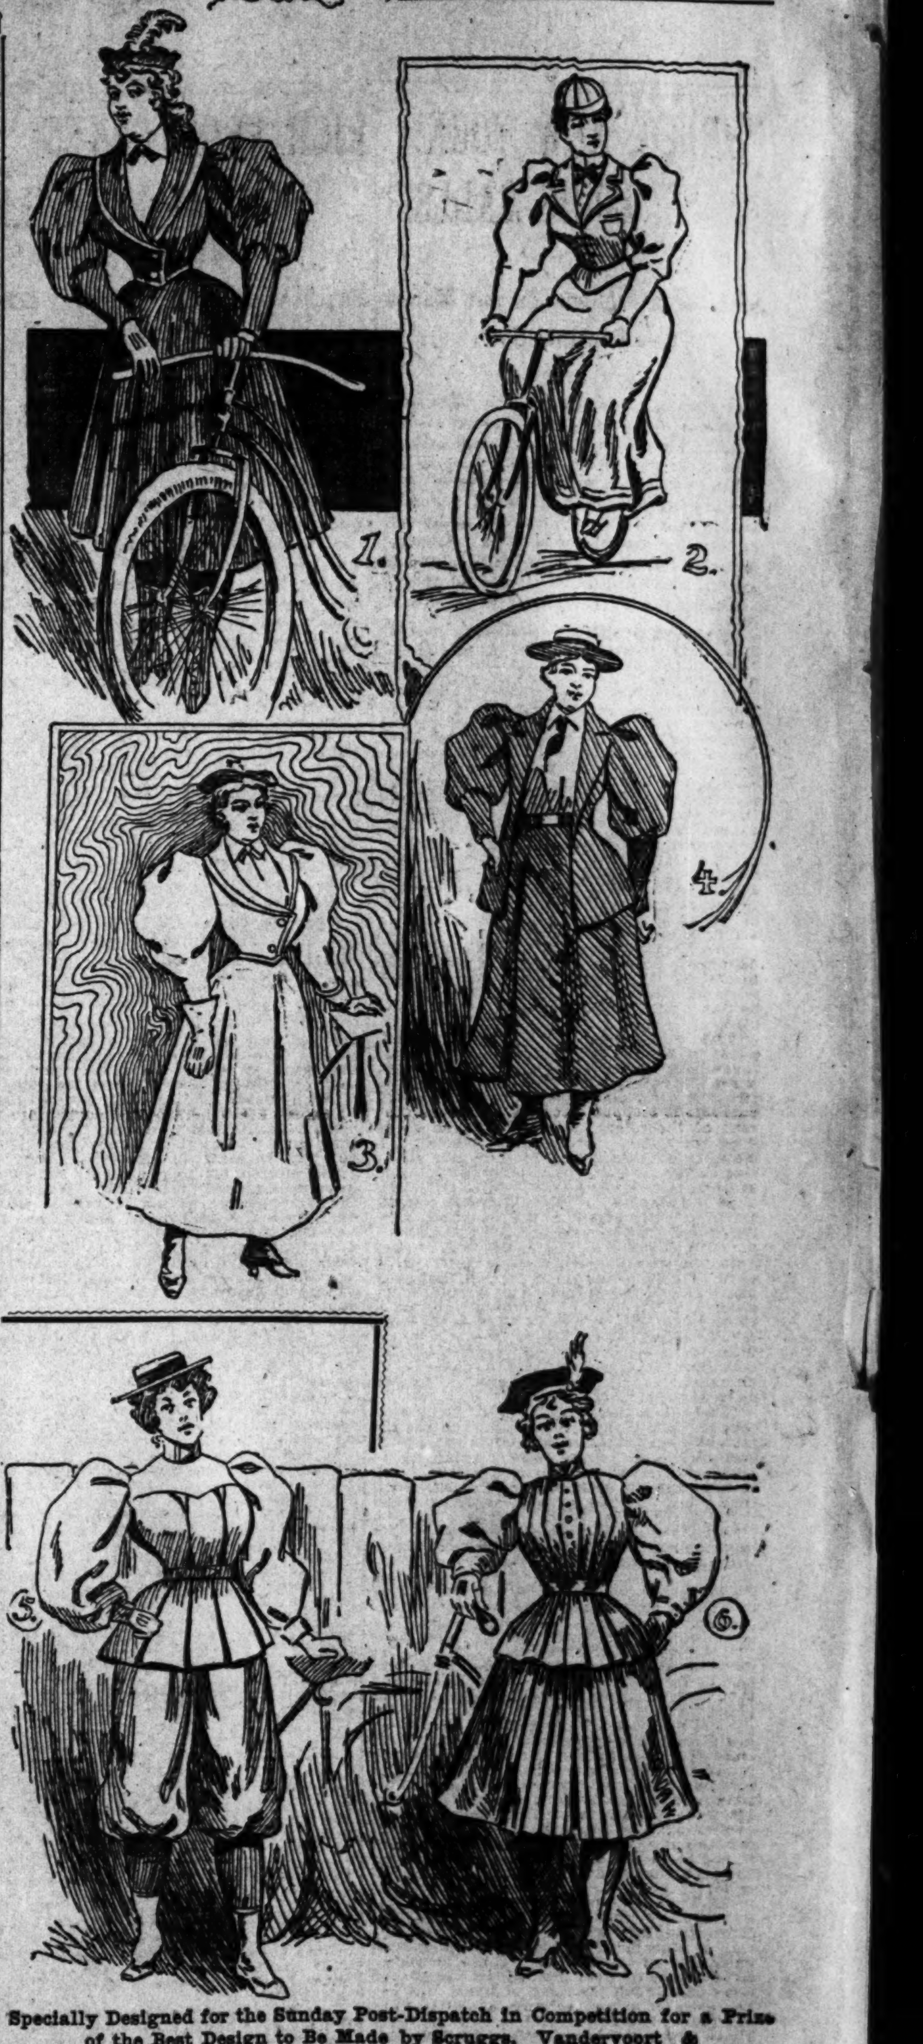
Ingenious Woman Has Discovered That It Leads Itself to Economy.

Capes will be worn well into the summer. Woman has found a new use for them. The days of the shirt waist and serge skirt have arrived, and the ingenious woman has discovered that she may wear her skirt and shirt waist as a business or morning costume, and without changing her gown may be presentable for an afternoon call. This is accomplished by slipping her cape over her shoulders and so hiding her shirt waist from view.

Capes of black satin are charming for this purpose. One which is quiet in effect, but stylish, ripples with frills of black chiffon, each frill headed with a tiny line of green spangles. A ruche of black chiffon forms the collar. Perforated cloth capes are much the vogue, and some of them are quite elaborate creations. An imported fawn-color cloth cape shows violet silk beneath the perforations. It is lined with a fawn and mauve colored check silk, and finished about the neck with a ruff of violets.

Capes of coarse black silk net, trimmed with satin-ribbon ruffles and lined with gay silk are a summer novelty.

BLACK CHIFFON AND SPANGLES.



Specially Designed for the Sunday Post-Dispatch in Competition for a Prize of the Best Design to Be Made by Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Upon the Order of the Post-Dispatch.

BICYCLE COSTUMES.

Here is a group of six designs for bicycle costumes entered for prizes in the Sunday Post-Dispatch competition for the best and most practicable costume to be worn by ladies patronizing the wheel. Study them, and see how earnestly and enthusiastically the women of St. Louis and vicinity have entered into this contest.

No. 1 is the design of Miss F. Winters, 1014 South Eighth street. She describes it as follows: "It is made of navy blue broadcloth, and is tailor-made. It consists of a pair of knickerbockers and a short gored skirt, fitting closely around hips, and tight-fitting waist to be worn with a chemisette and dotted blue tie, and Tam O'Shanter. Leather leggings and a pair of gauntlet gloves."

No. 2 is submitted by Mrs. D. C. Lillis, 1833 Division street. Mrs. Lillis gives the following description: "This costume could almost be worn as an outing gown, so closely does it follow the conventional lines laid down for the summer girl, blue and white being the prevailing color, although any dark color may be chosen. A full skirt of fine, heavy serge, with a box-plait on each hip to give necessary fullness, also to keep it from pulling up in front, which is caused by tight-fitting over the hips when the feet are in motion. A full back about two or three inches longer by the same length in back, with two rows of stitching around bottom. Lined well with small bird-shot in the hem to give it sufficient weight that even a hard wind will not cause it to flop about the feet, which a thin, flying skirt does, and also impedes good and speedy riding and often proves dangerous. Don't wear stiff, tight-fitting corset, but a thin, summer corset or an equipoise waist. Any kind of a neat shirt waist is always desirable, with turn-down collar and neat black tie. An Eton jacket trimmed back in revers, with or without a small pocket at left side, with full sleeves. Always high shoes, gloves and cap, or sailor hat, complete the suit."

No. 3 is the design of Elizabeth J. Bell, Carlinville, Ill., and is described as follows: "The skirt, waist and Tam O'Shanter are of dark blue serge. The skirt and waist are finished with several rows of stitching. The skirt is gored and reaches almost to the ankles. The sleeves are very large, without stiffening. A shirt waist is worn under the blue serge waist. This may be any color, but light blue is preferred. In warm weather the serge waist may be dispensed with. In such case, a tan leather belt is necessary. High, tan, laced shoes, a dark blue tie, and tan kid gauntlet gloves are worn. Bloomers may be worn under the skirt if desired."

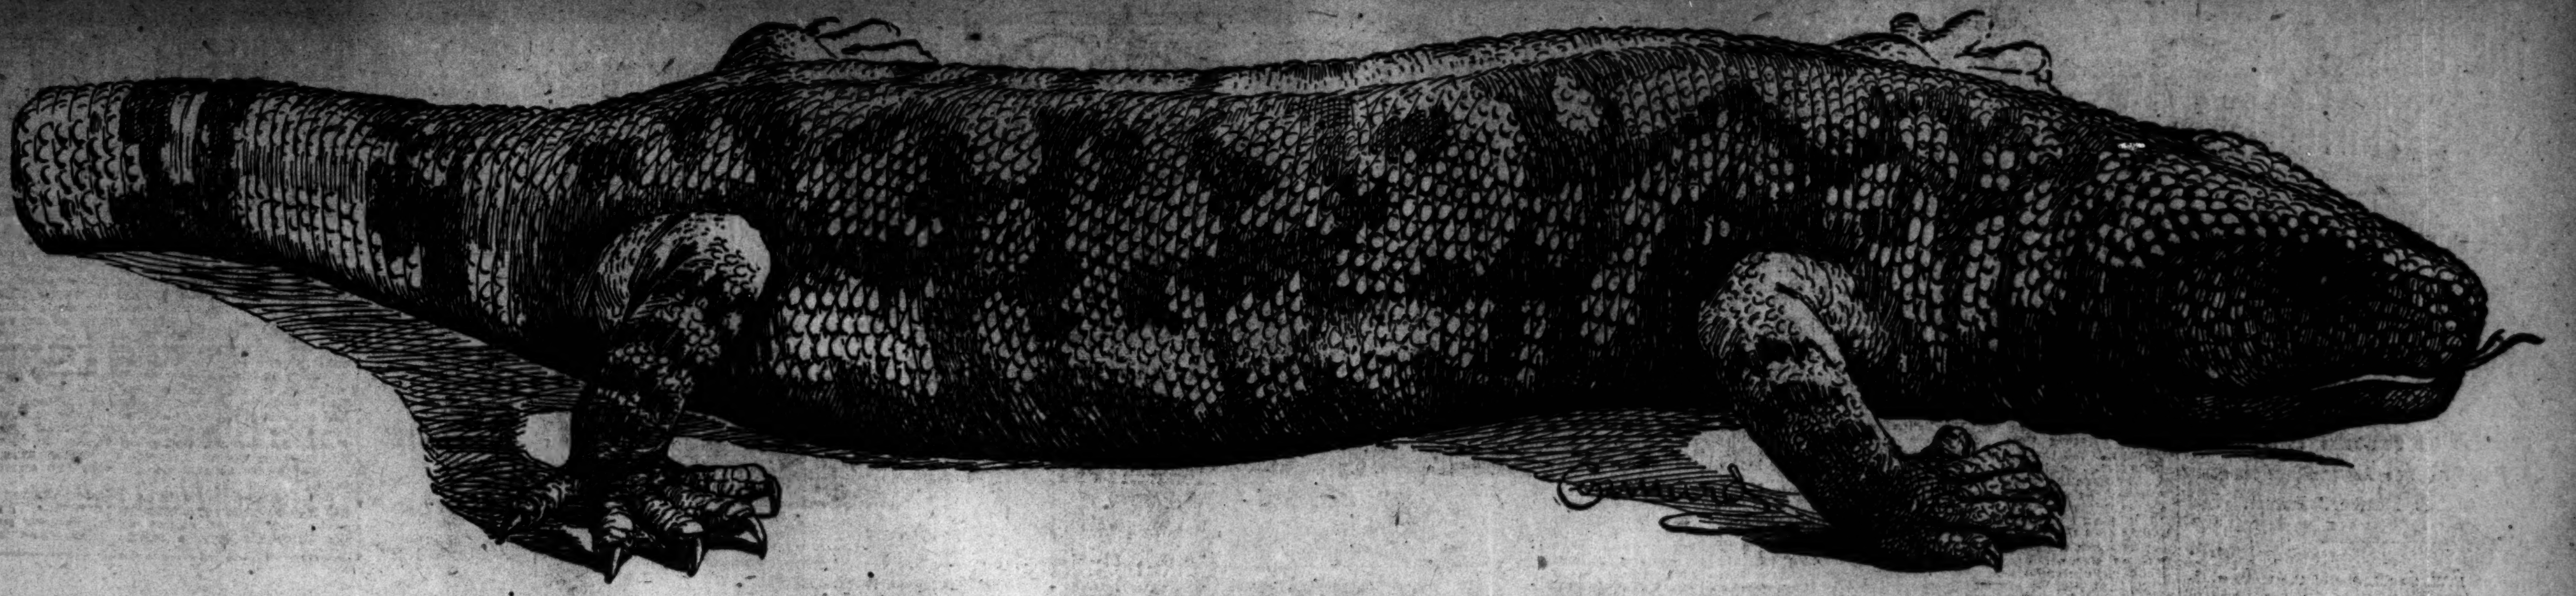
No. 4 is entered in the competition by Clara G. Hequembourg, 7403 Michigan avenue, and is thus described: "It consists of a gored skirt about three yards around, with scant bloomers, jacket to cover hips but not fastened at the waist, so as to give free movement. A short waist of china silk, leggings to match. A sailor hat. This costume is to be made of rain-proof serge, color to suit wearer. The skirt is made with hooks and loops, so that the wearer can lengthen to suit her convenience, which is easily done by putting the hooks on the belt, and the loops around skirt about two inches below belt. A lady can then get off the wheel, do her shopping or make a visit and not proclaim herself a bicycle rider to everybody as she would with the short skirt."

No. 5 comes from Miss Bessie Hughey, 4566 Bell avenue, who thus pictures it: "The costume is in two pieces, and is known as the Columbia bicycle habit. The waist is in Norfolk jacket style, being laid in three box pleats, both front and back. At the top is a pointed yoke with a standing collar, which is made with a pointed, overlapping end, that is slipped through a strap of the material. The sleeves are of bishop style, and are very full, and are finished with cuffs that have pointed, overlapping ends. The belt also shows a pointed end. The skirt is of bloomer fashion. It falls just below the knees, and may be made to extend to the top of ordinary shoes if desired. At the top it is gathered to a band, sufficient fullness being allowed to render the garment both convenient and becoming. The waist and trousers are both of tan-colored covert cloth of seasonable weight, or may be made of duck. The hat worn with this costume is a sailor, banded with tan ribbon. Leggings may be worn if desired. They may be of tan color, and reach to the top of the bloomers."

No. 6 is forwarded by Miss Chipley, 4000 Delmar avenue, with the following description: "Tam O'Shanter cap; Norfolk jacket if the weather is cool, if not a shirt waist; bloomers reaching well below the knee, and skirt a corresponding length. The skirt is wherein my costume is different from others. My idea is to have a skirt securely fastened to the bloomers, extending from one side front around the back to the opposite side front. This is as modest as the skirts that extend all the way round, and allows perfect freedom of movement to the limbs. Leggings as near the color of the suit as possible should complete the costume, which I consider practical, modest and picturesque."

A Grease Eradicator.

This grease eradicator made the fortune of more than one man before the secret of its composition was discovered: Two ounces ammonia, one ounce castile soap shavings, one quart soft water, one tablespoonful saltpeter. It must be used with some care on colored goods lest it take hue with salt, but on white or black it is invaluable.



THE GILA MONSTER, LIFE SIZE.

"HELLO, NEW YORK! ST. LOUIS CALLS."

Metallic Telephone Circuit Makes This Possible Soon.

As soon as the St. Louis Bell Telephone Exchange can construct its system on the metallic circuit plan, it will abandon the present ground circuit system, the disadvantages of which will be hereafter stated; and as soon as the metallic circuit system is in, St. Louis will be cut into the great belt of long-distance telephone cities. General Manager George F. Durant, being asked to explain what a metallic circuit is, and to illustrate the advantages of such circuit, said:

"A metallic circuit, in the telephonic sense, is a circuit composed of two wires known technically, to be 'inductively neutral;' which means that they are on exact electrical balance, both having exactly the same resistance. A ground circuit is one in which the current is returned through the ground to the place whence it originates. Ground return circuits suffer disturbance from two causes: (1) Earth currents, proceeding from the ground return currents of electric cars, etc., which is called conduction; and (2) atmospheric disturbance, caused by trolley, telegraph, electric light and electric power wires, which is called inductive disturbance. The latter, running parallel to the telephone wires, induce a secondary current running at right angles to the generating current and to the telephone wires, include the latter in their field, and interfere with their currents."

Here Mr. Durant made a diagram of the disturbing currents and wires, showing the secondary current from the higher-power wires in a series of fine loops thrown out so as to include the telephone wires, and then said:

"The disturbance created in this way is in exact proportion to the square of the distance between the disturbing and disturbed wires. Obviously, as soon as an all-metal circuit is established, disturbance by ground currents is stopped, because the return current of the telephone wire is taken away from the return currents of all other wires. Now, as to disturbance by induction (i. e., from cross-currents from other wires) it is stopped only so long as the electrical balance is preserved in the all-metal circuit. Usually, both wires of the telephone system would be affected equally by the cross-currents flowing in the same direction on both telephone wires and thus neutralizing each other; but should it happen that only one wire of the telephone pair should be included in the field of secondary currents, there would still be trouble because the electrical balance would be disturbed. The efficiency of the service of an all-metal circuit, then, depends upon the maintenance of an exact electrical balance between the two sides of the circuit.

"The second essential in an all-metal system is that all apparatus, and the instruments in every station, should be fitted with two such metal wires exactly balanced, in place of one pole and one ground wire. All such apparatus must be of higher efficiency than that of the ground-return system. Some months ago, when we were expecting an early burial of our wires, we planned for the construction of a multiple switch-board, without, however, including the all-metal circuit. This apparatus would have cost $75,000, and would have enabled every operator in the Exchange to establish direct connection with every subscriber. But the discussion of the burial of the wires continued until the all-metal long distance circuits became distributed to within a comparatively short distance of St. Louis; and then it became necessary to include in our plans for that switch-board and arrange for the construction of another that would accommodate the long-distance service. In East St. Louis we had the new multiple already installed, but before it was put in service we saw that it would only be a short time until the long-distance service would be at hand, and that the all-metal circuit system must be provided. So we took out our new multiple without ever having used it, and installed the apparatus necessary for the accommodation of the long-distance telephone.

"The system now in use in East St. Louis is a part of that necessary for long distance telephoning," Mr. Durant said, by way of digression. "It vastly simplifies the business of telephonic communication, although, of course, the appartus employed is by that much the more complex. Before the operator in the exchange are little dials, one for the station of each subscriber—with his number, of course. When he takes his telephone off the hook a little index flies up and informs the operator that he is there. She asks the number he wants, and when it is given plugs it in. If the person called responds at once, the index denoting his telephone flies up into view as soon as he takes his telephone off the hook. If he does not respond promptly the person calling taps his telephone hook rapidly and the index flies up and down in exact time. This warns the operator that she must call the party of the second part again. The moment either party hangs up his hook his indicator disappears, but neither hook is influenced by the action of the party at the opposite end of the line. For instance, the party called up may leave his telephone to consult some one in answer to a question put by the party ringing up. In that case his index will disappear, and that of the calling party, who still has his ear to the phone, will remain stationary. When the other man comes back and takes his phone in hand, his index will come instantly into view."

"Will St. Louis get the long-distance telephone as soon as the all-metal circuits and apparatus are ready for operation?"

"Yes; the long distance line is now at Terre Haute, and we are informed that it will be constructed to St. Louis on sixty days' notice. All we are waiting for is the construction of the appartus and the all-metal lines, and the specifications for those are being prepared as rapidly as possible."

"What will be the cost of long-distance telephoning to New York City?"

"The Chicago-New York rate is $9.50, and the night rate is $4.75, and I suppose that for St. Louis will be about the same, as is the distance. The service will be given to any subscriber in his own office. He will proceed very much as we do now when we want, say Alton, or Kirkwood. He will call the main office, and ask to be put on New York, and when the connection is established with the party he wishes to confer with he will be allowed five minutes' conversation for the prices stated. I have tested the service and found it to work quite as satisfactorily as the best service under the present system, and far better than the average service in the city, with the many causes of interferance we have to put up with now."

RICH FROM CAKES AND COFFEE.

Pat Dolan of New York Has Made $900,000.

Special Correspondence Sunday Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 6.—From the bill of fare printed below Patrick Dolan has amassed a fortune of $900,000. One-third of this amount is invested in real estate. The balance is in cash, which could be got together within six hours.

Fifty-four thousand dollars is drawing intesest in eighteen different savings banks. He has $3,000 in each bank, which is the limit accepted from a single depositor. Yet when he started a little coffee and cake saloon in the basement of No. 8 Park Row, thirty years ago, he only had $20.

Here is the menu from which this great fortune grew:

Coffee and cakes	10	Milk toast	10
Corned beef	10	Oyster pies	10
Boiled ham	10	Oyster stew	10
Pork and beans	10	Oysters, raw	10
Pickled tongue	10	Tea	5
Bread and milk	10	Coffee	5
Two boiled eggs	10	Pies	5
Dry toast	10	Crullers	5

About 1880 Dolan moved out of the basement into the little store overhead. Here he had room for only six tables. He made money from the day he started in business. He got the idea of the coffee and cake saloon from "Butter Cake" Dick Marshall, who originated it, but failed to make it pay, at No. 9 Spruce street. Dolan made friends easily, but was, nevertheless, independent. He accepted favors from no one, yet was ever ready to lend a helping hand to any deserving one. He has never used the credit system in his lunch room, spot cash on delivery always being his rule.

"Why should I not do so?" he said once. "I expect every person who comes into my place to pay as soon as as they have finished their meal. I get their money down and I will pay the same way for what I buy."

He selected his help himself, and would have no sluggard around him. He insisted that the newsboy should be waited upon as quickly as the millionaire, and he has had and still has many men worth millions among his regular customers. Thirty seconds is the average time at Dolan's to fill an order of beef and beans, coffee and cakes. It seems incredible, but such is the fact.

But the old place at No. 8 is no more. It has not been closed through any falling off in business, but because the owner refused to renew the lease. Dolan foresaw such an exigency as this, and a few years ago opened a branch of the parent house at No. 33 Park Row, which is managed by his nephew and partner, John Meehan. Dolan owns the property.

It was Dolan's prodest boast that he paid higher wages than any one else, and that he never discharged a man or woman without cause. When an employee grows too old to work he pensions him off at the same salary he had been paying, and continues to do so during life. His last pensioner, old Mary Williams, a dishwasher, who had been in his employment twenty-five years, was pensioned off five years ago, and only died recently. Dolan's greatest worry when he found he had to give up his original stand was about his men. He managed to find places for all of his hands except two bakers in the new lunch room at No. 33 Park Row.

The bill of fare, printed on cardboard, inclosed in a neat frame, is the same to-day as it was when Dolan started, thirty years ago, except that within the last five years he has added rice and milk, 10c; oatmeal and milk, 10c, and sandwich, 10c. The rice and oatmeal and milk are only served during the months of June, July and August. Dolan has never varied or lowered the price of anything since he began business. For instance, he sells two eggs for 10 cents. In the majority of restaurants they are two for 15 cents. Dolan has often had to pay as high as 75 cents a dozen for eggs, yet never charged his patrons more than 5 cents apiece.

"It's enough," he says. "As a general thing I can buy my eggs at from 18 to 25 cents a dozen. I make a good profit on them. Why should I bleed my customers just because I get the tough end of the steak once in a while?"

In all the years the place has been opened it has never been closed night or day, except for a few hours on Sundays, when it is being cleaned and scrubbed, and on two different occasions when the crowd became so great in the place that Dolan could not find room to feed the people.

Among the many notables that have eaten at the tables are Horace Greeley, Manton Marble, P. T. Barnum, Supt. Byrnes, Harry Hayward, Edgar Allen Poe, Ross Wallace, Police Justices Grady and Divver, Judge Brown, Richard Croker, ex-Mayor Grant, Henry J. Raymond, Thomas A. Edison, William Florence, Prof. Sawyer, Henry Hurlbert, and in fact almost every one of note who ever had business in or about Park Row. On one occasion four men representing $12,000,000 sat at one of his tables. To give an idea of his present business, his bill for corned beef for one week recently was nearly $1,000. A barrel of sugar weighing 367 pounds was used in thirty-six hours to sweeten tea and coffee alone. In two hours at dinner time one day recently he sold fifteen big pans of beans, forty rounds or about 800 pounds of corned beef, eighteen hams and 1,540 portions of pie. Although now almost entirely recovered from a recent severe sickness, Dolan rarely comes downtown, leaving the entire management of the business to Johnny Meehan.

At Anchor.

How calm upon the twilight water sleeps,
  With folded wing, yon solitary sail,
  Safe-harbored, haply dreaming of the gale
That wolf-like o'er the waste deserted leaps;
One star—a signal light above her—keeps
  Watch; and, behold, its pictured image pale
  Gleams far below, a seeming anchor frail,
Where onward still the noiseless current sweeps.

Star of my life, pale planet, far-removed,
  Oh, be thou, when the twilight deepens, near!
Set in my soul thine image undisproved
  By death and darkness, till the morning clear
Behold me in the presence I have loved,
  My beacon here, my bliss eternal there.

JOHN B. TABB.

THE LATEST BOWERY FREAK.

Women Bootblacks and Women Barbers on Museum Stages.

Special Correspondence Sunday Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 6.—"Freaks ain't no good any more. What the people wants for their money nowadays is sensation and action. Six pretty girls doing nothing at all but sittin' on a platform will draw more money in a museum than all the giants, dwarfs, armless wonders and bearded ladies that ever lived. There have been changes in the dime museum business, and, as I was saying, freaks ain't hardly worth their board to a manager."

The speaker was the manager of a Bowery dime museum, who stood at the head of the stairs and complacently viewed a steady crowd pouring past the ticket taker.

"The lady bootblacks is what is collecting the crowd this week; step up and see the ladies in their act."

A gaudy canvas banner in colors hanging in front of the museum depicted six young women clad in costumes that suggested the knickerbockers of the jockey and the bloomers of the fair bicyclist, all working industriously upon the shoes of six grinning and appreciative young men, who sat enthroned on regulation bootblack chairs. The legend beneath the banner announced: "A show and a shine all for a dime."

Another placard announced that the shoes of all patrons would be shined free of charge by the beautiful lady bootblacks. It was a cheap catch-penny idea.

The young women who are at present posing as bootblacks seem to be known by name to many of the regular patrons. They do not give a continuous performance. It is only after the raspy-voiced "Professor" has led the audience through the various halls that he calls attention in glowing, but ungrammatical terms, to the beauty of the young women who are aobut to show their skill in a calling into which their sex has rarely entered.

Six young men, previously selected in some manner not at all satisfactory to the rest of the audience step briskly forward, take seats, and the bootblacks bend to their work with the awkwardness of the novice. But what does that matter? They are dressed so as to be objects of close interest to the young men in the audience.

The girls work very fast and seem to enjoy the fun. At last one of them raps on the box in a professional way to indicate that her shine is finished. She is the victor for that round. This performance is repeated every hour or oftener, when the crowds are large.

At a Fourteenth street museum, eight women, some young and others not so young, appear every hour in a public shaving contest, and the feature is proving a drawing card. Barber chairs of approved pattern are on a large platform, and they are attended by women who show more or less skill with the razor. All of them have worked at the trade. Men from among the spectators are supplied with shaving tickets. One or two attaches of the museum get into the chair, to sort of clown the act, and the spectators shriek with delight as the lather brush is jammed into the supposed victim's mouth or eyes, or he is pulled about by the nose or ears.

THE "LADY BOOTBLACKS" AND THE "LADY BARBERS."

NEW YORK'S PET GILA MONSTER.

It Has Luxurious Quarters in Central Park.

Special Correspondence Sunday Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Central Park menagerie now possesses a Gila monster. The Gila monster is one of the most peculiar and uncommon reptiles in the United States.

This monster occupies a box with a glass front in Director Smith's room at the Arsenal. It was presented by Matthew Judge of this city. It is about fifteen inches long—a very fair size.

The body is broad and of a pleasing checkered design. The background is pink and the markings brown. The tail is long. It is the head, however, which is the monster's most effective feature. It is thick and broad, and over the large round eyes are horny protuberances.

It moves about briskly on four little legs, shooting out its forked tongue continually, as a snake does. This habit is regarded as a threat by the ignorant, but probably the monster is only fishing for insects.

The monster lives largely on birds' eggs, which it takes from the nest. Hard-boiled eggs are given to it here. He eats them with much relish. Previous experience has shown that they are the best food for the monster in captivity.

The opinion seems to prevail at the menagerie that the monster's bite is deadly, but that is not supported by competent zoological authorities. An immense amount of fiction has been written concerning this reptile. It was first discovered in the Gila River Valley, in Arizona, and is found from there to South America. Few specimens have been found in this part of the world, and the tales concerning them ordinarily come from a distance.

There are many strange ideas concerning the Gila monster in Arizona. It is alleged that he spits poison, that his breath is deadly, and that he exudes poison from his skin. These ideas are absurd. There is little doubt that the breath of the average Arizona man is more deadly than that of the Gila monster.

As a matter of fact he has gained his terrible reputation through his appearance. Men and animals have been frightened by him without reason.

Specimens have been received from time to time in the East, by zoological experts, and they have developed a considerable variety of opinion on the subject. Dr. Mitchell of Philadelphia declared some years ago that the monster was venomous, But Dr. Yarrow, an eminent scientist, formerly curator of reptiles at the Smithsonian Institution, afterwards positively declared that it was not venomous.

Dr. Stejneger, the present curator of reptiles at the Smithsonian Institution, recently made a careful examination of a Gila monster, which is known to science as heloderma horridum. The doctor also concluded that the heloderma was not venomous in the sense that the rattlesnake is. He thought that its bite might be occasionally poisonous as is that of a mouse or rat, but even this is doubted.

What everybody should be pleased to hear about the Gila monster is that it is very easily tamed. Dr. Stejneger averred that he had never met a more agreeable reptile in his life, and he has had a great deal of experience. It should certainly be a source of general satisfaction to know that a reptile which has commonly been regarded as extremely wicked, is in reality quite amiable.

MAKING A DWARF GROW.

Jesse Van Vleck Twenty-Eight Inches High, Aged Fourteen.

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

There is now some hope of cure in certain cases of arrested growth in children. The latest case of the kind is reported from Kansas City. A child in whom all development, mental and physical, had ceased for twelve years, has shown remarkable signs of improvement.

The disease which caused the trouble was sporadic cretinism, an affection of the thyroid gland of the neck. It is of a similar nature to goitre, the disease which produces the cretins of certain valleys of Switzerland and other parts of the world.

The Kansas City child is Jesse Van Vleck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Van Vleck, of No. 1708 East Eighth street, in that city. He was 13 years of age on April 20, and was then exactly 28½ inches tall, just about the height of an infant beginning to walk.

His father and mother are both people of good size. His father is 5 feet 9 inches high, and weighs 168 pounds, and his mother weighs 175 pounds. They have three other children, all of more than average size. Jesse's sister, aged 7, is twice as big as he is.

At his birth he was a fine baby, weighing twelve pounds. For a year and a half his growth was very satisfactory. At 2 years he weighed thirty-eight pounds.

Then his growth stopped. In fact, in his 13th year he weighed half a pound less than in his second. He was not ill. On the contrary, he was cheerful and uncomplaining. But his growth, both mental and physical, ceased absolutely.

A few weeks ago Dr. William Smith of Kansas City, who had taken an interest in Jesse Van Vleck, received a report of the Medico-Chirurgical Society of Scotland for 1893-4. It contained an account of a case similar to Jesse's.

A Scotch boy, suffering from sporadic cretinism was but 23½ inches tall at the age of 18 years. Dr. Thomson of the Edinburgh School of Medicine, began to treat him in December, 1892. He fed him with thyroid glands of healthy sheep and lambs. At the end of three months he had grown two inches, more than he had previously grown in seventeen years. In twelve months he grew four and three-eighths inches and showed signs of maturing in body and mind.

It was decided to try the same treatment with Jesse Van Vleck. The father went to the big packing-house in Kansas City and explained why he wanted thyroid glands. It appears that it was customary to throw them away with the hide, and the manager willingly gave him all he wanted.

On a Friday the gland was first given to Jesse Van Vleck. It was cut up and mixed with potatoes, and he ate it cheerfully. On the following Sunday, according to the report, he was uneasy, complained of pains, was cross and finally put to bed. All these symptoms were unusual with him. They were regarded by the delighted parents as growing pains.

On Monday he was well and very playful. He shouted with glee and performed feats of agility. Thenceforth the early improvement in his condition continued.

The parent think the child has already begun to grow, but there is no reliable evidence on this point. His measurements have been taken by the doctors and will be compared at regular periods in future.

HINTS ON KEEPING COOL.

What Drinks Are Agreeable and Least Heating.

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

How to keep cool is a question which will now occupy the public mind almost to the exclusion of everything else.

A German scientist, Dr. Von Bebber, has just shed valuable light on the subject of clothing. He has ascertained how much heat the average man derives from his clothing in cool weather. When the outside temperature is 50 deg. Fahrenheit, the temperature on the coat is 71.2 deg.; between the coat and the waistcoat, 73.6 deg.; between waistcoat and shirt, 75.9 deg.; between shirt and undershirt, 77.4 deg., and between the woolen undershirt and the skin, 90.9 deg.

Clothing is, therefore, responsible for more than 40 deg. of the temperature next to the body. Each layer adds considerable to the temperature. The lesson of this for hot weather is that it is well to wear as few layers as possible. The temperature of the body being necessarily high, it is desirable to give the heat a chance to get away. The most suitable dress for a man who made no violent exertion would be a covering of cotton.

The advice concerning clothing may be put very brief. Wear as little as custom will permit. Of course, if the temperature suddenly drops forty degrees you must run home and put on more clothing as quickly as possible. Otherwise you may die.

Many wise men say that the only thing to do with drink in the hot weather is to leave it alone. It is undoubtedly true that most drinks tend to make one warmer and to perspire freely. But there is another side to the question. The quenching of thirst is a very beautiful sensation. Is it not worth enduring a little extra heat and perspiration to enjoy this simple, natural pleasure?

If we take this view, the problem is to select the drink which shall give the most cooling and agreeable sensation and produce the least heat.

According to eminent authorities on alcohol, beer is one of the most heating of drinks. The hops are said to be responsible for this. A little whisky or other spirit is better than any beer, but much whisky is worse than much beer. A large glassful of mineral water and ice, and very little whisky is a pretty safe beverage.

Claret punch is a cool and pleasant drink, and it is worth while knowing how to make it. "Take a pint of claret," says a bartender, "and pour it into a glass pitcher half filled with cracked ice. Put in just enough sugar to sweeten a little, and add the juice of a lemon. Then when you serve it top off each glass with a slice each of orange, pineapple and lemon, as well as a few strawberries."

The Tom Collins is a drink that should not be forgotten in these days. It is composed of gin, lemon juice and bottled soda water. Gin is believed to be one of the most wholesome of spirits, and lemonade is good for the average stomach in this weather.

In the matter of eating, remember that meat is heating and should be used in great moderation. Cold meat is difficult to digest, and there is little to be gained by taking it in preference to hot.

THE DOCTOR OF THE BONES.

One of the Famous Characters of Northeast Missouri.

Written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Riding or walking out towards the West End, along Olive street, the sign continually confronts you:

OSTEOPATHY.

Now, what do you know about osteopathy? Did you ever hear of it before you saw those cabalistic letters out on Olive street?

I guess not. If I were permitted to interpret your thoughts I would say that you never gave the matter passing attention.

And yet, up in Northeast Missouri the subject is one which has torn parties asunder and left to the mercies of the voters an amount of sentiment which, in this town, would build a city hall.

Osteopathy is supposed to be some sort of science connected with the bones and the person who practices it is alleged to be a doctor of bones.

The author and director of this science is a man who lives at Kirksville, away up in Adair County. He has grown rich by reason of his knowledge and while his community hesitated long before commending him, it did eventually commend him and helped to build for him a hospital, which is rightfully the envy of the State.

One pretty morning last winter I drove out to the "Osteopathy Sanitarium." I met there a thin, raw-boned man, clad in gray jeans, engaged in the business of superintending the erection of the new hospital. He had with him a son, who was at least of age, and he took pride in the supervision of every detail relating to his new sanitarium.

"I am a Virginian," he said, "with all the prejudices and energies of a native of that State. When the war began I chanced to be living out in Kansas, and so fell in with the interests of that commonwealth. I suppose if I had been living in Virginia I would have been a rebel, since I believe firmly and sincerely in State's rights.

"Anyway, I went with my State and became a Federal soldier. Of course that is all past now and I have nothing whatever to say on that point."

Here the doctor stepped to the electric light machinery and said:

"I would much prefer to talk to you about osteopathy. I maintain that nearly all the diseases to which human flesh is heir is due to some dislocation or misplacement of the bone. For instance, I touch a button here and cut off a connection there. What is the result? The power ceases or is changed and there comes a light which is insufficient or disappointing. Now, suppose you come to me with a disease of some kind. I have only to turn on all the batteries of the electric light of science to show in a minute what the trouble is.

"Let us look at this matter a moment. We have here all the machinery of the human organism. Suppose we cut some of it off. In an instant you have the gout. In the flash of an eye you are seized with rheumatism. What caused it? What is the reason your health is not magnificent?

"The whole thing results from the fact that I have stopped the flow of electricity, or else permitted it to percolate so slowly and irregularly that it does not accomplish the designs of Providence.

"You have, then, what we call a disease of the bones, or osteopathy in its aggravated form. Now, what is the cure? It stands to reason that the way to restore health is to ascertain the causes of ill-health and return by that route. You have discovered that by cutting off the electricity of the body, disease ensues. The next thing to do is to turn on all the power of the batteries and let nature restore itself. Isn't that right?"

So saying, the Doctor stepped to the electric light battery and turned on all the power of his new hospital.

"There," said he, "you have an illustration of the wonders of my science. All I undertake to do is to start up the battery again. Say that you have dyspepsia. Very well; I touch a button and the gastric juices begin to flow again as though nothing had ever happened. Say that you have rheumatism. I press that portion of the anatomy from which that disease emanates and immediately there is rest and peace.

"I maintain that the question of maternity has given to women more sorrow and anguish than they are entitled to. Maternity is natural. It is one of those things which we cannot escape; and the only reason we suffer from it is because we know so little about it. Turn on all the electricity of the bones and you will hear no more of such trouble.

"I am a civil engineer by trade, if you choose to call my business thus. I know a vast deal about locomotive engines, and I have studied long and deeply over the human system. That which we call life is only a perfected form of that energy which we undertake to put into dull steel and iron. But from that effort the fact is culled that electricity is the basis of life, and the bones are the conductors through which this energy is passed. That is all there is to my science."

The people of Kirksville received this new dispensation several years ago with a large amount of allowance. They found that the "bone doctor" gave no medicine, and that if he accomplished no good he at least did no harm. He received patients from all over the State and from adjacent States, and to each of them he either gave instant relief or declared that he had no relief to give. So he was not a humbug, and the town concluded it was a good idea to stand by him.

The result is that one section of the pretty little town of Kirksville is now entirely devoted to new boarding-houses and hotels and sanitariums, and it is estimated that the income to the city is worth at least [illegible] a year.

His View of the Case.

From the Indianapolis Journal.

"If I," said Mr Hoolighan, as he smote a cockroach with the bar towel, "If I was to kick on baseball and bicyclin' 'cause it interferes wit' my business, which everybody knows it does, dey would be onto me like a thousand of brick. But w'en dese preachers kicks about anyt'ing 'at interferes wid dere business, de whole community backs 'em good an' strong. Business men don't get no show dese days, anyhow."

THE GROWTH OF SPIRITUALISM.

Capt. E. W. Gould Declares It an Ancient Philosophy.

TAUGHT SINCE 1500 B. C.

Obscured for Centuries It Is Now in Full Evidence Again—Seances at Church Members' Homes.

(Capt. E. W. Gould, one of the most widely known investigators of spiritualism in St. Louis contributes the following paper on the subject to the Sunday Post-Dispatch. It will be found decidedly interesting.)

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

When your reporter called at my house to ask me to supplement some remarks upon the subject of spiritualism from Judge T. J. Portis, published in the Post-Dispatch of May 26, I was glad to see him. I considered it good evidence that an honest spirit of inquiry had at last been developed in the minds of at least a part of the public.

And I said to him: "If I can add anything of interest to what Judge Portis has said it will afford me pleasure to contribute whatever I can to enlighten the public mind, and advance the cause, always sacred to me.

"But it will be necessary for me," he continued," to reread the article referred to, and learn more definitely what ground the Judge has covered, and see what remains for me to say, that will be of interest to your readers."

"Well, I have done that, and it is probably fortunate that I did, for there really is, after reading his exhaustive and well considered remarks, but little that remains to be said, unless it is in answer to any questions in the minds of those who are seeking truth as embraced in spiritual philosophy.

There are many questions of fact, in regard to the revival and spread of this ancient spiritual teaching, now known as modern spiritualism, that are not known or understood by many of your readers, and I may interest them, if I cannot educate them, in this direction.

All that is known or taught of importance in spiritualism to-day, was known and taught fifteen hundred years before the time of Jesus of Nazareth, and all the way down to his time, and a few years later, by his disciples, after whichi it was obscured and lost sight of, through wars, persecution, jealousy and anarchy.

"Some writers claim that the teachings of Confucius, Buddha and other ancient seers nad mediums have never been lost sight of, but are still adhered to in the far East. But the evidence of the revival of these teachings and practices to Western nations, appeared about the time of John Wesley, Swedenborg and others, culminating at Hydeville, in 1848, in what is known as the 'Rochester Rappings.'

With all the effort that has been made to explain these phenomena upon any basis except the one claimed to be its source, whether by ridicule, fraud or necromancy, there are now known to be in this country alone several millions of persons from all classes, including scientists, theologians, professors and scholars, of every class and denomination, who have accepted these manifestations as not only real, but natural, and simply the revival of teachings and phenomena taught in the Bible centuries before the Christian era.

In a short article published in the Sunday Post-Dispatch of May 26, in which I attempted to show my esteemed friend, Dr. Snyder, that Spiritualists had not only the evidence of their own senses, but they had the evidence of many members of psychical research societies, both in this country and in Europe, composed of some of the best thinkers, writers and professional men and women of this age, to confirm their opinions. And with the hope of encouraging the Doctor to renew his investigations I even named many prominent persons and quoted the declarations of some of the nobility and best-known writers on both continents, showing their faith in and knowledge of spiritualism. And yet the Doctor is not willing to admit he has ever seen any manifestations sufficient to convince him or that were equal to what his friends, the Kellars, are capable of doing and have done in his presence.

He says he thinks he is open to conviction and has no prejudices against the phenomena, and concludes with this significant declaration: "Once for all, let me say I am anxious and willing to see the belief of thousands of my fellow-citizens at its best. I want to know the truth, no matter what modifications it may work in my own beliefs. I have no predisposition against spiritualism."

The Doctor says I did not understand what he said about spiritualism in a previous communication. I have quoted sufficiently now, I think, for all to understand his position. And while he admits he has been "unfortunate" in his previous investigations, I am glad to add, from the standpoint of a Spiritualist, that if he will continue his investigations with the same zeal and honesty of purpose he would any other subject of as much importance, his name, as a convert, will soon be numbered among the thousands in literary circles and in the world of liberal thought now cropping out so rapidly in all parts of the world, dating principally since the development of modern spiritualism in 1848.

While it is not claimed that all the new inventions, scientific developments in ethics and advanced thought are, or should be, attributed to the power of spiritualism, it may be considered a remarkable coincidence that so many important events, all looking to the education and elevation of the race, through free thought and the adoption of liberal ideas of progress in the cause of humanity and religion, should bear date coincident with modern spiritualism.

Evidence that this new phase of religion is rapidly advancing and extending its influence more widely than any other heretofore introduced is seen from all directions. Going back, the hanging of mediums in Salem, Mass., as witches, and, coming down to the present time, a marked and radical change is apparent in every decade. Only a few years since it was hardly safe to hold a spiritual seance except in obscure places and behind bolted doors. Such a thing as a public seance was not thought of. Now, when a popular medium is announced, the largest halls or theaters are necessary to accommodate the audiences that flock to them and listen with bated breath for some word of recognition from the spirit side of life, and they often remain spellbound for hours.

Private seances are now often held in the homes of church members who have learned that their departed friends can and will meet them, when proper conditions are furnished. But not having the courage to withstand the obloquy that may be visited upon them by their brethren, they yet seek the privacy of their own homes, although it has been but a few years since the idea of a spiritual medium visiting them would have been denounced with scorn.

The Eastern States are now honeycombed with spiritual societies, and in Boston, only fifteen miles from Salem, where the mediums were hung as witches less than 100 years ago, there are ten or twelve flourishing societies.

The West is feeling an influence it cannot resist, and in all the principal cities and towns Spiritualism is being recognized as a factor in many phases of moral reforms.

There are now over 500 societies in the United States and 1,200 qualified mediums and lecturers to administer "spiritual gifts."

There are now published over fifty newspapers, devoted exclusively to this cause; many magazines, and more books than are necessary or can be readily sold.

It is but a short time since when secular newspapers declined to report and publish the proceedings of spiritual seances and lectures, or, if they did, it was only to misrepresent and ridicule them. Now it is not an uncommon thing to see in many of the more advanced and liberal daily papers extended reports and intelligent criticisms.

One of the New York daily papers has a contract with one of the spiritual societies to devote two columns to spiritual matter, to be furnished by the society, in each of its Sunday issues.

There is yet much that is crude and misunderstood in spiritual phenomena, and until this fact is recognized, and intelligent, honest remedies applied, it cannot be expected that all attempts at spirit manifestations will be satisfactory, especially to those who are investigating, expecting fraud, and for criticism.

Perhaps this should not be considered remarkable when we realize that no immediate change occurs in the character or taste of the individual when passing from this to spirit life. So far as is known there is no law by which one spirit can hold correspondence with those in earth life; that any other spirit has not the power of doing if they can get "en rapport" with those in mortal life through the magnetism of forces that are employed.

Hence all are liable to be imposed upon or deceived by living or "obsessing" spirits.

The injunction of St. Paul "to tog the spirits" shows that even they were not exempt from the same annoyances we are some times subject to. But when the law of spirit communion is better understood there will not be so many charges of fraud or opportunities for deception.

While all spiritualists recognize the phenomena as the test of the theory, the foundation upon which the philosophy rests and give it precedence over all other forms of liberal church teachings of to-day, these tests that are so anxiously sought and so highly prized by all investigators are but the rudimental lessons to the sincere and advanced spiritualist.

The philosophy that follows and results in the development of a pure, unselfish life, a higher and a clearer conception of the duties and objects of life and a realization of the intimate relation existing between this life and the next, confirmed by oft-repeated messages from dear friends in spirit life is what spiritualism of to-day has to offer to all investigators for spiritual truths.

SINGLE TAX COLUMN.

How They Do It in New York.

Franchises are sold in New York and there is an interesting contest on for the privilege of occupying several miles of streets in that city. One company has made an offer of a lump sum of $100,000, in addition to all percentages and other payments the holders of the franchise will have to make to the city. Another company company says it will offer $250,000. So it goes. Everywhere progress in the treatment of these public franchises seems to be making except in this boss-ridden town. When will the people wake up?

The Faith That Inspires.

Henry George contributes to the late issue of the Single Tax Courier a lengthy sketch of the life and single tax labors of the late Wm. Saunders of England, member of Parliament and ex-member of the London County Council, who died early in May. It is a beautiful and touching tribute to the memory of a valiant worker on British soil. Mr. George closes his article as follows: "I made his (Saunders') acquaintance when he came to greet me on my first visit to London, in 1881. Since then there has always been a warm bond of friendship between us. I had expected to meet him again ere long on one side of the Atlantic or the other. But I am not the less confident that we shall meet again, though neither in England or in America. What he had in mind yet to do will not be done by him, but what he did do remains and others will arise in his place. The good cause goes on."

To Capture Delaware.

Jackson H. Ralston of Hyattsville, Md., single tax fame, attorney, Washington, D. C., recently wrote a strong article to the Single Tax Courier advocating the concentration of single tax strength on Delaware, with a view to its capture for the good cause. He cited the fact that there is no constitutional bar to the enactment of the single tax in that little State of "two counties when the tide is in and three when the tide is out," as the Globe-Democrat put it the other day, and it being located in the rich manufacturing region with a population chiefly made up of the more intelligent class of people, principally expert mechanics and tradesmen, it offers a splendid opportunity for effective propaganda and political work. Once we capture a State the wedge of single taxism will have been driven far enough into the log of customary conservatism to split it wide open without much further effort. Since Mr. Ralston's article appeared many responses from far and near have been received by the Courier, all, with one exception, favorable to the undertaking, and nearly all containing promises of substantial assistance.

The Single Tax League.

At the last meeting it was voted to unite with the Single Tax Question Club in a three-months' outdoor propaganda campaign, commencing in the near future. Open air meetings will be held once a week at some point in the city to be selected beforehand. The membership of the league is growing rapidly and an auspicious revival of enthusiasm and determination seems to pervade the rank and file.

The league meets again Wednesday evening, 301 Fagin Building.

"How to Catch Fish Without Bait."

One of our good workers and a member of the Catholic Church, and who believes the Sabbath was made for man rather than man for the Sabbath, went up the road fishing last Sunday. On the train he took a bunch of the circulars, a few thousand of which were recently distributed in this city, "The Single Tax From a Business Standpoint," and standing up loudly proclaimed he had some receipts for catching fish without bait and proposed passing them around. He did so and states that with one exception all were carefully read and then folded up and pocketed. At the depot inquiry was made of five men as to their standing in the single tax and four of them were believers.

Another Preacher Says Something.

President W. G. Ballantine of Oberlin College, in a sermon at Cincinnati a few Sundays ago, and reported by the Enquirer, said some things that place him in direct line of ascent from "mossback conservatism" to single tax rationalism. For all one knows, from the report at hand, the transition may have already taken place, because it is becoming very fashionable, nowadays, for preachers, priests and professors to take up this modern "cross of a new crusade" and carry it aloft as an alchemiac symbol whereby the divine spark within the human breast may be fanned into a blaze of intelligence and the baser instincts overcome.

The gentleman chose as his text the scriptural quotation, "For unto everyone that hath, it shall be given," and among other things, said:

The lion held in fee simple his den, the tiger his lair, but among mankind no limit could well be defined as to what might be possessed. Every man born to whatsoever station in life, is born a King, and has the Divine right to hold sway so far as his powers possess him. When God gives he gives not niggardly, and we have not as yet learned the alphabet of our possessions. There is wealth beyond our knowledge in this world of ours, and we are to use it, not like John the Baptist, who, with girded loins, lived on locusts and wild honey, but should, every mother's son of us, have a silver spoon in our mouths. The richest man was found to be the one who stood in the strongest circle of loving hearts. It was necessary, he said, to stir up among people an ambition to possess. A lack of this propensity, Dr. Ballantine held to be the curse of the nation.

If a few big over-fed lions and tigers should have been endowed with those marvellous instincts attributable only to our modern landlords—that of being able to detect the smell of a bargain in vacant land ten years in advance of ordinary mortals, they would have seized all of the unused dens and lairs, as well as the surrounding jungles and feeding grounds, and made all the other animal kingdom pay them tribute for the privilege of living and prowling.

The word "possess" is apparently used with knowledge aforethought. It is good. Single taxers are sticklers for it as giving exact definiteness to land tenure.

The only just powers man may sway are those of fitness, as acquired by moral training and education. The powers of cunning combined with physical attributes—in other words, the powers of "might" have no standing in the arena of justice, only right secures a hearing there.

Ambition to possess knowledge, yes; ambition to possess a home where every "King" may sit "under his own vine and fig tree," yes; ambition to learn the good and the bad of this earthly career and how to discriminate between them and profit thereby, yes; how to become rich, in the sense pointed out by the doctor himself, near the end of the quotation from him, yes. Ambition to appropriate the products of other men's toil through unjust legal forms of land tenure by which the many are compelled to pay the few for the privilege of living on the earth; ambition to own and control those giant semi-public institutions of commerce and trade, called railroads and telegraphs, and by watering the stock to an indefinite extent rob the myriads of men who perform the services of their just compensation and swell private fortunes to abnormal proportions; ambition to corner markets and control the currency of the nation, and ambition to cultivate those powers of adriotness and baser instincts of the mere earth-earthy man in order to more cleverly accomplish the ends desired, no, emphatically no.

The single tax principles embodies the sentiments contained in the first, the principles of those who seek to continue things as they are embodies the last. Which side are you on, dear reader?

L. P. C.

The Manufacturers' Association and the Single Tax League.

A movement is on foot to have a committee of the Single Tax League meet with the St. Louis Manufacturers' Association to discuss the question of taxation from the merchants' and manufacturers' standpoint.

Delivered an Address.

Rabbi Sale spoke at Mascoutah, Ill., last Monday evening to a good audience, although it was a stormy night.

Sing Me a Ringing Anthem.

Sing me a ringing anthem
Of the deeds of the ringing past,
When the Norseman brave dared the treacherous wave
And laughed at the icy blast.

And fill me a brimming beaker
Of the rich Burgundian wine,
That the chill of years with its chain of tears
May unbind from this breast of mine.

For working and watching and waiting
Make the blood run sluggish and cold,
And I long for the fire and the fierce desire
That burned in the hearts of old.

I can dream of the fountains plashing,
In the soft, still summer's night,
And of smothered sighs and woman's eyes
And ripe lips, ruddy and bright.

But better the tempest's fury
With its thunders and howling wind,
And better to dare what the future may bear
Than to muse on what lies behind.

Then chant me no tender love song,
With its sweet and low refrain,
But sing of the men of the sword and the pen,
Whose deeds may be done again.

DANIEL O'CONNELL.

A Lover's Choice
"Ah, would that it were always May"
The poet sadly cries;—
But—heaven be praised—what poets say
Does not control the skies.
Move on, fair month—all sweet thy worth
And rich in flower and fruit;
But written on the rose's heart
Are dreams of bridal June.

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

Common Ailments Which May Be Safely Treated at Home by Sufferers.

Will you please print some advice concerning sunstroke, the preventive and remedial measures?

There is always danger of sunstroke during hot and "muggy" days; predisposing causes of sunstroke are loss of sleep, excitement, abuse of stimulants and poorly ventilated sleeping rooms. People who are exposed to the sun are always liable to an attack, although persons who work in such places as laundries and other establishments where artificial heat is used are sometimes overcome. When exposed to the sun a light hat (light both in weight and color) should be worn; black absorbs the heat. A wet cloth, sponge or green leaf may be worn inside of the hat as a safeguard. Great care should be taken between the hours of 12 m. and 3 p. m., as the danger of sunstroke is always greatest during those hours.

Upon the approach of a feeling of exhaustion, faintness, fatigue and headache, lie down at once in a cool, shady place and apply cloths wrung out of cold water to the head and neck. A person who is overcome by the heat should be removed at once to a shady place and the collar of the shirt, straps and waistbands be loosened. Cool drinks of water should be given and a doctor sent for at once. If the person is very faint, he or she should be laid upon the back and given a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a little cold water. Do not apply cold water to the body, but rub the hands and feet until the circulation has been restored. When the skin is dry and hot, the person should be placed against a wall or other support (in a sitting posture), cold water poured over the body and ice applied to the head.

Please tell me is it dangerous to have the tonsils cut off?

The operation is not dangerous when performed by a skilful surgeon.

M. H. R.—The itching may be relieved by applying a solution composed of ten grains of menthol, ten grains of camphor and one ounce of liquid albolene.

Kindly tell me the ingredients of "gray powder." You suggest it for a bilious attack.

The powder is composed of mercury and chalk.

Is salicylate of soda good as a remedy for gout? How should it be used?

Yes. The drug should be taken in doses of ten grains in water every three hours.

C. H. B.—Consult the Physicians' Register. The address and office hours of a physician cannot be given in this column.

Will you please tell me what to take for stomach and intestinal indigestion?

Take a tablet containing two grains of pure pepsin and three grains of pancreatine after each meal.

Kindly suggest a remedy for an occasional attack of neuralgic toothache.

Phenacetine may be used with good effect. Take five grains every three hours.

Can you tell me of a substance that may be rubbed into the skin for fattening?

Cod-liver oil, cocoa butter, cocoanut oil and sweet oil may be used for that purpose.

Kindly tell me what I may use with safety to wash an ear that discharges somewhat.

Use a warm saturated solution of boric acid with an ear syringe several times a day.

Will you kindly inform me what to add to milk that is used as infant's food to prevant it curdling in the stomach?

Add a little bicarbonate of soda or some milk of magnesia.

Will you kindly publish the name of the colorless and watery looking preparation that is used for bleaching the hair?

Peroxide of hydrogen.

I have a distressed feeling after eating, accompanied by a desire to belch up gas and a sour fluid. Will you please print a remedy?

Take five drops of tincture of nux vomica in water before each meal and the powders of pepsin and bismuth as directed.

I am suffering from a very annoying case of barber's itch. Will you kindly tell me how to treat it.

Apply pure sulphurous (not sulphuric) acid twice a day.

Will you please tell me where I can obtain a book of rules (pharmacopoeia) for compounding medicines?

Any druggist can get one for you?

W. G., Warren, Pa.—The ringing in your ears is probably due to a catarrhal trouble. Consult a physician and have your throat, nose and ears carefully examined. You cannot treat yourself.

J. B. H.—I am troubled with lameness of the muscles in the back of my legs. Please suggest a remedy. Also tell me what to do for a bad taste in the mouth.

1. Try massage with mustard liniment or chloroform liniment.

2. Take a teaspoonful of pure sulphate of soda in a gobletful of hot water an hour before breakfast every morning.

A. H. G.—Will you kindly tell me what is meant by the term cyst, as used in surgical language?

A cyst is a cavity with liquid or semi-solid contents and surrounded by a capsule.

C. N. H.—Will you please name the best diet for one who has chronic catarrh of the stomach?

An exclusive milk diet.

E. S.—I have been troubled with indigestion and constipation for a long time. Will you please prescribe the proper remedies?

For the indigestion take a powder composed of two grains of pure pepsin and five grains of subnitrate of bismuth after each meal. You should avoid haste in eating and masticate your food thoroughly. For the constipation take pure sulphate of soda as directed above.

O. A. M.—I have a boy 14 years of age who had an attack of la grippe. He seems fairly well, but it has left him hoarse. Will you please give a remedy?

Try the compound tincture of benzoin. Take one teaspoonful to a pint of water, vaporize the mixture with a steam atomizer and let him inhale the vapor every hour or oftener.

R. C. M.—Take the pills of phosphide of zinc, nux vomica and iron as directed above.

C. M. H.—Kindly tell me of a remedy for chronic acidity of the stomach.

The tincture of kino is usually very beneficial. Take ten drops between meals.

SUBSCRIBER.—Kindly tell me how to develop the muscles of the arm.

Try dumb bells or Indian clubs.

To Be De-Appendicized.

From the Philadelphia Record.

Dr. Burt G. Wilder announces it to be the province of the musical expert "to improve the human body in the direction of the elimination of that death-trap, the appendix vermiformis." There can be no doubt that this curious process in our anatonomy is destined to disappear, if the testimony of man's contemporaneous evolution, aside from the Darwinian evolution, may be believed. Why should not the doctors help the stages of disappearance along? The only mammals near man which are cursed with an appendix are the four tailless anthropoid apes. Man has lost his prehensile tail of preadamite existence, and it is high time that he should get rid of this dangerous little reminiscence of an inferior animal state. It is a relic, like the useless muscles of man's ears, of pre-existent utility, but its only ambition now seems to be to lie in wait for reckless seeds. In some future generation babies may be "de-appendicized" as well as vaccinated.

Johnny Had the Third.

From Tid-Bits.

"Father," said a young hopeful the other day, "how many fowls are there on this table?"

"Why," said the old gentleman as he looked complacently on a pair of nicely roasted chickens that were smoking on the table, "there are two."

"Two!" replied the smart boy. "There are three, sir, and I'll prove it."

"Three!" replied the old gentleman, who was a plain, matter of fact man. "I'd like to see you prove it."

"Easily done, easily done. Is not that one?" said the smart boy, laying his knife on the first; "and that two?" pointing to the second; "and do not one and two make three?"

"Really," said the father, turning to his wife, who was stupefied at the immense learning of the son; "really this boy is a genius and deserves to be encouraged," and then, to show that there's fun in old folks as well as in young ones, he added: "Wife, do you take one fowl and I'll take the second and John may have the third for his learning."

A Model Husband.

From the French.

Friend Perrichon, accompanied by his wife, took a trip to the outskirts of Paris. Very tired and hungry they entered an eating-house. The proprietor declared that he had nothing but a chop to offer them. "Only one!" exclaimed Perrichon; "then, what is my wife to have?"
